CANADIANS CAPTURE DIEPPE

Famous French City Captured Without Fighting

Americans Expect To Reach German Border Tonight

London, Sept. 1 —(CP)— The Canadians have captured Dieppe without fighting, a Reuter cable from France reported tonight.

London, Sept. 1 —(CP)— The United Nations radio at Algiers today quoted a "last-minute dispatch" saying Dieppe had been captured without opposition.

AMERICANS BEYOND VERDUN.

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Sept. 1 —(AP)— The U. S. 3rd Army swept through and beyond the French fortress city of Verdun today in a landslide offensive which if continued at its present pace promised to carry over into an invasion of Germany's frontiers before nightfall.

Behind the channel rocket coast, Field Marshal Montgomery's tank forces, which had burst forward 80 miles in three days, poured toward Belgium's Flanders Fields only 45 miles distant, and approached the back door of Calais.

Parallels Coast Line.

Montgomery's spearhead paralleled the channel coast for 100 miles and threatened to hammer out for the second time in this war a giant trap around Calais and Dunkirk—this time with Germans in it. The British forces were only 70 miles south of Calais.

To reach Verdun, American forces advanced 65 miles in less than 24 hours—a pace which left headquarters communique lagging many hours behind actual movements.

On a 70-mile front Americans had stabbed to or across the Belgium border in the vicinity of historic Sedan, reached to within 49 miles of the German frontier at Verdun and in an eastward thrust through St. Dizier to Commercy had advanced to within 58 miles of Germany's Saar.

They had crossed at a jump the the Argonne Forest and the Meuse and driven past some of the most important works of the old French Maginot line.

Threaten Whole Coast.

British forces, theatening the whole rocket coast of France, were across the Somme River on a 12-mile front at Amiens and had pushed north to Mailly, half-way to Arras, in a drive which placed them within 45 miles of Belgium and 65 miles of Dunkerque.

Canadian forces were north of Rouen within 15 miles of Dieppe. Canadian, Belgian and Dutch troops fought their way 17 miles west of Rouen to within 10 miles of Le Havre.

Moving so swiftly that official information here lagged far behind developments, a mighty arc formed by the U.S. 3rd and 1st Armies also swept to or across the border of Belgium in the vicinity of Sedan.

Verdun fell yesterday to 3rd Army troops who advanced 65 miles from Reims in less than 24 hours. The swift stab directly through the Argonne Forest where Americans fought and died in 1918 carried across the Meuse River to the rear of the old Maginot line.

Another column, advancing from St. Dizier, captured Commercy, on the Meuse river ten miles south of famed St. Mihiel and 38 miles west of Nancy.

Front dispatches last night said U.S. 1st Army Forces had penetrated Sedan, five miles from Belgium.

In Flight Everywhere.

"The battle of France is all but over," wrote Associated Press War Correspondent William Smith White, "what is developing now is the beginning of the battle for Germany."

To the west along the coast of France, Field Marshal Montgomery's 21st Army group, now in high gear, rolled up the buzz-bomb belt at a mile-an-hour rate and captured General Eberbach—at breakfats—in a final ignominy to the broken German 7th Army he commanded.

The escape gap for the guarding of the flying bomb sites in the Le Havre sector was narrowed to 20 miles by a British plunge to within 30 miles of Abbeville. Through this funnel the Germans were in flight for flanders.

On the southernmost American flank a 20-mile advance east of Troyes carried to Bar sur Seine within 160 miles of a link-up with spearheads of the 7th Army driving up through Southern France.

Headquarters had no late information on battlefront positions in the Sedan gap, but the Belgian government in London ordered its red, yellow and black national flags raised at its headquarters this morning in salute to arrival of the Americans at the frontier and the bright promise of liberation.

In a fan-out north of Paris, the left flank of the American 1st Army shot patrols within a mile o Compiegne, 43 miles from the French capital. These reconnaissance forces presumably went along the main road, by-passing the historic forest where the armistices of 1918 and 1940 were signed.

As the Germans fell back a statement by Gen. Eisenhower that "three German field marshals and one army commander have been either dismissed or incapacitated by wounds" implied confirmation of reports that Field Marshal Guenther Von Kluge had been replaced as enemy commander-in-chief in the west.

The other two German field marshals are Karl Rudolf Gerd Von Rundstedt, Von Kluge's ousted predecessor, and Erwin Rommel, reported severely wounded.

AT GATES OF ZAGREB

London, Sept. 1—(CP)—Marshal Tito's partisan troops are operating at the gates of Zagreb and capture of this capital of the Germans' puppet Croat state is expected shortly, according to a broadcast today from the Free Yugoslav radio.

Wounded in 72 Places, Pilot Sinks Submarine, Awarded Victoria Cross

London, Sept. 1—(CP Cable)—Flying Officer John Alexander Cruickshank, of Aberdeen, a young R. A. F. pilot who trained at Toronto, has been awarded the Victoria Cross for pressing home an attack on an enemy submarine after he had been wounded in 72 places, his navigator and bomb aimer had been killed, and the second pilot and two other crew members injured.

"His determination, fortitude and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the service," the citation said today.

Pilot and captain of a Catalina Flying Boat, Cruickshank released the depth charges on to the submarine himself when his navigator and bomb aimer both lay dead, and carried on for five and a half hours, refusing relief from morphia until he had assured himself his aircraft could be landed safely at a home base.

The aircraft was hit when he made the first run over the target, and the depth charges refused to release. Knowing he no longer had the advantage of surprise, Cruickshank nevertheless made a second run, straddled the sub and saw it sink. Among his wounds were two serious injuries to the lungs and 10 penetrating wounds in the lower legs.

The award to FO. Cruickshank brings to 97 the total of men given the Empire's highest gallantry award since the outbreak of war, and to 20 the number of V. C.'s won by airmen of this war.

SUPPLY DEPOTS FOR LONG-RANGE GUNS POUNDED

TROOPS STRAFED

London, Sept. 1 —(CP)— British four-engined Halifax bombers battered German long-range weapon supply depots in Northern France today without loss while American medium bombers assaulted German strongpoints in besieged Brittany at the port of Brest.

The attack on the Brittany targets was made at the request of Lt.-Gen. Bradley, whose troops then began an all-out assault to free the prized Atlantic harbor of elements of three enemy divisions.

This attack on gun positions, motor parks and two forts on the edge of Brest was only one of numerous operations by Allied planes based in Britain and France as the return of good flying weather enabled them to bomb and strafe the foe at many points.

British medium bombers hit German troops concentrated near Abbeville and in danger of being cut off by the British advance across the Somme.

Wave after wave of Allied warplanes thundered out from Britain continuing the aerial pressure maintained last night by R. A. F. Mosquitos. The Berlin radio said enemy bomber formations were approaching Germany at mid-day.

The woods in which the Germans tried to hide near Abbeville failed to protect them, and the R. A. F. crews watched their bombs burst across the centre of the target area. One bomber was lost.

Dusseldorf was the principal target for block-buster-carrying Mosquitos last night. Other Mosquitos stabbed at undisclosed objectives in Germany, and ranged over Northern France pounding transport and supply ahead of the advancing Allied troops.

The weather grounded fighter-bombers early yesterday while bombers blasted such targets as fuel dumps, flying sites and guns on the island of Cezembre at the mouth of St. Malo harbor.

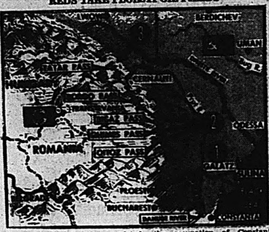
R. A. F. fighter-bombers and rocket-firing planes flew nearly 1,000 sorties, destroying or damaging more than 400 motor vehicles, eight tanks, 63 railroad cars and 13 locomotives.

In all operations yesterday and last night only eight Allied planes were lost.

Nazis May Leave Denmark, Norway Without Fight

New York, Sept. 1 —(AP)— National Broadcasting Company's reporter Bjorn Bjornson speaking from Stockholm, said this morning that the Germans may evacuate Denmark and Norway without fight. Already large troop movements are reported and German language papers such as the "Neues Wiener Tagblatt" are no more speaking of fortress Europe, "they have changed already to fortress Germany."

REDS TAKE PLOESTI OIL FIELDS



Soviet forces, having completed the occupation of Constanta, Hitler's last port on the Black Sea, have continued their drive and now occupy the Ploesti oil fields. Powerful Red army units are pushing through the Carpathian passes, (2) in the drive on Transylvania and Romania, to the north; (3) other units are swarming into Hungary.

ALLIES MEETING HEAVY OPPOSITION NORTH OF FOGLIA

PESARO NOT TAKEN

By GEORGE BRIAN
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, Sept. 1 (AP)—British 8th Army troops have broken through the outer gothic line defence in northern Italy to a depth of 1,000 yards at one point but are meeting strong German resistance north of the Foglia river, where the Nazis have hurled in tanks in repeated counter-attacks, Allied headquarters announced today.

The 1,000-yard penetration was made west of Borgo Santa Maria, where the strongpoint of Montecchio was captured. Tank-supported infantry followed through and established themselves among the Nazi defences.

In Pesaro steady fighting was reported continuing between British and Polish troops and the German 1st parachute division—their old enemies of Cassino.

Pesaro now is divided between the Germans and the 8th Army, which is established along the railway line running through the town.

Key Point of Line Taken.

Monte Della Groce, described as one of the key points of the gothic line, was occupied Aug. 30 and 8th

'Monty' Made Field Marshal By King George

London, Sept. 1.—(CP) — Gen. Montgomery whom many consider Britain's best general and who is certainly her most spectacular field commander, last night, was appointed Field Marshal Supernumerary by King George.

The announcement of the appointment, effective tomorrow, came only a few hours after Gen. Eisenhower revealed that Lt.-Gen. Bradley had been given equal status with Gen. Montgomery as field commander of an army group. However, unofficial sources emphasized the Montgomery appointment had no connection with this and had been planned for some time as recognition for his "invaluable services to the Empire".

Neither will the appointment involve precedence in the field, these sources said.

The 56-year-old Gen. Montgomery, whose rise in fame began at El Alamein on the Western Desert late in 1942, and who at present is commander of the 21st Army Group which broke the German 7th Army in Northern France, becomes the 14th living British field marshal. Because army regulations specify there shall be only eight field marshals, he is officially listed as the latest of six supernumeraries who achieve full title when deaths create vacancies.

U.S. 3RD ARMY CAPTURES VERDUN IN LIGHT FIGHT

Plunge Beyond River Meuse in Pursuit of Retreating Germans

FAMOUS IN LAST WAR

By EDWARD D. BALL
(AP War Correspondent)

Verdun, Aug. 31, (Delayed.) (AP)—The U.S. 3rd Army captured immortal Verdun today and plunged on beyond the River Meuse in pursuit of the retreating Germans, who put up only a feeble fight in defence of the famed city around which fighting surged for three years in the First Great War.

Plunging along the old Roman Road, Lt.-Gen. Patton's troops advanced 65 miles from Reims in less than 24 hours, plunged through the Argonne Forest and liberated Verdun.

The enemy put up a brisk fight for a while. A number of buildings were hit and windows were shattered. Enemy guns fired from fortress-studded hills surrounding the town, but with each burst Allied dive bombers pounced on them.

Even while shells still were bursting the French populace flocked into the streets in a delirious welcome to the Americans.

Keystone of Maginot Line.

Fall of the city, one of the keystones of the Maginot Line on which France pinned her faith at the outset of the present conflict, placed the American spearheads less than 50 miles from the German frontier.

In their swift advance toward this famous battleground the Yanks swept eastward from Reims and stormed across the Meuse river at several points. Nowhere did they meet more than weak rear-guard resistance.

Purely for home front propaganda purposes, if for no other reason, Hitler's armies had been expected to make a fight of it at Verdun.

Today, however, the Nazis put up only a half-hearted defence, then fled. American casualties were light.

Only a few German prisoners were taken.

Caught Off Balance.

Lt.-Gen. Patton caught the Germans off balance just as he has done before by throwing his armor in one direction, then swerving suddenly in another. In this case he was driving northeast, then swung eastward from Reims.

In contrast to the fierce fighting of 1914-18 in which hundreds of thousands fought and died on the Argonne battlefield, hardly a shot was fired today.

The Argonne Forest was dark and silent. It still showed many signs of the First Great War. Trees were gnarled. Their tops were lopsided from shells which tore through their branches in 1918.

Reconnaissance elements sped through many towns familiar to thousands of veterans of that previous war.

There were no dead today. I did not see either an American or German casualty in the Argonne Forest.

100,000 CELEBRATE

Montreal, Sept. 1—(CP)— An estimated 100,000 Montrealers thronged Fletchers Field at the foot of Mount Royal last night to celebrate the liberation of Paris.

BULGARIAN GOVT., SEEKING EASY WAY OUT OF WAR, FALLS

CLOSE TURKISH BORDER

London, Sept. 1 —(CP)— The Bulgarian government of Ivan Bagrianov fell today shortly after its failure to win an easy way out of the war by pleading neutrality and amid indications of far-reaching internal developments within the Balkan kingdom.

Simultaneously it was disclosed that the European Advisory Committee had drafted armistice terms for Bulgaria—a demonstration of British - American - Russian solidarity on the terms which the Balkan satellite must meet to get out of the conflict. Russian armies were pushing along the country's northern frontier, ready to send tank columns coursing across her northern plains.

A Cairo dispatch said peace talks with Bulgarian emissaries were progressing favorably.

At the same time rumors spread throughout Europe that Hungary was trying to contact the Allies on armistice terms.

With Romania already out of the Axis line-up and negotiating in Moscow for terms on which she might join the Allies as a co-belligerent, Hitler's southeastern front thus appeared to be falling apart in three countries.

Campaign of Denial.

Berlin immediately launched a campaign of denials to contradict the rumors that Hungary was seeking a way out, but Budapest itself was silent. Reports reaching London from Turkey said Hungarians there had intimated that Budapest was seeking terms.

The Allied terms for Bulgaria were kept secret, inasmuch as they involve military operations. But it was regarded as certain that one condition would demand the withdrawal of all her troops to within her pre-war border and the return to Greece and Yugoslavia of Macedonia and Thrace, territories which she gained in a bargain with Hitler in 1941.

Removal of all Fascist elements from the Bulgarian government was likely to be another condition.

Bulgaria closed her border with Turkey as the Red army massed on her frontier in Romania. D.N.B., official German news agency, then said in a Berlin broadcast today that Bagrianov had announced resignation of his cabinet. He took office June 1.

Virtual Liberation of France Accomplished From a Beachhead

By CARL C. CRANMER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Gen. Eisenhower's armies have set a unique record in the field of military operations—the virtual liberation of France from a beachhead.

They have almost equalled the record of the Germans who in 1940 completed the conquest of France in 37 days.

Since the St. Lo break-through by Lt.-Gen. Bradley's forces July 25, the Allies in 37 days have almost over-run France, but they have not yet swept Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg into their bag as Hitler did in his famous blitzkrieg.

Probably the most astounding thing to the Germans, the feature which perhaps has upset their calculations more than anything else, is the fact that Allied spearheads have driven from Normandy, taken Paris and pushed almost to the German frontier itself from a beachhead.

There is yet no indication that any great amount of supplies for Eisenhower's armies are coming through ports. Cherbourg is the only large port held by the Allies, and demolitions to the harbor works there were extensive.

Marvelous engineering developments and supply management have made possible the powering of the great drives in progress today. It is a feat which Hitler, who ordered his garrisons to button themselves up in the ports of Le Havre, Brest, St. Nazaire and Lorient, apparently thought impossible.

This is the great contrast in the 1940 battle of France and the 1944 battle. For in 1940 Adolf Hitler had his land bases close to the frontier, his troops in their assigned positions, his mountains of supplies close to the front.

When he gave the word on May 10, he hit the Allies with terrific power all at once. Allied lines were shattered and all was over by June 17.

The Allies have been in France 88 days, counting today, but 51 days of that time were spent in the time-consuming process of winning, widening and building up their bridgehead for the offensive.

Armored Units 120 Mi. From Yugoslav-Romanian Frontier

Triumphal March Made Thru Bucharest After Seizure

(By DANIEL DELUCE)
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Sept. 1. (AP) Red Army flying columns, skirting the southern shoulder of the Transylvanian Alps after marching triumphantly through Bucharest, headed today in the direction of Serbia's northeastern Mountains, where Marshal Tito's Partisans are battling the common enemy.

A junction between Soviet and Jugoslav Partisan forces became a prospect of the near future as Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky's armored scouts approached within 120 miles of Yugoslav-Romanian frontier.

The German command was reported trying to organize a new defence line along the Olt river, which runs within 75 miles of Serbian territory.

Malinovsky threatened to cut this waterline at the southern entrance to Turnu Pass, possession of which would safeguard his right wing while he drove across the Danube plain to make contact with Tito.

Drive Rapidly Westward.

The Soviet leader's forces, which paraded past the rubble of German-bombed buildings in Bucharest yesterday, drove rapidly westward along the Bucharest-Craiova railway.

Front dispatches said the Germans were still in disorderly flight up the Danube Valley.

Bucharest's war-weary populace saw Malinovsky bare the mechanical power of his army. Huge self-propelled guns, squat and thickly-armored tanks and a seemingly endless stream of motorized and infantry crossed the city from end to end.

Bucharest later was reported returning to semi-normal conditions, with Romanian police directing civilian traffic while Red Army men with signal flags regulated the movement of their own vehicles.

Joint Sweep up Danube.

On the Black Sea coast south of Constanta Gen. Feodor I Tolbukhin's patrols ranged along the Romanian-Bulgarian frontier but the bulk of his 3rd Ukraine army was hastening on westward for a joint sweep up the Danube with Malinovsky.

Meanwhile on the northern end of the long front the first definite offensive success in the Warsaw sector in more than a week put the Russians less than 12 miles north of the pre-war Polish capital.

It was still too early to say whether the Russians would be able to sustain their attack in this sector, for it bristles with the strongest German concentrations anywhere on the eastern front.

PURSUING ALLIES ONLY FIFTY MILES FROM LYON CITY

Nazi Rear-Guard Resistance in Upper Rhone Valley Crumbling

FLEE IN DISORDER

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, Sept. 1. (AP)—Sharp attacks by tanks and infantry crumbled Nazi rear-guard resistance in the Upper Rhone Valley of Southern France today and the Germans fled northwest at top speed with the pursuing Allies less than 50 miles from the great City of Lyon.

Valence, 55 miles south of Lyon, fell at noon yesterday, Lt.-Gen. Patch's headquarters said. Le Bourg-Du-Pease, 11 miles to the northwest, capitulated earlier to Americans closing in from the east.

Apparently despairing of ever getting their 19th Army out of southern France as an intact fighting unit, the Nazi command has ordered its units "to return to Germany by their own resources", an official report said. Such an order was given by artillery personnel in the Nimes area, prisoners related.

From Narbonne a French flying column, in a sweep around southern France's Mediterranean coast, was reported thrusting to the Spanish border after shoving through Montpellier, Beziers and Narbonne —60 miles from the frontier—without meeting enemy resistance.

The 7th Army Command declared the situation remained "unchanged" on the Riviera, following American occupation of Nice.

In the Alpine regions along the French-Italian frontier farther north, however, the Americans entered the Village of Condamine Chatelard, which the Germans had burned in reprisal for patriot activities.

From the devastated village the Americans pushed along mountain highways and paths and made contact with enemy outposts just north west of nearby Lagache Pass on the Italian frontier, some 55 miles north-northwest of Nice.

RARE STONE FISH FOUND IN CREEK

A strange little fish, that has puzzled those supposed to be versed in piscatorial knowledge, has made its appearance in a creek on the farm of Lawrence Magee, Hay Bay.

It is about two inches long, has three sets of fins underneath, is somewhat spotted and has a very broad tail fin which tapers to a point. Fish hatchery experts believe the little fellow is the species called "stone fish".

It is now sojourning in a private aquarium in Picton, where its future will be watched.

MUSKIES NOT HITTING LIKE OTHER YEARS

While spasmodic good hauls of fish have been taken from the various grounds of the bay here, the general season run has not been anything to write long letters to the folks at home about, is the consensus of local fishermen.

The occasional big muskie has been foolish enough to take the bait but the poundage thus far falls short of that of other years.

However, local Izaak Waltons can take heart for latest reports from Fish Point at Northport bay state that the big fellows are beginning to pay more attention to lures than heretofore. Some big ones were caught in that vicinity this week.

Bass fishing in local waters is fair. Crabs and frogs seem to be the best bait.

PICTON

2 Large Estates Sold in Picton

Picton, Sept. 1—Sale of two estates here is announced both being intimately connected with the history of the town.

Castle Villeneuve, also known as Castle Inn, has been sold to Mrs. Fred Fowley who took possession today. This is a stately 20-room mansion, the original part built by Philip Low, Q.C., one of the early residents of the town. It is set in 10-acre wooded grounds on the Picton harbor. It will continue as a tourist home.

Rickarton Castle, a mile east of the Inn, on the Bay Shore, has also been sold, by the Hepburn family to A. Bruce of Toronto. It was originally a girls' school, being built by Anglican clerymen in 1867. It is modelled after Warwick Castle and the castle-like home is set in beautiful grounds. The sale was made by James deC. Hepburn M.P., whose brother, the late Brig.-General B. R. Hepburn, C.M.G., was the last of the Hepburn family to occupy it. Mr. Bruce is a well known yachtsman and plans to operate a high-class tourist resort.

Promoted.

Captain and Mrs. D. E. Strachan, officers-in-charge of the local Salvation Army, on Wednesday received word that they have received promotions to the ranks of Adjutant. This marks the completion of ten years' successful service.

Previous to coming to Picton, Adjutant and Mrs. Strachan were stationed at Goderich, Norwich, Dresden, Dunnville, Listowel and St. John, N.B., coming here from the latter place.

During their stay here, their work has met with marked success, there being growth in all departments. War work has been a feature with the local Red Shield having an especially fine record.

In November the local corps will celebrate its 60th anniversary here and plans are now being made to fittingly mark this event

Carnival

The Rotary Club's three-day carnival opened last night with a large attendance. In addition to the variety of games, there was an hour-long stage show presented by Garden Bros., of Toronto. This included many acrobatic feats, music, dancing and an animal act. During the afternoon there was a free show for children. Proceeds of the carnival are for work among underprivileged children.

POLICE COURT

With the month of September entering in with bright warm sunshine, the entire Belleville police court seemed to take on lenient views as justice was tempered with mercy and the personal requests of several accused persons readily agreed to by the court, held in session before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd.

In the prisoners' dock sat a trio of men, who had imbibed freely, but not wisely, of intoxicants with the result they were facing drunk charges. All told the court they were guilty, but pleaded they would appreciate an extension of time in which to raise the conventional ten and costs. Without objection and in each succeeding case the requests were granted with the trio being given a week in which to raise $13 in all. However, next Friday the court may not be so lenient, that is if the fines are not forthcoming between now and then.

Zella Cooney, Bancroft, appeared on a charge of assaulting one Viola Salans and was dismissed from custody upon the payment of the costs. "These two women are back on good terms again and the complainant wants to withdraw the charge," revealed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, which was quite well accepted by His Worship if the court costs were paid.

John Mosier had pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving and also of failing to produce his driver's licence prior to the opening of the morning's proceedings. It just cost Mr. Mosier an even $12 in all.

U. S. ATTACKS PARAMUSHIO

Washington, Sept. 1—(CP)—United States Army and Navy planes flying out of the Aleutians carried out an attack on Paramushio Island in the Kuriles Sunday night and encountered only light anti-aircraft fire, the Navy said yesterday.

School Children Asked To Collect Milkweed Pods

When school bells ring out again and students resume their studies next week, school children of the Bay of Quinte area will be asked to assist in the successful prosecution of the war by collecting milkweed pods. Full details as to the proper method of selecting, picking and packing of milkweed pods will be given to the scholars upon their return to school next week, L. A. Kells, Secretary-Administrator of the Board of Education announced today.

Last year the school children of Ontario made a great contribution to the war services through collection of pods and it is expected even a greater contribution can be looked for in 1944.

Children are cautioned against opening or damaging the milkweed pods during the period of collection. It is of the utmost importance that the pods remain undamaged as the floss inside is used as a filler in the manufacture of life belts to replace kapok, which grows only in Java, now in the hands of Japan. However, scientists have discovered that the floss from the milkweed pod is equally as buoyant as kapok making the milkweed pod a valued war asset, which may save the lives of our sailors and airmen at sea.

Full details as to the method of picking, selecting and packing milkweed pods will be given to the school children of the district when school opens next week.

Canadian Wheat Moving Quickly To Export Markets

Ottawa, Sept. 1 (CP)—Canadian wheat, which often lay dormant in crowded storage buildings in the early years of the war, has been moving to export markets at the most satisfactory pace since 1939, government reports indicated today.

Figures of export shipments are not issued immediately for security reasons, but the latest made public indicated the trend. In the first nine months of the crop year 1943-44, which ended on July 31, wheat and wheat flour leaving Canada amounted to 255,327,902 bushels, more than the total of 214,700,000 bushels shipped in the entire crop year 1942-43.

In the last month for which shipments are given, April, exports were 41,315,987 bushels, compared with 23,278,531 in the corresponding month last year.

Officials said that final figures on the 1943-44 exports would not be available for some time, but there was the likelihood that the total of wheat and wheat flour would be about 344,000,000 bushels, making it by far the best year since the war began.

Christ Church Ready for Opening After Alterations

Having undergone a complete redecorational transformation during the past two months, congregational services will be held in Christ Church on Sunday for the first time since the first of July.

Last redecorated 30 years ago, a complete new color scheme making the church much brighter and bringing out the architectural beauty of the edifice has been chosen by Mr. E. W. Vanner, artisan in charge of decorations. Members of the congregation and others to whom the former comparative duller aspect of the church was familiar, will be instantly struck as well as pleased by the transformation.

Completely retaining the architectural beauty of the church symbols which was formerly lost because of the dark-toned walls, the color scheme chosen for the redecoration is of much lighter hue with liberal use of gold bordering giving more the appearance of a cathedral.

For the lower walls a peach tone has been chosen, this blending with a grayish tone for the frieze upon which is embellished grapevine toned symbolic scrolls. The sanctuary and chancel have been beautifully done over, the pleasing color scheme giving emphasis to the symbols and scroll in the background. Church pillars have also been done over in a lighter hue, with a simulated granite appearance being given the lower columns.

In charge of the morning communion services at Christ Church will be Venerable Archdeacon J. H. H. Coleman, D. D., of Kingston, assisted by Everett Smith of this city. Evening service will be conducted by Mr. Smith.

PROTESTS ACTION

Fort Worth, Tex., Sept. 1 —(AP)—Frank A. Ogilvie, past commander of an American Legion post here, said last night he had sent a telegram to President Roosevelt protesting against a reported plan in Washington for commingling Negro and white blood in blood plasma. Ogilvie said he learned of such a plan in a pamphlet which advised Negroes to protest any segregation of Negro blood donated for plasma.

July Births In Hospital Set New Record

Apparently there is no ceiling on babies. The Belleville General Hospital established an all time record for births in July when 107 crowing bundles of happiness first saw the light of day within its confines.

Second best is June of 1943, when 105 gurgling girls and boys brought happiness to as many homes. No twins were included in either case.

The "third floor" lost a bit of ground in the month just past, when seventy-nine future Canadians said "hello" to proud parents. The hospital also had a "probable" that cannot be officially credited to its numerical record, when a Trenton youngster crowed lusty protests at its first glimpse of the world through the rear window of a taxi cab.

BULGARIAN GOVT.

A dispatch Thursday night from Istanbul gave no hint as to whether the closing order applied only to the Turkish section of Bulgaria's border. The action appeared to imply impending developments within the country.

Yesterday Moscow strongly rebuked the Sofia government for declaring itself a neutral and then failing to intern German armed forces remaining in Bulgarian territory.

One effect of the Turkish-Bulgarian border closing, the Istanbul dispatch said, was to bar for the time being the exchange of Turkish and German diplomats, which had been scheduled for today at the frontier.

An Ankara dispatch said the Turkish Foreign Office had decided to intern as of today, the 310 Nazi diplomats and 150 German civilians who were awaiting exchange.

Did Not Show Up.

This decision was announced after 100 Turkish diplomats and about 300 Turkish civilians en route from Germany did not show up at the border.

Earlier in the week the Moscow newspaper Pravda, organ of the communist party, asserted that since Turkey broke relations with Germany the Nazis had been left free to continue espionage in Turkey. An Ankara dispatch, however, quoted official Allied sources there as saying they were satisfied the vigilance of Turkish authorities had prevented the Germans from engaging in illegal activities.

In Moscow it was learned as Romanian and Russian representatives began peace negotiations that Russia, Britain and the United States may join in a declaration concerning Romania's claims to Northern Transylvania, annexed in 1940 by Hungary with Hitler's aproval.

ALLIES MEETING

Army forward elements now are fighting hand-to-hand on the south slopes of Mount Calvo.

In Belevedere Fogliense, 4 1-2 miles southwest of Montecchio, the Allies penetrated the first line and pushed on to within 1,000 yards of Monte Gridolf.

The Germans were described as "almost back on their main defensive positions" in the Appenines, where close contact was being maintained.

The communique said "significant gains" were made in the Florence area. Patrols which crossed the Arno river northwest of Florence yesterday failed to make contact with the Germans. Ginciglìato was occupied.

The Adriatic drive was supported strongly by air power.

The navy announced the British destroyers Loyal and Undine bombarded German gun positions and transport north of Pesaro Aug. 30.

Mistaken Identity Costs Maquis Many Killed, Tortured

Toronto, Sept. 1 (CP)—Peter Stursberg, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation war correspondent in France, in a cable received here last night described a trip to Vercors in the French Alps with a British army officer where they were told of mass executions in surrounding villages by the Germans.

He said French Patriots who guided them said it was a "strange mistake involving Canadian troops that the Maquis lost Vercors Plateau—their mountain headquarters which they had held for two years against three German divisions."

"When Nazi gliders landed on the airstrip which they had built for Allied planes the people cried 'here come the Canadian Commandos', thus the Germans were able to consolidate themselves on the ground without a shot being fired and were able to drive the Maquis from the Plateau."

The Patriots, Stursberg said, were unable to explain "this mistaken identity" except that they had been told Canadians would come to their support.

"We drove beyond our lines to visit this battleground which will become part of French history," said Stursberg, relating several stories of mass executions told to him by Patriots.

It was in July, he said, that the Germans landed paratroopers on the western end of Vercors Plateau and forced the Maquis out. The Germans killed every Maquis they captured and burned and tortured many civilians.

The Nazis also ransacked all the little villages and burned homes. The little village of Vassieux was blown up and burned and the civilian population slaughtered.

"Out of 300 inhabitants, only 30 remained alive," Stursberg said. "They had returned to their ruined homes and we found them still removing corpses"

"There was a pile of coffins and crosses in the main square . . . and already they had found 138 bodies."

Only Few Robots Sent to Britain During Night

London, Sept. 1. (CP)—With dozens of flying-bombs launching-sites already reported in the hands of British and Canadian armies sweeping up the French coast, only a few robots were loosed against Britain during the night.

As usual some the bombs fell in the London area, but damage was not widespread.

Dispatches from France, meanwhile, declared that in addition to the robot launching sites already captured it is expected that at least 100 more will be seized by the Allies between Le Havre and the Somme.

It was noticeable both yesterday and last night that the sporadic robot attacks upon Britain came from the most northerly sites so far used—in extreme northern France or Belgium.

Germans Called Upon To Revolt Against Hitler

London, Sept. 1—(CP)—The Ministry of Information said today the "Volksender," identifying itself as the "German people's underground radio," broadcast an appeal to all Germans in the Reich and Czechoslovakia to revolt against Hitler's rule.

The call was being issued to all Germans "on the fifth anniversary of the war," the broadcast said.

Czechoslovakia is "aflame," another broadcast said, urging Germans there to join in the uprising.

A broadcast from Moscow by the Free German National Committee also called upon the German Army and its reserves to revolt.

Italians Fear Moscow Will Rule Instead of Berlin

New York, Sept. 1—(AP)—Italians fear that the war will result in "the subjugation of Europe by Moscow instead of Berlin," William G. Bullitt, former American ambassador to France and Russia, says in the current issue of Life magazine.

Bullitt also said Italians believe "the failure of the U. S. and Great Britain to stand strongly for independence for all the states of Europe has made certain a new world war."

Bullitt, writing from Rome, said "the Romans expect the Soviet Union to dominate Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia" as well as eastern Germany.

He described Italy as being "terrified" that the neighboring nations of Austria and Yugoslavia also might come under influence of Russia.

Bullitt said Italians hope, but are not convinced that the United States and Britain can hold off the "hordes from the east."

"They fear," he added, "Britain will emerge from this war a 'tired victor' unable to stop the threat alone, and are by no means sure" of what the United States might do.

1,100 U.S. Airmen Liberated When Bucharest Freed

By JOSEPH MORTON
Associated Press War Correspondent

Bucharest, Sept. 1 (AP)—Russian troops arriving in this Romanian capital yesterday found 1,100 American airmen here—prisoners of war who had been liberated the day King Mihai proclaimed an Armistice and who have since been given the run of the city.

Among other liberated Allied airmen in the city, I was told, are about 22 Britons.

The Americans had been confined in two camps—those who went down during the low-level bombardment of Ploesti 13 months ago being confined in a stockade near Brasov and the remainder in a camp at Bucharest.

Their treatment has been far from severe, the airmen told me, and the gates of both prisons were thrown open within a matter of minutes after Mihai issued his Armistice proclamation.

Valuable Port Gained by Allies When Dieppe Fell

(By The Canadian Press)

A valuable port was gained by the Allies today when the 1st Canadian Army moved into Dieppe.

Nestling in a valley at the mouth of the river Arques, bordered by steep white cliffs, Dieppe has one of the safest and deepest harbors on the English Channel. Vessels drawing 20 feet can enter at neap tide, unloading directly to a railway that runs to Paris, 108 miles distant. A drydock was among the port's repairing facilities before the occupation but this probably was damaged by the Germans before the town fell.

Dieppe, a city of 25,000 population before the war, was used by the Normans who found its "diep" or inlet suitable for ships. But it was not until late in the 12 century that the town became of importance. Throughout the centuries it was a battleground for English and French armies.

The town was occupied by the English from 1420 to 1435 and a siege undertaken in 1442 by John Talbot, First Earl of Shrewsbury, was raised by the Dauphin, afterward Louis XI. The day of deliverance continued for centuries to be celebrated by a great procession and miracle plays.

Bombarded heavily by the English and Dutch fleets in 1694, Dieppe was rebuilt after the Peace of Ryswick. Its modern prosperity dates from the 19th century, partly owing to Marie Caroline, Duchess of Berry, who made it fashionable as a watering place. During the Franco-Prussian War, the town was occupied by the Germans from December, 1870, to July, 1871.

One of the town's waterfront attractions is the Casino, scene of bitter fighting during the Canadian attack Aug. 19, 1942. A castle, built in 1435, overlooks the beach from the summit of the western cliff. This was deployed to advantage by the Germans during the 1942 raid.

FIGHT DELAYING ACTION

London, Sept. 1 (CP)—A German military spokesman, analyzing developments on the western front, declared today in a Berlin broadcast that "the German high command refuses to accept the Allied challenge to fight a decisive battle in France"

The German armies, the spokesman said, are fighting "a delaying action within the framework of mobile warfare."

194 NAZIS SURRENDER

Cairo, Sept. 1 —(CP)— Ankara advices said today that 194 German troops surrendered voluntarily to Turkish authorities in the Greek frontier and were interned.

Aerial Prelude To Invasion Of Philippines

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Sept. 1. (AP)— American planes were disclosed today to have bagged five more Japanese ships and struck anew at Mindanao in the aerial prelude to invasion of the Philippines.

Nowhere in more than 4,000 miles from The Netherlands Celebes to the Kuriles did raiding planes stir up enemy air opposition but Lt.-Gen. Millard F. Harmon surmised Japan was hoarding plane strength which would be turned loose in furious combat once the Philippines are invaded.

Harmon, assuming command of all army air force units in the Pacific Ocean areas, spoke of the day when 1,000-plane formations can give Japan the "kind of unremitting bombing that has to a large extent been responsible for breaking the back of German military power".

The bombing and probable sinking of an enemy destroyer, two freighters and two tankers off Dutch Celebes was announced today.

Hospital Administrator Awarded Nomineeship

Mr. Gordon Barclay, administrator of the Belleville General Hospital, has been awarded a nomineeship to the American College of Hospital Administrator, Chicago, and will be admitted to membership at convocation exercises being held in Cleveland, Ohio, on Oct. 1.

Qualifications for the award of a nomineeship include the successful operation of a hospital for three years; presentation of papers to leading hospital journals and active participation on the programs of at least two hospital conventions.

The convocation exercises will precede the annual convention of the American Hospitals Association being held in Cleveland from Oct. 1 to Oct. 6, and which Mr. Barclay will attend.

Wounded Men Given Privileges

Ottawa, Sept. 1 —(CP)— Members of the Canadian army who have been wounded three or more times, other than trivially, will be permitted to apply for service near their next-of-kin, Defence Headquarters announced last night.

The privilege, which is dependent on the exigencies of the service, may also be accorded those who have been wounded twice and have had more than three years' continuous service with the Canadian army overseas.

The tour of duty, which is confined to Canada and the United Kingdom, will be approximately six months. The soldier will be granted the usual embarkation leave on arrival.

Proximity of the place of employment in Canada will depend on the needs of the service and the particular qualifications of the individual, the announcement said.

Orchestra Leader Accepts Invitation

New York, Sept. 1 —(AP)— Gen. MacArthur has extended an invitation to Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia orchestra, to lead the Manila symphony in a Philippines victory concert.

Mr. Ormandy, who arrived yesterday from a 25,000-mile concert tour in Australia, said the invitation was extended to him in Brisbane May 26 and that he accepted.

"Yes, Gen. MacArthur gave me a tentative date," Ormandy told a Press Conference, "but I can't tell it to you. It's a secret."

MYSTERY INJURIES

Mrs. Louise Stanley Munn, show girl wife of a rich and social naval lieutenant, was found seriously injured under mysterious circumstances, in a room in the Hotel Ambassador, New York. Calling her physician, the socialite was removed by private ambulance to Lenox Hill Hospital, where it was discovered that she suffered from severe lacerations of the face and head, and a possible brain concussion. Her condition was described as serious, but not critical.

157 Enemy Planes Destroyed in 2 Days

Rome, Sept. 1 —(AP)— At least 157 enemy planes were destroyed on the ground and nine shot down in aerial combat in the past two days by U. S. 15th Air Force light bombers during strafing attacks on three Romanian airdromes, Mediterranean Allied Air Forces headquarters announced today.

One group swooped over the Reghin Airfield in Romania yesterday and destroyed at least 60 Nazi planes on the ground and scored nine aerial victories.

On the preceding day another group destroyed 83 aircraft on the Grosswardein, Romania, airdrome in what the M. A. A. F. command described as "the most effective machine-gunning of German aircraft on the ground in a single airfield ever carried out in the Mediterranean theatre."

Only two planes were lost.

Wodehouse Claims He Meant 'No Wrong"

London, Sept. 1. (AP)—Author P. G. Wodehouse, who made five broadcasts over the German radio during his internment in Germany, was quoted in a dispatch from Paris yesterday as saying he believes he made "a terrible mistake" but meant no wrong.

In an interview with a London Daily Sketch correspondent, J. Darcy Dawson, at the French capital, the 63-year-old Wodehouse said:

"While I was in camp I had received 50 letters or more from readers in the United States and I thought I would like to answer them more or less in a broadcast about how I got along in camp.

"I arranged for a series of five broadcasts describing my life in the five camps where I had been. I never intended to do any more than these and never did".

The British author, creator of "Jeeves", the all-wise butler known to millions of readers, was caught by the Germans late in May, 1940, in his villa at Le Touquet, France, and spent several months in prison and internment camps. But in 1941 he was allowed to move around in Berlin on his own.

"I assume it was mainly because I reached the age of 60", he said yesterday. "At Loos prison all men of 60 had been told they were free".

He said he requested his transfer to Paris a year ago and was allowed to go.

320 HOSTAGES KILLED CLAIM

Rome, Sept. 1 (AP)—An official Italian investigation commission accused Germany yesterday of killing more than 320 hostages at the Ardeatine caves near Rome last March 24, and recommended that the full facts be referred to the Allied war crimes commission so that the guilty persons might be punished.

Paris Was Spared Fate of Heavy Damage From Air

By HENRY B. JAMESON
(AP War Correspondent)

Paris, Sept. 1. (AP)—More fortunate than London, the City of Paris has been spared the fate of heavy damage from the air.

British, Canadian and United States bombers have flown over and around it hundreds of times but held their blows for military targets.

Bomb damage has been confined almost entirely to the suburban industrial districts at a minimum cost to civilians. The big railroad yards, airfields and the vast Renault motor works and its subsidiary plants were the scenes of greatest destruction.

Two of the best examples of the devastation caused by Allied bombers—an indication of how large sections of Germany must now look—are the Renault works on the southwestern edge of Paris and the mammoth Villeneuv-St. Georges freight yards outside Vinncennes.

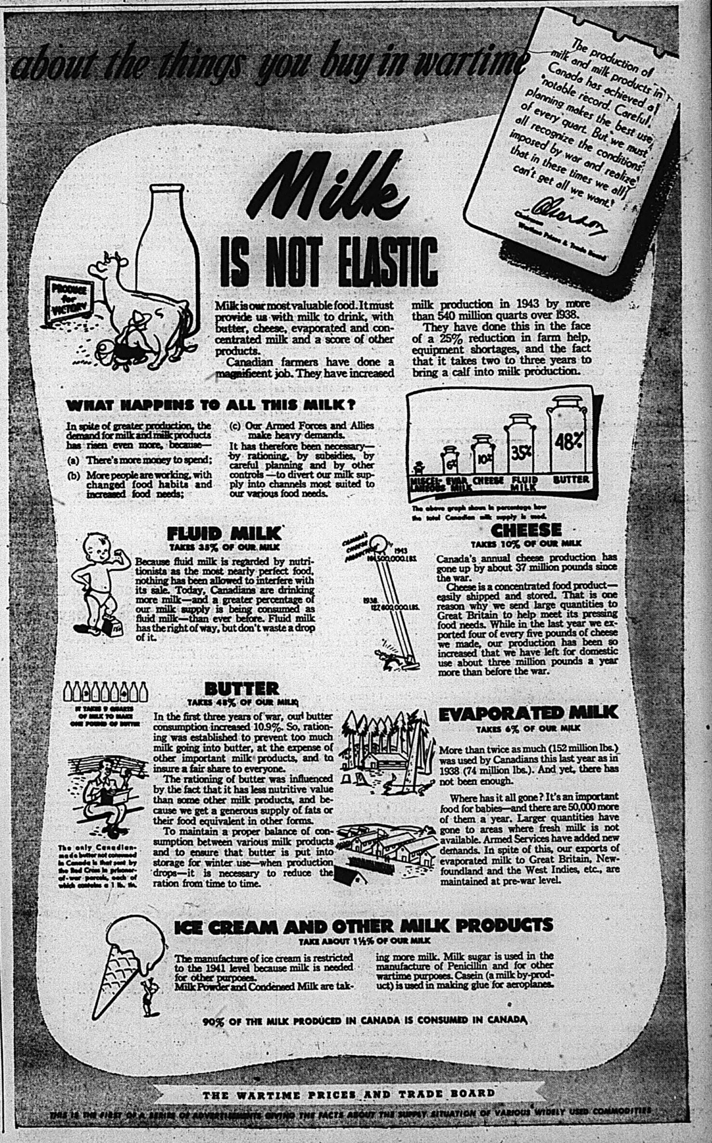
A Paris newspaperman said the bombing never caused the plant to shut down completely, but "obviously slowed production greatly".

"It usually was thrown out of gear for two or three days after each big raid", he declared.

Thousands of wrecked railway cars are scattered over the Villeneuv-St. Georges yards, through which the Germans had to move vast quantities of material. One area three-quarters of a mile square is almost a solid mass of crumpled cars and locomotives and twisted rails.

The heart of Paris around the Eifel Tower was never touched. Few if any of the historic buildings suffered any damage.



about the things you buy in wartime

The production of milk and milk products in Canada has achieved a "notable record. Careful planning makes the best use of every quart. But we must all recognize the conditions imposed by war and realize that in these times we all can't get all we want!

Chairman
Wartime Prices & Trade Board

Milk IS NOT ELASTIC

Milk is our most valuable food. It must provide us with milk to drink, with butter, cheese, evaporated and concentrated milk and a score of other products.

Canadian farmers have done a magnificent job. They have increased milk production in 1943 by more than 540 million quarts over 1938.

They have done this in the face of a 25% reduction in farm help, equipment shortages, and the fact that it takes two to three years to bring a calf into milk production.

WHAT HAPPENS TO ALL THIS MILK?

In spite of greater production, the demand for milk and milk products has risen even more, because—

(a) There's more money to spend;

(b) More people are working, with changed food habits and increased food needs;

(c) Our Armed Forces and Allies make heavy demands.

It has therefore been necessary—by rationing, by subsidies, by careful planning and by other controls—to divert our milk supply into channels most suited to our various food needs.

The above graph shows in percentage how the total Canadian milk supply is used.

TAKES 35% OF OUR MILK

Because fluid milk is regarded by nutritionists as the most nearly perfect food, nothing has been allowed to interfere with its sale. Today, Canadians are drinking more milk—and a greater percentage of our milk supply is being consumed as fluid milk—than ever before. Fluid milk has the right of way, but don't waste a drop of it.

CHEESE

TAKES 10% OF OUR MILK

Canada's annual cheese production has gone up by about 37 million pounds since the war.

Cheese is a concentrated food product—easily shipped and stored. That is one reason why we send large quantities to Great Britain to help meet its pressing food needs. While in the last year we exported four of every five pounds of cheese we made, our production has been so increased that we have left for domestic use about three million pounds a year more than before the war.

IT TAKES 9 QUARTS OF MILK TO MAKE ONE POUND OF BUTTER

BUTTER

TAKES 48% OF OUR MILK

In the first three years of war, our butter consumption increased 10.9%. So, rationing was established to prevent too much milk going into butter, at the expense of other important milk products, and to insure a fair share to everyone.

The rationing of butter was influenced by the fact that it has less nutritive value than some other milk products, and because we get a generous supply of fats or their food equivalent in other forms.

To maintain a proper balance of consumption between various milk products and to ensure that butter is put into storage for winter use—when production drops—it is necessary to reduce the ration from time to time.

The only Canadian-made butter not consumed in Canada is that sent by the Red Cross in prisoner-of-war parcels, each of which contains a 1 lb. tin.

EVAPORATED MILK

TAKES 6% OF OUR MILK

More than twice as much (152 million lbs.) was used by Canadians this last year as in 1938 (74 million lbs.). And yet, there has not been enough.

Where has it all gone? It's an important food for babies—and there are 50,000 more of them a year. Larger quantities have gone to areas where fresh milk is not available. Armed Services have added new demands. In spite of this, our exports of evaporated milk to Great Britain, Newfoundland and the West Indies, etc., are maintained at pre-war level.

ICE CREAM AND OTHER MILK PRODUCTS

TAKE ABOUT 1½% OF OUR MILK

The manufacture of ice cream is restricted to the 1941 level because milk is needed for other purposes.
Milk Powder and Condensed Milk are taking more milk. Milk sugar is used in the manufacture of Penicillin and for other wartime purposes. Casein (a milk by-product) is used in making glue for aeroplanes.

G. H. Stokes, P-C Candidate

The selection of George H. Stokes as Progressive Conservative candidate for South Hastings at the convention held here on Wednesday was not altogether a surprise. Nor was it surprising that he was selected on the first ballot for those who know Mr. Stokes well, as do a host of people throughout the county, felt he had won the right to the honor by his unselfish interest and work on behalf of all in his constituency.

The selection was made through no influence of oratory as might have been the case were he a less able man but possessed the gift of persuasion through the spoken word from the platform. It can be said that his kindly and unselfish spirit, and a willingness to do everything within his power to serve the people who elected him before was a big factor in his selection as candidate for this riding, by the delegates of his party.

Mr. Stokes having come from a farm has a good understanding of farming problems and being an urban dweller of recent years knows something of the needs of city dwellers. And when adherents of opposite political faiths express themselves particularly well satisfied with the results of work requiring Mr. Stokes' assistance then it can be assumed that he never let political barriers stand in his way.

In these troublesome times the country needs dependable men who are firm in their convictions of what is best and who are not swayed by the rose-tinted visions of a phantom Utopia. The many friends of Mr. Stokes will feel that the Progressive Conservative convention chose just such a man..

September 3, Day of Prayer

Next Sunday, September 3, has been proclaimed a day of prayer throughout Canada and it seems in order that we should give some preparatory consideration of the things for which we should pray.

We should pray for God's protection for the fighting men of our armies, air force and navy and for the day of victory which will signify the beginning of time for their return to home and loved ones.

On this fifth anniversary of the war we should offer up our thankfulness for the fortitude and genius of our chosen leaders in the parts they have played in this war. While there have been times when the future looked black, we never lost hope that victory would one day be ours. We would like to have the temerity to believe that Divine guidance had a hand in the chosing of the road to victory.

We should pray that never again in this world should evil men of the type we have been fighting be able to lead a nation to war and destruction to satisfy their senseless lust for power. We should pray that those who plan the peace will be guided by Divine power that our future may be secure and that men's time can be devoted to the worthwhile interests of life that they may enjoy the fruits of their labor.

Our thoughts and prayers should be for those who have died that Freedom might live. They are the ones who have made the supreme sacrifice, and our most fervent prayers should be that their sacrifice has not been in vain. Nor do we forget their loved ones at home who have suffered the agony of loss. They, too, are paying the price of war and their burden cannot be shared by another.

There should be prayers for our Allies and for the suffering peoples of Europe and Asia who have been freed or whose day of deliverance may not be far away.

Finally on this day of prayer we should voice our gratitude and humbleness that we live in a country like Canada where men are free and our heritage great, and that we may prove worthy of this great land so well endowed with the richness of God's bounty.

These are some of the things we should pray for.

War Surgeons Operate In Amazing Conditions

(Woodstock Sentinel Review)

Surgeons of this war who practice on the ocean or in the front battle areas have done magnificent work. In the rush of the news of actual combat, on sea, in the air and on land, too little attention may be paid to doctors, surgeons and nurses. Soldiers, sailors and airmen know what they have done. It is difficult for people back home to visualize the performing of an operation in a battle zone.

It is possible to realize something of the greatness of the task of the surgeons from a report of the sinking of H.M.C.S. Regina, a corvette. The surgeon of the corvette was one of the survivors of a terrific explosion which sent the Regina to the bottom in 28 seconds. Surg.-Lieut. Grant Gould suffered two fractured ribs. He was hoisted aboard the rescue ship. There he attended other wounded survivors. He did not have a splendidly appointed operating theatre. He did not have the proper lighting; not any of the scientific equipment of a modern hospital. He could not take time to study his cases; to prepare for operations. He had no staff of assistants, standing ready to hand him instruments and do the thousand and one "jobs" which develop when a patient is on the the operating table.

This surgeon had the open deck as an operating room; he did not have a room which was antiseptic to the highest degree. For light, there was a blazing, swirling and smoking torch. For amputation, he had to use a butcher's knife. There were no fine, delicate scalpels. He had no perfect sterilizing equipment. He had to sterilize his butcher's knife in the hot water of the cook's galley. For all this, medical authorities said later that the Surgeon-Lieutenant had performed operations which were an "amazing success."

When this war is over, there will be more amazing stories. They will be full of human interest. They will point the way to advances in surgery and medicine.

London Looters

(London Despatch)

London race gangs have turned to organized looting.

Several big robberies in the St. Pancras area are known to be the work of members of the once notorious King's Cross gang.

A King's Cross Civil Defence official told me: "I have little doubt that gangs are carefully planning robberies on blitzed property.

"They congregate at some point immediately the siren sounds, and if a flying bomb falls nearby they are on the scene as quickly as rescue workers.

"Posing as rescue workers, they get into houses ostensibly to help any casualties, but really to ransack the place of money and jewellery. They get as much as they can and clear out as quickly as possible."

Norwegian Prisoners

(News of Norway)

A total of about 18,000 Norwegians are being held prisoner in Norway or Germany, according to latest available reports.

About 6,000 political prisoners are under detention in various prisons and concentration camps built by the Germans in Norway. Ordinary prisons and jails throughout the country have also been taken into use for harboring political prisoners.

Likewise the Quisling State Police prisons of Bredtvedt near Oslo and Berg near Tonsberg are being used for political prisoners. Altogether the number of political prisoners now locked up in Norway is estimated at about 12,000.

If Adolf Hitler did jump into a certain French river near Paris, it would not indicate any return to normalcy on his part. He would be declared in Seine.

Co-operation is the finest thing in the world. Think of what a fine coat of tan one would have, if all those freckles decided to get together.

PRIDE AND PLEASURE

I've been wondering—taking pride
In those thin rods, silken tied,
Slender tips and agate rings—
If such splendor really brings
More to thrill the human soul
Than does boyhood's bamboo pole.

I am old enough to feel
Satisfaction in a reel,
Like a fine watch, truly made,
And the price for it I paid,
But I wonder—man or boy—
Which of us had greater joy?

Is it fancy—older grown—
I remember gladness flown,
And imagine now I had
Thrills exquisite as a lad,
And was happier—on the whole—
With that common fishing pole?

I'm not sure; but this I've learned:
Fun is not with cost concerned.
Splendor merely adds to pride.
Costly rods, all silken tied,
Give a man no surer joy
Than is granted to the boy.

Crowds of Parisians Returning Home Fantastic Sight Says Pyle

By ERNIE PYLE

In Paris—(by wireless)—As we drove toward Paris from the south, hundreds of Parisians—refugees and returning vacationists—rode homeward on bicycles amidst the tanks and big guns.

Some Frenchmen have the facility for making all of us Nervous Nellies look ridiculous. There should be a nonchalant Frenchman in every war movie. He would be a sort of French Charlie Chaplin. You would have tense soldiers crouching in ditches and firing from behind low walls. And in the middle of it you would have this Frenchman, in faded blue overalls and beret and with a nearly burned-up cigarette in his mouth, come striding down the middle of the road past the soldiers.

I've seen that very thing happen about four times since D-Day, and you never can see it without laughing.

Well, the crowds were out in Paris like that while the shooting was still going on. People on bicycles would stop with one foot on the pavement to watch the firing that was going on right in that block.

As the French Second Armored Division rolled into the city at dangerous speed, I noticed one tank commander, with goggles, smoking a cigar, and another soldier in a truck playing a flute for his own amusement. There also were a good many pet dogs riding into the battle on top of tanks and trucks.

Amidst this fantastic Parisward battle traffic were people pushing baby carriages full of belongings, walking with suitcases, and riding bicycles so heavily loaded with gear that if they were to lay them down they had to have help to lift them upright.

And in the midst of it was a tandem bicycle ridden by a man and a beautiful woman, both in bright blue shorts, just as though they were holidaying—which undoubtedly they were.

• • •

You never saw so many bicycles in your life as in Paris. And they rig up the funniest contraptions on them, such as little two-wheeled carts which they tow behind. And we saw a wagon rigged up so it could be pulled by two bicyclists riding side by side, like a team of horses.

For 24 hours tanks were parked on the sidewalks all over downtown Paris. They were all manned by French soldiers, and each tank immediately became a sort of social centre.

Kids were all over the tanks like flies. Women in white dresses climbed up to kiss men with grimy faces.

And early the second morning we saw a girl climbing sleepily out of a tank turret.

French soldiers of the armored division were all in American uniforms and they had American equipment. Consequently most people at first thought we few Americans were French. Then, puzzled, they would say, "English?" and we would say, "No, American." And then we would get a little scream and a couple more kisses.

Every place you stopped somebody in the crowd could speak English. They apologized for not inviting us to their homes for a drink, saying they didn't have any. Time and again they would say, "We've waited so long for you!" It almost got to be a refrain.

One elderly gentleman said that although we were long in reaching France we had come swiftly since then. He said the people hadn't expected us to be in Paris for six months after invasion day.

There are not many American soldiers in Paris. And it's unlikely there will be, at least for some time, because they are out over France going on with the war.

Paris was not a military objective; its liberation so soon was more of a symbol. That's the reason the French armored division was assigned to the job.

The armies still fighting in the field were practically deserted for a few days by the correspondents, as we all wanted to get in on the liberation of Paris. There were so many correspondents it got to be a joke, even among us. I think at least 200 must have entered the city that first day, both before and after the surrender.

The Army had picked out a hotel for us ahead of time, and it was taken over as soon as the city surrendered. But thought it was a big hotel it was full before dark the first day, so they have taken over another huge one across the street.

Hotel life seems strange after so long in the field. My own room is a big corner one, with easy chairs, a soft bed, a bathroom and maid and hall-porter service. There is no electricity in the daytime, no hot water anytime, and no restaurant or bar, but outside of that the hotel is just about like peacetime.

Sitting here writing within safe walls, and looking out the window occasionally at the street thronged with happy people, it is already hard to believe there was a war; even harder to realize there still is a war.

CANCEL BEAUTY CONTEST

St. Thomas, Sept. 1 —(CP)— Modesty on the part of the city's young women may necessitate the cancellation of the beauty contest planned as a major feature for the Labor Day carnival and celebration to be held here. Although the first prize-winner stands to receive more than $100 in cash and merchandise prizes, few young ladies have entered the contest. Up to this date the judges selected outnumber the fair entrants.

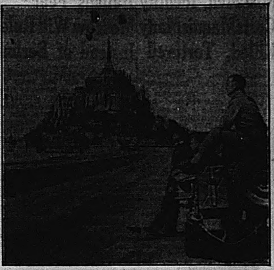
SIGHT SEEING IN FRANCE



Three Canadian servicemen visit the American sector in France on a day off from their respective duties. Left to right: F/O. Art Booth of Winnipeg, F/L. Howard Turner of Montreal, and Captain Bob Forbes of Toronto, halt their jeep and take in the scenery surrounding the famous island abbey, fortress and town of Mont St. Michel standing majestically in the background. The unique world-renowned land mark has been in existence since the 13th century, maintained by the kings and noblemen of France. The striking cathedral on the summit has not been in use for the last 200 years but the town which spirals up to it via narrow cobblestone streets has continued to do a thriving tourist trade even despite the war, German and now Allied service people constituting its clientele.—(R.C.A.F. HOW TO BREATHE

It might clear away some of the confusion in your singular teachings about "natural" breathing if you will read the article inclosed. (E. R. L.)

First, I'll give a hundred dollar war bond to you, your physician or the conductor of the health column you name if any or all of you can line up an authoritative textbook of physiology or any recognized authority that differs from what I teach or say about the way to breathe; or perhaps we should state it the other way—any recognized authority with which my teachings or views expressed here or elsewhere do not coincide.

I quote one paragraph from the illuminating remarks about "Lazy Breathing Habits" by the conductor of the health column this correspondent mentions:

> "Press the palms firmly against the lower ribs in front and inhale and exhale slowly. During this procedure the abdomen is held taut, which enchances the flow of air to the upper portions of the lungs."

If "the abdomen is held taut" means contract your belly muscles, it is probably true that the upper portions of the lungs are more expanded while you keep the belly contracted or taut, but only at expense of expansion of the rest of the lungs. Squeeze one part of a toy balloon and the other part expands. I do not mean to deny the value of even the slight exercise you get contracting or holding your belly (front wall of abdomen) taut. But I assure you it has no more effect on lazy or shallow breathing habits than contracting the muscles of your legs, as in mowing the lawn or making the bed.

The correspondent refers to my teachings about "natural" breathing. That's belly breathing — the way animals breathe, and animals and untutored savages breathe more efficiently than most civilized people do. Indeed, with few exceptions "educated" people do not know how to breathe.

Some day soon I shall try to condense instructions for belly breathing sufficiently to assure printing in this limited space—some day when I feel courageous about deletions. Meanwhile, on request, if you inclose stamped envelope bearing your address, I'll mail the pamphlet giving instructions for practising the exercise of belly breathing and telling what common complaints it is good for.

QUESTION & ANSWERS

A Good Five-Center

I'd like the booklet about constipation and also the one about piles for which I inclose five cents. If this is too much buy yourself a cigar. (W. M. B.)

Answer—Make it a pipeful of select fuel and I'll consider your offer. For booklet "The Constipation Habit and Colon Hygiene" inclose ten cents and if you ask for it at the same time you may have the pamphlet "It is Stupid to Suffer from Piles"—but in any case inclose a properly stamped envelope bearing your address.

There's a War On, Folks

The correspondence is again getting out of hand. I know there is a war on, folks, and a great many of the best doctors are in service. For that reason I'm ready and willing to stretch a point or to bend the code of medical ethics all out of shape in order to help any reader who writes to me. But there are reasonable rules for such readers to observe, and the first is, you must inclose with your request or query a properly stamped envelope of standard size (not toy stuff, please) bearing your address.

Greatest Troubles Never Happen

I am over forty and feel that in the not distant future the change will come. I'd like to know more about it than I do, if you have a pamphlet about menopause. (D. R.)

Answer—I'll send any woman the pamphlet "The Menopause" on her request if she incloses stamped envelope bearing her address. You speak as though it will be a time of crisis or danger. It is nothing of the sort—that notion is carefully nurtuted and propagated by the nostrum mongers.

QUEEN OF THE ANTILLES

Cuba is known as "The Queen, Gem or Pearl of the Antilles" because it is the largest and richest of all the West Indian Islands.

Before Columbus made his first voyage to the New World "Antilia" or "Antilla" was the name given to the legendary island of the Seven Cities in the Atlantic.

On many 15th-century maps and charts "Antilia" is the name assigned to a semi-mythical archipelago lying about half way between the Canaries and India.

Later the name became identified with the land discovered by Columbus, and when it was learned that this consisted of a group of islands the plural form of the word was adopted.

The Antilles are divided into two groups, the Greater Antilles, comprising Cuba, Jamaica, Haiti and Puerto, and the Lesser Antilles, comprising the rest of the islands in the West Indies.

When Columbus first saw Cuba in 1492 he described it as "The most beautiful land that eyes ever beheld."

Many later explorers commented upon the great size of the island, its rich natural resources, its fine harbors, its varied and beautiful scenery, its peaceful and contented inhabitants and its commanding geographical location.

The aboriginees called the island Cuba, a native word of unknown origin and meaning.

Many attempts were made to give it a Spanish name.

Upon the death of the king the name was changed to Fernandina.

Later the Queen of the Antilles successively bore the names "Santiago" (St. James), after the patron saint of Spain, and "Ave Maria," in honor of the Blessed Virgin.

But the inhabitants persisted in calling it by its native name and it has continued to be called Cuba to this day.

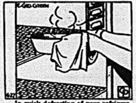
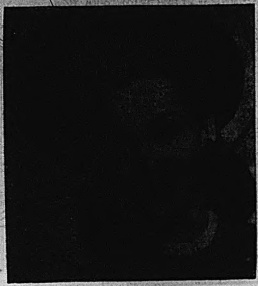
Wife Preservers



In quick defrosting of your refrigerator, a pan or pot of hot water left on one of the wire trays will do no harm. Never, however, pour hot water over the coils or cooling unit, and do not place the pan of hot water on cold porcelain surfaces. The finish may crack by sudden changes in temperature.

Costly Neglect of Teeth



Carole Landis has beautiful white teeth.

By HELEN FOLLETT

PENNY wise and pound foolish is the woman who spends cash for elegant clothes to put upon her back and seldom seeks professional treatment for her teeth until throbbing pain forces her into the dentist's chair. The rule is; twice a year for dental cleaning, examination and repair work. In the long run one is saved pain and money.

Don't forget that hard foods bring the teeth tight together with pressure that reacts upon the blood streams of the gums from which they get strength and vitality. When circulation is sluggish the gums soften, get spongy, are inclined to bleed when touched with the bristles of the brush. Eat raw carrots, cabbage hearts, turnips. And don't chuck away bread crusts; the crustier they are, the better for your teeth. Massage is helpful when gums are pale. Use a dentrifice, send the finger tip in circles.

No matter how faithfully brushing goes on, there is a chance that tartar will form under the gums. This can only be removed by the murderous little instruments wielded by the dentist. It may press against the teeth, causing pain. It may cause wounds in the gums, in which invading bacteria may settle, causing infections. That is another reason why one should make the twice-yearly visit to the dentist's office.

Calcium is necessary for the well being of teeth so take a glass of milk with each meal, another glass at bedtime. The juice of citrus fruits is recommended because of their vitamin content. Tomato juice also is helpful.

If you are a candy fiend make it a practice to brush your teeth after you have been dipping into the bonbon box. Sugar undergoes chemical changes that may cause caries to form. When brushing, roll the bristles away from the gums with a shimmying motion.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Treatment of Blackheads.

One distressing beauty grief is the skin that carries tiny black polka dots caused by the lodging of atmospheric dust in the pores. It is a common trouble, especially among girls. To accept these dark points, to do nothing about them, is to invite more complexion troubles, because the waxen plug in the pore may become so large that it breaks the walls of the minute skin duct an attracts bacteria; then pimples appear. Blackheads are often the forerunner of acne and, when acne reaches a chronic stage, it is difficult to cure. Scars often result from this disfiguring condition.

A clay pack will send blackheads packing. Certainly it is worth trying. The medium used for this treatment is kaolin, our old friend Fuller's earth, used for cleaning felts and furs; it has been sterilized, made into a fine yellow powder. It has mild bleaching powers, is of double value to the girl whose skin has gone dingy or sallow. It is harmless and, as a dirt digger, it is a champion. Soap renovates the skin surface but does not seem to penetrate the pores, bring out dusty deposits.

All facial treatments must start with a clean skin surface, so use soap and water freely before applying the mask. Rinse away the suds, dip a large washcloth in steaming hot water, hold close to the face to soften the blockades in the pores.

Bind back your hair so your hair will not be smeared with the mask. Take three level tablespoonfuls of the kaolin—which you can buy from your druggist—and mix with it enough witch hazel to form a mass the consistency of whipped cream.

Start at the collar bones, spreading on the mixture evenly. Always when treating the complexion, include the neck that all too often does not sit in on the cosmetic faest and so has had a color divorce from the face. If you happen to have a spatula, you will find it a more convenient means of application than the finger tips. Put a light film on the ear lobes. Include the eyelids. Spread into the furrows beside the wings of the nose, a favorite lodging place for blackheads.

Better retire to your own room at this stage, as your appearance is likely to throw a terrific scare into anyone who happens to see you. There is probably no time in a woman's life when she looks as ghastly and unrecognizable as when she is wearing a clay pack.

Pick up your mystery story, read for half an hour. By that time the mask will have become dry and flakey. Use tepid water for the purpose of removing it. Dry with gentle pats of the towel; trot out the cold cream jar and give yourself a five-minute massage. Remove the cream; on with the make-up.

You will observe that the flesh has a nice, smooth, soft feel, that it carries a pleasing color, and that many of the black points have disappeared.

Fashion Flashes

Black is traditional, it would seem, for that first fall frock. Black crepe makes a current frock which has a high, rounded neckline, slim, bracelet sleeves, gathers below the waist and wide inverted bands of black satin on the bodice.

Elegance and luxury marks this season's fur-trimmed coats. Plum colored woollen is used for a coat made with double peplum bodice and bishop sleeves of nutria.

There's color in some of the nicest tailored suits. Medium brown woollen with a novelty stripe in aqua blue makes a smart suit that features squared shoulders, very high, pointed revers, and a slim waistline.

No let-up in the wide range of design that marks autumn millinery. Grand with a suit or tailored coat is a small sailor with a puffed crown of black felt and a thick, small brim of bright red woollen trimmed with clusters of black tassels.

Surprise Party At Rednersville

A surprise party was held at the home of Finley Scrimshaw, of Rednersville, last Friday evening. About 25 of the young people of the surrounding district met to honor Finley on his birthday and welcome him to the neighborhood. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Jack McCaughen and Mrs. McCaughen's brother from Stirling, called in and gave several musical selections. At ten o'clock the group sang "Happy Birthday" and Finley was presented with an identification disc on which his name was engraved. On the back was engraved "The Rednersville Gang". The presentation was made by Mr. Edmund McQuaid. Finley very fittingly thanked them for their thoughtfulness and also for the splendid manner in which they had accepted him as a neighbor. Ice cream, cake and bananas were served by the group.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Thinks He Must Be Heaven's Gift to Girl's Family.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

As a private in the Army, I had a little brush in Sicily with combat. They sent me home, and I renewed my acquaintance with a girl I've been loving from afar for some time. I've never cared much for her family, but when they all crowded in the parlor to listen to the tales of the "old soldier", I didn't know their presence would be permanent.

Every time I've called on that girl, in they've trooped—mother, father, two unmarried sisters and a horrible nephews who always doubts my every word. You'd think I was Heaven's Gift to them. I'm almost prepared to surrender. I thought I'd write to you as a last resort.

Johnny.

Good gracious, where's your lover's imagination and ingenuity? Ask the girl to go to a movie with you. No place for hand-holding and whispering endearments like a movie, and if there isn't a movie convenient, invite your girl for a walk, and if you haven't forgotten how to dance, go to the nearest recreation centre.

Another Taken-for-Granted Wife Heard From.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I married the best looking boy in our town and believe me I've paid the price for his good looks. Shortly after we were married, he had typhoid, fever, wasn't able to work for a year, and seems to have completely forgotten how to earn a nickel since then.

I have a job in a bank. I get up at six, get my little girl ready for nursery school, partly straighten up the house call for my child at the school, come home, cook dinner, wash dishes and do anything around the house I've not had time to do in the morning. Never have I had a word of praise or appreciation for this, only groans about his poor health, his sorrow at seeing other fellows go off to war. Many jobs have been offered him that he could take, but he turns them all down.

F. P. L.

Sometimes people, like your husband, who make a profession of enjoying poor health have to be pulled up with a good round turn. Insist that he takes the next job offered. It's easy enough to get a job these days, and if he declines to take it, tell him without tears, complaints or nagging, there hereafter you propose to contribute only a certain sum toward the housekeeping.

First Cousins Hesitate Over Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am nearly 20 and for three years have been in love with my first cousin. He, too, is in love with me. We've tried avoiding each other and going with other boys and girls, but we never enjoy ourselves unless we are together.

He has been in the service for a year and a half and we corresponded regularly. Then we decided to stop writing, but that made matters worse, and we're again exchanging letters. He was home on furlough recently and we both find that we are very much in love.

We haven't told our parents of our friendships, in fact we haven't told anyone. Can you help us? Is it so wrong to love your cousin? I don't know what to do.

N.

The question of marriage between first cousins is up to the medical profession. Some authorities contend that beyond strengthening of family characteristics, the danger of such a marriage is negligible. In Egypt where the Pharoahs married their sisters, there was no marked degree of physical or mental weakness, as pointed out by historians.

All said and done you and your cousin would be happier if you would take up this question with your family physican.

Dizzy Trout Wins Ninth Game in Row by Beating Brownies

YANKS GRAB PAIR

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Detroit won the American League "August pennant" by roaring through 27 games with 19 victories at a fancy .704 pace and today had St. Louis Browns on the run within easy shooting distance of the Tigers, Yankees and Red Sox.

One over-sized horse blanket would cover the four contenders, all grouped within 3 1/2 games of first place. New York rested in second spot at the moment, only two lengths back.

Paul (Dizzy) Trout and Hal Newhouser personally accounted for 13 of the Tigers' 19 triumphs and only two of their defeats. Trout's win streak, which started in July, was stretched to nine last night by his eighth successive August victory.

Trout, who has pitched 36 complete games, stepped in to grab a 4-3 verdict over St. Louis in the opener of an important four-game set and helped win his own game with a ninth-inning single. Trout later was forced at second but the man who forced him, Doc Cramer, scored the big run on Pinky Higgins' single after an infield out.

While the Tigers and Browns prepared for their night game, the Yanks grabbed a pair from Washington, 9-4 and 4-3 behind rookies Walt (Monk) Dubiel and Mel Queen to pick up 1 1/2 games. Johnny Lindell's triple unloading the sacks ruined Mickey Haefner in the opener and Frank Crosetti's ninth-inning homer with two out downed Alex Carrasquel in the finale.

Carver of Philadelphia faces the top-seeded Pancho Segura of Ecuador today in what is conceded to be a crucial match of the quarter-final round. On the Women's side, Mrs. Virginia Kovacs of Oakland disposed of Mrs. Virginia Johnson of Chestnut Hill, Mass., after an extra set while Shirley Fry, 17, of Akron was able to trim Dorothy Head, 19, of Alameda, Calif., in three sets.

President W. G. Bramham of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues announced from his Durham, N. C., office yesterday the 43rd annual convention of the Minor loops would be held at Buffalo, N. Y., starting Dec. 3.

Lieut. Arthur Rice-Jones of Winnipeg, former goal-keeper of Western Canadian Senior Hockey teams, yesterday was reported missing in action in France.

A. E. Millsom of Weston, Ont., former secretary of the Stratford Lawn Bowling Club, emerged the winning skip of the annual merchants and manufacturers tournament at Stratford yesterday. Runner-up was the Stratford Rink skipped by M. A. Humber. Eighty rinks from all parts of Ontario competed for 42 prizes.

SQUIRES LEADING WHEN RAIN CAME

Vagaries of the weather together with an unavoidable delay of one of the cars carrying players to the scene of the game, spoiled any chances the local Columbian Squires had of making it two straight over Hastings in their Junior O.A.S.A. playdowns series at the latter town on Thursday evening.

The game did not start until approximately seven o'clock as a result of the delay in the arrival of four players, only four and one half innings were played before a spitting rain turned into a shower to conclude hostilities with the locals leading 4-2. According to the agreement reached between team managers the locals will go back to Hastings again this evening and also on Saturday if the series is evened up tonight. At present the local Squires have one game to their credit.

Going into the game without even the semblance of a warm-up Donnie Boyle really did a credible job for the locals and after a single and a homer had been counted off him in the initial canto settled away to shut out the opposition for the balance of the abbreviated contest. The locals got their runs by pairs in the second when after errors Hunter's double scored two and in the third, when Wardhaugh and Bunton scored, the latter on a fielder's choice on Boyle's smash to the infield.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Sept. 1—(CP)—Sport is fraught with perils in Windsor, Ont., obviously. Doug Vaughan of the Windsor Star relays a story of the difficulties encountered in the Ford Soccer League.

It seems that, war being what it it, a number of players in the league are not spring chickens and have to wear store ivory on their gums. The league doesn't afford the luxury of a stadium, so an old, unlighted shed is used as a dressing room. Before a game, our stalwarts take their ivories out and lay them on a shelf in the shed, and the other evening the snappers got mixed up in the dark.

According to the story, the shift wasn't noticed until the next morning when some of the players found their teeth weren't cutting the cereal properly.

Hamilton Hopes:

Now that the coach situation is settled, everything seems hunky-dory on the Hamilton football front. One of the largest turnouts in years, 62 pigskin stalwarts appeared for the initial practice. Abe Zvonkin, assistant coach, found his fling in the wrestling ring hadn't done him any harm, but he needs to get a few football muscles loosened up to get in the swing.

Incidentally:

The Dominion Government was a double winner at Hastings track in Vancouver. Race fans bought $20,000 worth of War Savings Certificates and at the same time threw enough money in the pari mutuels to produce another $9,700 in federal taxes . . . Former Montreal Canadien Paul Raymond is doing yeoman work at shortstop for Trenton, Ont., R. C. A. F. baseball squad this summer . . . Syl Apps of Olympic games and Toronto Maple Leaf hockey fame is showing the boys some pointers in third base fielding with Simcoe Army in baseball circles there . . . Canadian-born Georgie Woolf picks Walter Jeffords' Pavot as next year's champion three-year-old. Jeffors reportedly turned down an offer of $100,000 for the two-year-old hopeful . . . A horse hadn't been disqualified at Calgary's Victoria Park for 17 years until Gay Guy was given the hook the other day—for an unintentional misdemeanor at that . . .

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Roundup

New York, Sept. 1—(AP)—Yesterday this department expended considerable wordage on the problems of College and High School baseball, reaching the conclusion that the hardest one to solve is that of "snatching" undergraduate stars by professional clubs . . Today abandoning all caution, we offer our idea of a solution that might work.

Here's How

We propose that organized baseball agree not to sign school or college players until their classes are graduated . . . In return each club, major and minor, would get the privilege of selecting a certain number of boys from each year's graduating class (loan from pro football) . . In addition each club would have a "negotiation list" (loan from pro hockey) of a certain number of undergraduates, with which no other club could deal . . . There would be separate lists and drafts for high schools and colleges . . . Boys on a negotiation list at the time of graduation wouldn't go into the draft and any High School kid who was more interested in higher education than in pro ball would automatically be transferred to his club's college negotiation list.

The colleges' part of the deal would be to build up a strong baseball program, via coaching and competition, and to lend enthusiastic support to an organized summer slate that would enable the boy to keep playing until autumn instead of having to end the season before baseball weather arrives.

LEAFS NEED ONLY EIGHT OF LAST 14 REMAINING GAMES

Al Jarlett, Musatikis and Crowson Carry the Pitching Burden

CASTANO BEST BATTER

By the Associated Press

Somewhat overshadowed by Newark Bears' spectacular rise from the International League cellar has been the first-division surge of Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Leafs, dwelling in the second division for the better part of the season, started to hit the comeback trail Aug. 9 when they broke a five-game losing streak. They since have won 20 of 26 games for a meaty .769 clip, good enough to hoist them into fourth place.

Having displaced Jersey City Giants, first-division occupants for several weeks, the Leafs now are 5 1/2 games ahead and need to win eight of their remaining 14 games to assure them of at least a tie for a play-off berth.

Pitching stars of the Leafs during their sensational rise have been Al Jarlett, Alec Musatikis and Woody Crowson, each with four won, and Luther Knerr with three victories. Tony Castano, currently batting third in the league, has been an integral part of the Leafs' attack.

Scrapping to get back to the top of the heap, Newark Bears threw Joe Page against Baltimore last night and took a 6-3 decision. Page settled down to strike out 11 and never was in trouble after the first inning.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop and we started to go passed the Novelty and Trick Shop, and I said, G, pop, here's a swell chance to buy yourself one of those big black false mustashes.

I didn't know I needed one, pop said, and I said, Sure you do, pop, just think of ma's expression if you bought one and stuck it on over your own mustash and walked in the house with it. Oh boy she'd think she was seeing things, I said.

It might be too much of a shock, pop said. I'm afraid her first impression would be that I've been taking too many vitamin pills, and even when she learns that it's all a joke her first impression might linger on and she would probably hide my vitamin pills, which I am sure are doing me a lot of good, he said, and I said, Aw no she wouldn't pop, I bet she'd bust out laughing and think you were great.

But on the other hand she might think I've been suddenly afflicted with some sort of gland trouble, and she might make me go to see the doctor on general principals, and the doctor might find something really wrong with me that would never of existed otherwise, pop said. Doctors are very clever that way. Perhaps it would be more advisable for me to stop in at the florist's and surprise her by walking in the house behinf a bunch of the house behind a bunch of pop, flowers are expensive and one of those big mustashes only costs 15 cents.

I'm afraid you'll have to give me a better reason than that, pop said, and I said, Well jimminy, pop, a false mustash lasts much longer than flowers, and think of all the fun I'll have with it afterwards.

Now that's more like a good sound reason, pop said.

And he bought one on the way back and I walked in the house wearing it instead of pop, and ma laughed like anything and so did our cook Nora and so did I.

Casual Comment
by K.J.C.

Simple

During a question period following a lecture a man arose and put a foolish query to the speaker. The latter replied:

"The logic of your question makes me think of another. Can you tell me why fire engines are always red? You can't. Well, fire engines have four wheels and eight men. Four and eight are twelve. Twelve inches makes a foot. A foot is a ruler. Queen Elizabeth was a ruler. The Queen Elizabeth is the largest ship that sails the seven seas. Seas have fish. Fish have fins. The Finns fight the Russians. The Russians are Red. Fire engines are always rushin'. Therefore, fire engines are always red I hope this answers your question also."

We Lead, Others Follow.

Syd Thomas, in his Canadian Sport Snapshots the other day, related as to how six-man football was going to be the big rage in Winnipeg and other large Canadian cities this fall As for the game dreamed up by Stephen Epler, Nebraska gridder, it was first played in Canada right here in Belleville and was introduced at the Belleville Collegiate by Captain George Laughlin, now with the Canadian Artillery in Italy. Along about 1937 Mr. Laughlin, who was physical director at the B.C.I. & V.S., heard of the game being played in Nebraska and inquired as to its potentialities and upon hearing the principles of six-man football, decided it would be a real benefit in his intra-mural sports program at the Church Street seat of knowledge and from the outset the game took on until a complete four-team Senior Interscholastic group developed in Belleville with St. Mikes, B.C.I., Albert College and O.S.D. The game has advanced to such proportions in Belleville that we openly boast this city has produced the best six-man football squads in the country of late years. After all the game has been played with marked success for over seven years now and the fact Belleville secondary schools have won all Interscholastic six-man football championships since the game was introduced in Ontario by Mr. Laughlin.

With the football background gained in six-man football in Belleville secondary schools for the past few years the foundation for a good Junior O.R.F.U. team was definitely established There is a movement afoot in Central Ontario to organize a Junior O.R.F.U group with Peterboro, Lindsay, Oshawa, Cobourg and Belleville mentioned as probable starters. Rugby football mentors in Belleville feel a strong team could be mustered here as the result of training received in previous six-man football. If a Junior O.R.F.U. squad is realized in Belleville, however, the six-man football program in our secondary schools should be continued in order to keep the game alive.

Flyers in Semi-Final.

Congratulations to Charlie Box, chief sports officer at the Trenton R.C.A.F. station, who was promoted to the rank of Flight Lieutenant this week. Incidentally Flt.-Lieut Box's Trenton baseball nine journeys to Toronto next Thursday night to meet the Camp Borden airmen in the No. 1 R.C.A.F. Command baseball semi-finals. This game will be played as a preliminary diamond fixture to the International League's scheduled game between Buffalo and Toronto at the Maple Leaf Stadium The winner of this Borden-Trenton game later meets the St. Thomas Flyers in the No. 1 Command baseball championship.

With stars like George Tessier, Eddie Geraldi, Paul Raymond, Moose Matthews and other experienced diamond stars Flt.-Lieut. Box's Trenton team should cop the Command baseball championship for 1944.

Remember When

Sir Malcolm Campbell, then holder of the world's land speed record and "novice" boat driver, eclopsed Gar Wood's motorboat record at Loarno, Switzerland, seven years ago today with an average speed of 125.795 miles per hour. He boosted it to 129.416 m.p.h. the following day Capt. George Eyston also of England now holds the land record with 311.42 m.p.h. set in Nov. 1937.

Not That Bad.

Coach Gene LaBonne assures us his Belleville girls were not as bad as the Westclox-Belleville score might indicate at Peterboro. "It was just a straight case the girls had a bad case of stage fright. As you will notice the Peterboro girls scored their runs in bunches. However, I feel certain that the fans will see a real bang-up girls' softball game at the Fair Grounds Saturday afternoon when these two teams meet here in the Provincial Women's Softball playdowns," prophesied Coach LaBonne today. Incidentally Vickie Hillier and Joyce Woodhouse, who were unable to make the Peterboro trip, may possibly be the starting Belleville battery tomorrow afternoon.

Still Going.

Johnny Boyle's St. Mike's Squires ran into more trouble at Hastings last night when they were rained out. Now the Squires are forced to return to Hastings this evening and in the event of a third game they must play it on Saturday. The Belleville-Hastings winner must be ready to meet the Toronto champs. next Tuesday.

In the meantime, however, the fans can satisfy themselves with tonight's Marine-Point Anne city league saw-off at the Fair Grounds.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 470

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

It is always fair hunting when bridge players get together. Big game is likely to pop out at you from any angle. Nobody knows when or from where.

Whizzer was my partner in the south when up came this deal:

NORTH
♥10
♣K Q 4 2

WEST
♠J 6 4 2
♥J 9 6 4
♦A K 9 3
♣5

EAST
♠8 7
♥A 8 7 3 2
♦10 8 6 5 2
♣3

SOUTH
♠K 9
♥K Q 5
♦J
♣A J 10 9 8 7 6

In any deal, Whizzer does not let your interest lag. He takes you to the very brink of the falling off place. Often, he leans you over and lets you get a look at the roaring torrent below.

It is not that he is reckless. He just tries to get the most out of every hand. Sometimes he tries to get more than that. Even if it takes every rock in your sock.

At the time this popped up, our opponents were having a run of good cards. Their points were piling up against us. So, he ups and shoots the moon on this one.

The bidding went like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 C	2 S
3 C	4 C
4 NT	5 H
6 C	Pass

You are correct in thinking the four no-trump bid was untrue. South was lacking an ace for such a bid. But I am no clairvoyant. My answer was the convention for showing an ace and one king.

West started out with his best opening lead, the diamond king. East played the deuce and south dropped the jack. That decided west to switch to another suit. But which?

The next lead might decide the fate of the contract. Believing south had the heart ace, west made his second lead a small spade. Whizzer won that trick with his south nine.

After a round of trumps, he cashed his spade king and entered dummy with a trump. Dummy's remaining spades were then led from the ace down. On these, south sluffed his three hearts.

There is no moral to any of this. Who am I to look a gift horse in the hay hopper?

AT THE McCARTHY

"Weird Woman"

The late, great Lon Chaney, Sr. by reason of the vivid characterisations he brought to the screen with his horrific facial make-ups, was known during his lifetime as the "man with a thousand faces."

Now his son, Lon Chaney, is carrying on the traditions set by his father in horror picture, has won himself a title also. On completion of his starring role in Universal's "Weird Woman" with Anne Gwynne, and Evelyn Ankers now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, Lon ended up with the name of the "man with the voodoo voice."

Lon Chaney employs his unusual vocal instrumentalities with telling effect upon audiences in "Weird Woman" a mystery drama based upon the susceptibility of the human mind to the destructive machinations of superstition.

"I believe," Chaney says, "that voodoo merely is the untutored savage's realization of the power of auto-suggestion. In civilized life this has been outmoded by education.

"Development of the human mind has proved it to be the prime power for good and evil. How it is employed depends upon the individual.

"In dealing with superstitions auto-suggestion induces fear which paralyzes the mind with conflicting emotions. My natural speaking voice, if I pitch it higher under stress of mental anguish, becomes the outward expression of mental aberration.

"Projecting the voice of the supernatural, I use a trick of ventriloquism taught to me by my father: Control of the larynx produces a smothered faintly metallic tone, which sounds as though it were emanating from a mysterious loud-speaker.

"The voice of my sub-conscious mind is my "prosecuting attorney." This is the device by which the inner man is challenged; the whispering tone bearing a persuasive, cross-examinating note."

AT THE BELLE

"Passage to Marseille"

Every once in a while— all else being equal—a picture comes along that is an instant and outstanding success. Of course cast, story, direction and production must all be there in the first place. But given equal sendoffs, who can explain why one picture finds an immediate and universal audience where another as well done, may fail? Warner Bros. seems to have the answer—good timing. Remember "Casablanca" and the miracle that made Warner Bros. launch it at the very hour of our invasion of North Africa?

The same company's latest candidate for the department of good-timing is "Passage to Marseille," the new action-packed film starring Humphrey Bogart, now on the Belle theatre screen.

But "Passage to Marseille" is more than just timely. It is, as well, the story of man's courage and devotion to the cause of freedom. Lovely Michele Morgan is the romantic interest in the story featuring Claude Rains, Peter Lorre, Philip Dorn, Helmut Dantine and George Tobias.

"Bermuda Mystery" co-starring Preston Foster and Ann Rutherford is the second feature attraction. A Bugs Bunny Cartoon comedy completes the program.

"Dr. Wassell," in Technicolor

The power and scope of Paramount's "The Story of Dr. Wassell," comes to the Belle theatre this weekend and should give audiences a reason to celebrate. This fine technicolor film, produced by Cecil B. DeMille, is absorbing entertainment as it vividly reconstructs the incidents which won the Navy Cross for Commander Corydon M. Wassell for his rescue of nine wounded sailors from Java.

Tracing the experiences of this Arkansas Country doctor, played excellently by Gary Cooper, from the time he left his native state until his job was completed, the colorful motion picture abounds with action and romance. Laraine Day plays opposite Gary in the role of Madeline, a nurse in China whose photograph on a poster led the doctor to serve as a medical missionary there.

Cooper, meeting Laraine in the course of his duties, is inspired by her bravery and immediately falls in love with the beautiful nurse. But Pearl Harbor breaks with catastrophic speed and Gary foregoes professing his love in order to join Uncle Sam's navy.

The Canadian news of the day and an M-G-M colorfun cartoon precede the feature. The closing chapter of "The Phantom" serial will be exhibited Saturday matinee.

Continuous shows will be presented on Saturday and Monday.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Great Mr. Nobody"

He wants to be an adventurer, a hero, a business genius, a lover, but Eddie Albert is only "The Great Mr. Nobody" in Warner Bros.' fast-paced, gay comedy-romance which opened at the Capitol Theatre last night to great reception.

As "Dreamy" Smith, the indolent, indifferent, day-dreaming newspaper advertising salesman, Albert does a superb job in a role that specially suits his singular personality. Portraying Mary Clover, the pretty girl friend who works on the paper, is lovely young screen newcomer, Joan Leslie, Alan Hale does his usual excellent performance as a blustering, landed sea captain, "Skipper" Martin, who rooms with "Dreamy." William Lundigan is featured.

"Partners of the Trail"

A western film of particular interest is "Partners of the Trail," the Monogram frontier drama which opened an engagement at the Capitol theatre last night. Its ingenious plot forms the background for a continuous succession of exciting incidents.

The stalwart Johnny Mack Brown is starred in this action-filled picture, and makes a dashing figure as a United States marshal who embarks on a cleanup campaign in a western community. His partner is another undercover government marshal, the droll Raymond Hatton, and between them they keep events moving at a furious pace.

A colored cartoon and the serial "Captain America" makes this ideal entertainment for the entire family.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking his cigar and thinking and ma was just thinking, saying, Oh dear, I looked at my bottle of priceless Essence of Night perfume this afternoon and there are only a few final drops left to tell the tail.

Do you mean the perfume isn't on the market any more? pop said, and ma said, at nine dollars a tiny little bottle, that's how it's on the market, and I can think of more practical ways of spending 9 dollars nowadays than on an infinite tesimal bottle of Essence of Night, even if it is the only perfume I have the slightest personal feeling for. Of course I must say even a small bottle lasts me practically forever, with my sparing attitude tords perfume, and if I bought a cheaper brand I wouldn't use it at all, so that would really be extravagance personified, but still this is hardly the time and place to lay out 9 dollars for perfume, so that's the end of it and why discuss it? she said.

I noticed a perfume on sale called V-Day, pop said. Now if there's anything to mass sycology, it might shorten the war if millions of women started to use V-Day perfume, he said, and ma said, What an intristing idea, what price was it?

The same as yours, I believe, 9 dollars, pop said, and ma said, Oh really? What size bottle was it?

Oh, about the size a dwarf would design for a midget, pop said. Shall I get you a bottle? By this time they may of changed the name of it back to Essence of Night again, he said, and ma said, Now William I might of known you were just pulling the wool over my innocent eyes. Really, I mean really, I've got a good mind to order myself a bottle of Essence of Night just to prove that a joke can be carried just so far and no further.

That's quite far enough, and it's a woman's world, pop said.

Being the end of the subject.

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER 9

I telephoned the University of Virginia, where Courtney had gone to Medical school, and finally talked with a Sigma Nu who in his nice flattering way does things for a gal's ego. (AnS. N. is a bird who likes speed, whether it be in airplanes, mental achievements or flinging woo, so I knew he'd hop right to it and let me have the information I wanted.)

Then I made what many would consider a terrifying faux pas: I became what some later called: "The Post-Deb Detective." A sort of Dashiell Hammett creation in skirts or slacks.

I got out some skeleton keys and made for Dr. Courtney's room in the hotel. Though he'd been in that room only two weeks, I found it alive with his personality: there were a great many books about—Anatole France, Neitzsche. That sort. A leather traveling kit was open on the dresser, suitcases had been carefully emptied and everything had been put away neatly in dresser drawers and closets. A very neat orderly man, Dr. Wayne Courtney, and certainly a difficult one to connect with messy, skull-crushing crime that had been committed behind the boxwood hedge.

But still, couldn't a neat man like that — given a set of circumstances, a passionate rage or a long smoldering hatred—do almost anything?

I was rolling that idea around in my head, gathering a lot of moss but no brilliant illumination, When the door opened behind me. I whirled around breathless...

I whirled around breathless, feeling certain it would be Dr. Courtney who would find me in his room. But it was only the hotel maid. She had bed linen and towels draped across her arms and she looked at me with a Oh-Miss-Randolph-I-didn't know - you - were-this-kind - of - a-young-lady look. Flushing to the dark roots of her peroxided hair she discreetly put out her hand and rapped sharply on the door.

"Come in, Gertie," I said pleasantly.

Gertie was already in, of course, and this command disconcerted her for a second. She stood eyeing me uncertainly, her hands doing things with the bed linen and towels, her eyes following my haughty exit.

Countess Fanella Castigena's hotel suite was my next destination. I had never been in those two rooms before, but their eating theme was no real surprise to me. All around the tiny living room I saw the instruments associated to food: a greasy plate decorated with violets, a spoon on the grand piano, and a frying pan on the floor under the sofa. I could visualize Fanella waddling about this room with the pan in her hand, keeping whatever was in it hot for the ravenous cavern that is her stomach.

Enormous wads of chewing gum were stuck underneath the low hand-carved coffee table. There was a plate of dried-out sandwiches on a table and a pickle lay on the floor beside a magnificent secretary. I'd heard about that secretary. The Czar was supposed to have presented it to Fanella's father. When I opened its glittering flap, a large collection of photographs fell out and scattered all over the floor: great, sad-faced men looking like frustrated Mischa Auers. It was something like a shock to read the numerous inscriptions, mostly in French, on those photographs: I worship you—Boris; I cannot live without you—Olaf; Mine alone—Oleg; Kiss me, kiss me, in your dreams—Ivan. A bird named Igor had written something in Russian. I'll bet it was plenty hot. Igor looked as if he had been weaned on incendiary bombs.

It was certainly difficult to reconcile these torrid male types with the bulging Fanella, but they evidently were old flames. Then, all at once I saw a tiny pearl-framed miniature on a table at my left—and my mouth hung open!

Fanella Castigena had once been a great beauty! Carefully studying the minature I wondered if, deep down under Fanella's Pike's Peak of a bosom, romance still stirred. Had Pamela Keith in some way crossed up the Countess in a sort of Custer's last stand? I was pursuing this thought when, picking up all the scattered photographs, I ran across one of Richard Keith inscribed with the single word: BELOVED. Fanella Castigena — and Richard Keith! Had Pamela Keith taken Richard Keith, not only away from his wife, Gladys — but away from Fanella, too?

I found nothing else of interest in Fanella's rooms.

Next I knocked on Peter Gibson's door further down the corridor. Getting no answer as I hoped, I inserted my skeleton key and marched into his room.

Gibson was as neat as Dr. Wayne Courtney, but I had no time to do any searching. For as I headed toward the bureau, the hotel maid I had encountered in Courtney's room opened the door again, complete with bed linen and towels, and stood open-mouthed, her eyes on me in a wide oblique gaze.

Then her shock vanished and she was grinning.

"Come in, Gertie," I said and, being already in, she tucked her head down toward one armpit and sort of simpered.

"He's a mighty handsome gent, this Mr. Gibson, he is," observed Gertie, companionably, but I could feel suspicion or envy burning around the edges of her words. "The other one's a looker too. Doctr Courtney, I mean. But this one's younger and he's dark. I like 'em dark, don't you?"

"No," I said. "I like albinos."

"I don't go for foreigners, much" responded Gertie seriously. "Are we at war with the albinos?"

"No," I said, and tried not to laugh. "But the pigments are."

Gertie shook her head forlornly. "Those Pigments," she said, as if she knew it all. "Treacherous, that's what! Starting wars with no notice or anything!"

I managed to make my escape and, back in my own apartment I wondered just what to do next. In all the who-dunnits I'd read the amateur sleuths seemed to do a terrific amount of gadding about just (I'd suspected) to confuse the reader and themselves. Nevertheless, I decided to carry on with the gadding business and so I phoned Gladys Newcomb, got no answer, and gadded straight over to her house in Georgetown.

Without ringing, I tried the front door which, to my surprise, was unlocked. A servant could be heard using a "vac." My entry was unnoticed.

Gladys' house is huge and blatantly proud of its newness but the architecture is Georgian to blend in with the really old houses in that section. Inside I observed the details of the long drawing room because I wanted to understand Gladys. It was very feminine and lovely and extravagantly expensive and I'd docketed Gladys as a real female and loving nice things. Then I went up to her bedroom.

Tinsel is the only word for that room. Gold and pink satin, flounces and fringe. It was very Victorian and beatiful, and on her skirted dressing table was every beautifier known to woman. There was also a large framed photograph of Luke Cramer. To The Only One, the inscription said. The date was a year back, definitely before Luke had met and fallen in love with Pamela.

Searching inside a little gilt desk I found a dozen or so letters which Luke had written to Gladys. They were all postmarked Philadelphia, and they were really something. Passion always makes my toes squiggle up in my slippers, in books or the movies or on the stage—and they really squiggled as I devoured those letters. Luke had certainly been nuts about Gladys and Pamela must have been pretty potent to have lured him away from Gladys.

I was just finishing the tenth letter when I heard the vacuum cleaner start up in the drawing room downstairs, someone whistling "I love You Truly" with an air of housewifely preoccupation. I tipped out into the hall, trembling, leaned over the banisters and saw a big colored woman in the wake of the sweeper. As I stood there watching, wondering sickly how I could make my escape without detection, the front door opend and Gladys, all in black with a chubby silver-fox cape around her shoulders, came into the wide center hall.

One glance told me she'd been weeping and I knew by the way she took off her cape and little silver fox toque and ran her fingers through her lovely brown-gold hair that she was unstrung and weary with fatigue.

I heard her say petulantly: "Gardenia, don't run that thing now. My head is splitting."

The machine shut off instantly and in the next second Gladys Newcomb was mounting the stairs and wasting no time about it. I was pressed for time myself and, not using the few brains I possess, I darted back into her room without realizing I was trapping myself.

I was in that closet in Gladys Newcomb's room from two o'clock until half-past seven that night, for Gladys promptly undressed and stretched out on her sleigh bed. I don't know whether she read, slept, or just lay there twiddling her thumbs. I didn't dare try to see. I only know that I grew hotter and hotter and weaker and weaker, and that when the illuminated dial on my watch said six-thirty there was activity in the room again. The closet door swung open and I felt that a great searchlight had been directed on me.

Gladys' fingers came within two inches of my snub nose when she plucked a silver lame evening gown off a hanger. But she didn't see me. I had more or less disguised myself as one of her last year's coats hanging in the back of her closet, my hands clutching frantically at a small ledge there and my legs drawn up under me, frog-fashion, to keep my feet from showing. And to make matters worse, Gladys left the closet door open and there I hung, like a Thanksgiving turkey.

Finally, after a hundred years of this medieval sort of torture, Gladys was carefully dressed in the silver lame, a long white ermine cape over her arm. She was standing at the window, staring out into the gathering darkness, one small silver toe tapping impatiently. That she was waiting for someone was quite obvious, and I wondered who it could be.

Presently that someone came, the blare of a French horn split the night air and in the next second Gladys went into a frenzy of activity. She grabbed up gloves, purse and a long trailing white scarf. Then she clicked off the lights and left, her hurrying feet echoing through the house.

I unwound myself by degrees and with every joint creaking, went slowly into that dark bedroom, too dazed to wonder where Gladys was going and with whom. But I remembered in time, leapt to the front windows, shielding myself behind the flossy draperies and peered out. I saw Gladys step daintily into a long black coupe, a tall man in a black coat and grey Homburg holding her elbow politely to assist her. Then the man closed the coupe door, crossed in front of the bright headlights of his car — and my heart stopped.

It was Reginald!

By the time I had digested that, the black car was out of sight—and all pursuit was out of the question.

I had to chuck sleuthing that night, as well as my wet-nursing job with Sandra which I turned over to Fanella. My newspaper had been trying frantically to reach me since four o'clock. The society staff had been beaten down to a nub by the flu and Clem Barkley told me if I wanted to hold my job I'd better get over to a diplomatic reception on Sixteenth Street and write up the affair.

At nine o'clock that night I passed under the appropriately red canopy that stretched from the door of the Embassy across the driveway, and along with Government officials in silk hats, dowagers with dewlaps, diplomats ablaze with decoration, Western politicians complete with boots under the trousers of their dress suits, I entered the great crowded reception hall. And the first person I saw was Peter Gibson!

He came striding toward me, just handsome enough to unhinge my reason.

I said by way of greeting, "I haven't let out one tiny little peep, and here you are. Imagine!"

"And I was so sure you'd screamed," countered Peter grinning.

"The last time I saw you, you had a mad on," I reminded him.

"You slammed the door in my face."

"Gross exaggeration, pet! I'll admit I closed it a little on the noisy side, but slam—never! I was merely protecting my reputation."

"Your reputation!"

"I never ask girls to come up to my apartment and make love to me. If they come uninvited, on some flimsy pretext like showing me a red feather or something, I have but one recourse..."

"You cad!" I snapped—and Peter laughed and took my hand in his.

"Let's have fun," he said — and we did, lots of it — not realizing what lay in store for us later that night.

Peter Gibson and I wandered around the Embassy snagging food here, dancing there—having fun. I was amazed at the number of women who spoke to Peter and the men who clapped him fondly on the back. Important men, too. And I was annoyed by the young female octopi who were all arms reaching out to Peter, drooling and panting and generally acting pretty sloppy.

"There ought to be a law against young men who walk around giving girls heart failure," I said seething. "And there ought to be a law against girls who walk around giving men big heads. The Rose Bowl wouldn't fit over your noggin at point."

"Why, look-it," laughed Peter. "Isn't it cute when it's jealous!"

"Jealous? Phooey!" I snorted, and whipped out my little black book to make notes for my column.

"I'll cover the feminine front for you," Peter offered, and I didn't look at him. I knew he was grinning smugly.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 1 —(CP)— The mining groups advanced in the early session of the Toronto stock exchange today and other groups were slightly lower at noon. Volume was a little heavier at 341,000 shares for the first three hours.

Among the stronger golds were Giant Yellowknife, Frobisher, Conwest, Negus, Bear, Springer-Sturgeon, O'Brien, Cochenour Willans, Macassa, Wright-Hargreaves and Aubelle. Aubelle advanced 11 cents to 62.

Brazilian sold quite actively on a loss of ¼ to 21 ⅞. Other utilities were inclined to improve. Papers were steady and the foods lower. The new shares of the Canadian banks were listed today, each new share representing one-tenth of an old share. Prices showed small gains from yesterday.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 1 —(AP)— Discriminating bullishness persisted in today's stock market without touching off anything in the way of a general rally. Dealings were among the slowest for the past seven days as numerous customers left for the holiday weekend.

Trends were a shade indefinite near the fourth hour.

Canadian stocks were unchanged in dull trading.

Chicago & Northwestern Pfd. was active on the upside. In front at intervals were U. S. Steel, Southern Railway, Allied Chemical, Chrysler, American Cable & Radio, Masonite, Du Pont and J. I. Case. Occasional stumblers were N. Y. Central, Texas Co., International Harvester, U. S. Rubber and American Telephone.

HOGS

Toronto, Sept. 1. (CP)—Prices remained unchanged at Bacon-Hog Markets reporting early today. Dressed weight Grade A, Barrie $17.65, London and Hamilton $17.50, Hull $17.40, Stratford, to farmers $17.50, to truckers $17.65.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

7TH ARMY O.C. CAPTURED

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Sept. 1 —(AP)— Gen. Heinrich Hans Eberbach, commander of the shattered German 7th Army, was captured with seven of his staff officers near Amiens, headquarters disclosed today.

He had succeeded Col.-Gen. Paul Hausser, wounded during the French campaign.

Eberbach is a regular army officer, rather than an S.S. general, but has been considered a pro-Nazi.

DAY OF LIBERATION NEAR

London, Sept. 1 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill, in a message to Poland on the eve of the fifth anniversary of the German attack, declared last night the day of liberation was drawing near and "a new Poland will be born" from the sacrifice of Poles at home and abroad.

Churchill, FDR May Hold Meeting In Quebec City

London, Sept. 1 (AP) — Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt, sighting victory in Europe in the near future, will meet soon—probably this month at Quebec, it was learned today.

The purpose will be to plan the overall strategy for shifting Allied might to the task of crushing Japan —similar to the meeting of August, 1943, when the master draft for the invasion of France was approved.

This may be followed after Germany's final surrender by another session, this time including Stalin to discuss Russia's role in the Pacific war, along with Europe's future.

Hitler's Front Folding Up Like Accordion

By BILL DOWNS

(Columbia Broadcasting System Correspondent, Distributed by The Canadian Press)

With British-Canadian Forces in France, Sept. 1 — Hitler's front in northwest France is folding up like a broken accordion. Canadian troops have taken Dieppe. Belgian forces operating under the Canadian command are only some two miles from Le Havre. Other Canadian troops have pushed up the coast north of Dieppe and forward elements are in the town of Le Treport, 16 miles away. Another Canadian spearhead is only three miles from Abbeville, the big French city on the Somme river between Amien and the sea.

Farther to the east, British troops plunged northward from Amien, making 35 miles in 24 hours and now are around the city of Arras, some 27 miles from the Belgian border. It seems that the British troops are now well into the Pas-de-Calais, the main centre of Hitler's flying bomb sites.

Neither the Canadians nor the British troops are meeting anything in the way of serious opposition.

Tactics of Ring Used To Down Japanese Bomber

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—Using tactics of the prize-ring in aerial combat—clinching and infighting—a torpedo bomber piloted by Ensign Warren C. Burgess, Elgin, Ill., destroyed a Japanese fast medium bomber

The navy, reporting the incident today said that when his guns jammed Burgess literally jumped on the enemy, lowering his plane onto the Jap's wings and forcing him down to the water.

Again he nosed in for a "clinch" and chewed away at the enemy's wings with his propeller. Another time during the fantastic fight, Robert A. Bullock, Minneapolis, turret gunner on the American plane, blazed away at the enemy with a pistol.

And. Burgess then pulled alongside the Japanese bomber and waved to its pilot. The Jap didn't wave back.

Finally the American got his guns back in commission and destroyed the Jap with more orthodox means.

GOERING'S NEPHEW KILLED

New York, Sept. 1 —(AP)— The German radio broadcast a trans-ocean dispatch last night saying that Lieut. Helmut Goering, a nephew of Reichsmarshal Goering, had been killed in an aerial dogfight over Normandy.

The propaganda agency said this was Goering's "fifth nephew to be killed in action in the present war."

FINDS WEDDING RING

Sarnia, Sept. 1 —(CP)— While weeding an onion bed a few days ago Mrs. G. S. Greening noticed a glint of metal below the surface and on investigation discovered her wedding ring. It had been lost for more than seven years.

Letters From France Express Thanks For Kinsmen Cigarettes

From the flowing golden wheat fields of Northern France Gnr. Keith Wager wrote to the Kinsmen Fag Fund recently to express thanks for 300 Canadian cigarettes received during the invasion of Normandy.

"I am writing this from the centre of a wheat field in France to say I just received your gift of cigarettes, which came when I needed them most," wrote Gnr. Wager.

Then from Italy Joe Bey wrote to add his thanks to the Kinsmen for 300 cigarettes received just as his unit was going into action. CANADIANS CLEAN UP A HOT SPOT IN FALAISE, FRANCE

This series of pictures shows dramatically what happens when Allied patrols moving forward on the heels of retreating Germans run into nests of snipers left behind to hold up their advance. The pictures were made as Canadians entered Falaise in France. At top the Canadian patrol is moving down an outlying street of the town keeping close watch for snipers hidden in the battered houses. Near the intersection German bullets began to whine and the infantrymen called up a tank to help clear the area; centre left shows how a strong point was built with the tank as a shield. One of the Canucks was picked by a Nazi sniper and at centre right his comrades pick him up and dash out of range so that medical aid can be given. Lower picture supplies the climax; The German pocket has been wiped out but four Canadians are casualties and first aid is given by the remainder of the patrol while a jeep ambulance comes up to take away the wounded. This tableau has been repeated time after time as Canadians moved through French towns and villages, driving the Germans back, but encountering bitter and often fanatical resistance.—(Canadian Army Overseas Photo.)

Washington Spotlight

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 1. (CP)— Out at the testing grounds of the National Defence Research Committee Capt. E. G. Uhl, a young engineer wearing heavy pads and armor, gingerly shouldered a tube-like contraption and discharged a powerful, armor-piercing rocket grenade, and the "bazooka" was born.

That was two years ago last May but the idea was proposed to the Ordnance branch more than two years earlier by Col. L. A. Skinner who tells the story of the scourge of enemy tanks in an article, "Birth of the Bazooka", appearing in tomorrow's issue of "Army Ordnance".

Skinner was one of the many who had a hand in developing this weapon which so resembled the alleged musical instrument made famous by Comedian Bob Burns that it at once became the bazooka.

When the projectile was ready perfected there was difficulty in developing a launching weapon that could be easily handled and used by one person. Col. Skinner and his associates of the Ordnance shops produced the light tube launching device.

Draft evaders few: Attorney General Francis Biddle takes pride in the fact that since the National Selective Service draft started in October, 1940, there have been only 10,872 convictions for evasion, many of them among sects opposed to armed force. "I doubt that this record can be surpassed by any other country in the world", Biddle said.

D.C. citizens may vote: Voteless Washingtonians, deprived of their franchise in the District of Columbia by the United States constitution, are watching keenly the progress of a resolution of Republican Senator Harold Burton of Ohio, calling for a constitutional amendment which would permit citizens of the capital to vote in Maryland, the State from which the federal district was carved.

BRITISH TAKE VIMY RIDGE

Germans in Open Flight From Robot Coastal Region

Yanks Hope To Outrace Nazis to Siegfried Line

By JAMES M. LONG
(AP War Correspondent)

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Sept. 2 —(AP)— British 2nd Army forces have taken Vimy Ridge—scene of one of the greatest Canadian victories in the First Great War—it was disclosed today, while 1st Canadian Army units, driving forward from captured Dieppe, are reported probing within two miles of the vital channel port of Le Havre.

American 3rd Army armored units spearing out from captured Verdun and St. Mihiel were speeding over the line where the shooting stopped in 1918 and were only a few hours' run, at their present rate of advance, from the German border itself.

News of the fall of Vimy Ridge, near Arras, was contained in a message from Lt.-Gen. Dempsey, British 2nd Army commander, to Lt.-Gen. Crerar, leader of the 1st Canadian Army. Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, reported.

Message of Congratulation.

The message, dated yesterday, said in part: "Today you captured Dieppe and we captured Vimy Ridge—a great day for Canada."

The Americans were pushing toward the Moselle river—25 miles east of Verdun and about 30 miles from the German border, and were racing the Germans to the Siegfried line hoping to reach it before the routed German forces in France can man the fortifications in strength.

To the north and west American 1st Army and British 2nd Army troops were moving up within 20 miles of Belgium at key points along a 100-mile front and probably had reconnaissance units already across the Belgian border.

The Canadians were reported to have reached the Somme between Abbeville and Airaines, marking a 60-mile advance from Rouen in two days.

Nearing Armentieres.

The British in their new drive toward Flanders which captured Vimy Ridge, were within 20 miles of Armentieres on the French side of the Belgian border.

In the last hope of a delaying defence the Germans opened flood gates in the low countries and apparently were preparing for a large-scale withdrawal from Belgium and perhaps much of Holland.

The last of the Nazi 15th army, the guardian force of the rocket-bomb coast, was in open flight from the Pas De Calais coast, abandoning sites of known and yet unknown weapons of vengeance to which Hitler turned when hope of victory failed.

Abandonment of the Pas De Calais area clearly wrote finis to the fight for France—for the Germans would have held on there if any stand was possible long enough to permit them, at least, to get their threatened giant V-2 rockets into action.

200 Cross-Channel Shells.

Following a night-long roar of gunfire in which the Germans shot 200 cross-channel shells from their big Pas De Calais coastal guns, the English cities of Folkestone and Dover teemed with rumors that the Germans pulled out at dawn this morning from Boulogne and likely were planning to give up Calais as well.

At the same time London eased back cautiously toward normal in a flying bomb lull which suggested that although the Axis might fire a last flurry, probably the worst was over. The Germans might move their robot bases back even into the Reich, but the accuracy of these weapons would suffer and the longer runs by the robots would make Allied defensive measures more effective.

Twenty-five miles to the northwest, another U. S. 1st Army column pushed through Montcornet to Vervins, 40 miles above Reims and 12 from Belgium.

Relatively strong enemy resistance was crushed by Americans who mopped up the forest of Compiegne—armistice site of two wars—and reached the city of Compiegne. Montdidier to the northwest was taken.

Bapaume fell to the Allied push down the road from Amiens to Cambrai. The British stabbed out north and northwest from captured Arras, sending one tank spearhead toward Douai, 14 miles from Belgium, and another toward Dunkerque and its memorable evacuation beaches of 1940.

Along the lines of German withdrawal from Nancy to the Saar frontier and across Belgium and Luxembourg to Germany, Allied fighter-bombers yesterday alone destroyed or damaged 1,400 motor transport vehicles, 140 locomotives and over 800 railway cars.

Hard-pressed Germans were turning to horses for transport, and Allied airmen destroyed or damaged 250 horse-drawn vehicles yesterday. Pilots said the number of tanks seen had dropped off sharply.

The Germans still were holding out at the Brittany ports of Brest, St. Nazaire and Lorient. Their forces at Brest were estimated at 20,000 commanded by a General Ramcke, with 11,000 holding on at Lorient, and nearly 10,000 at St. Nazaire.

German Retreat No Indication Anglo-U.S. Conquest Preferred

By LEWIS HAWKINS
(AP Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 2. (AP)—It is possible that Anglo-American troops may stride into Germany as invaders before the Russians, but if they do it will not automatically prove an old and favorite theme of amateur staticians—that once the German leaders have accepted defeat as inevitable, they would "let the British and Americans in because they are afraid of the Russians".

The western Allies' current spectacular sweep through northern France, combined with the German army's stubborn stand before East Prussia and Warsaw, may seem to give fresh support to this theory, but any suggestion that the Nazis are "letting" the Allied armies in is a poor tribute to the men whose brain and brawn and bravery broke through to liberate France.

The truth is that the Germans fought savagely, and for a while effectively, to bottle the Allies within the narrow Normandy bridgehead.

They lost that gamble, and with it 400,000 of the force of about 1,000,000 men they sent out to defend the west. Now they are packing up and running fast not because they want to, but because they must.

Anyone's Guess.

How far they will run is anyone's guess. That they will be able to stop for long much short of their own border is doubtful. When they do stop, they will have something like 500,000 men plus perhaps 200,000 green youngsters and oldsters scraped up by the latest comb-out and rushed through sketchy training.

There is not the slightest doubt that no matter where or when the Germans stop, the Allies will be abe to smash through them when they are ready. It is no longer a question of being able to hold this front or that front for the Germans. It is only a question of how long they can stave off disaster.

German strength in the east is four or five times the strength in the west, but the front is longer and the Nazis' enemy is stronger in numbers there too.

If the Germans are worried about occupation forces, it probably will make little difference whether the British and Americans or the Russians enter the country first, because there is little doubt that the zones of occupation already have been agreed upon among the big three.

In addition, under Allied agreements, there can be nothing but surrender-to-one, surrender-to-all.

NEW CANADIAN FRIGATE LOCH ACHANALT COMMISSIONED

CH ACHANALT

The newest addition to the many ships being built in the United Kingdom for the Royal Canadian Navy, H.M.C.S. Loch Achanalt, Canada's second Loch-class frigate, recently was commissioned somewhere in Scotland by its new commanding officer, Lieut. Richard Hart, R.C.N.V.R., of Belleville and Brantford, Ont. Happy with their new ship are the officers shown here on the ship's quarter deck. They are, left to right: Front row: Lieut. A. Fetterly, London, Ont.; Lieut. Richard Hart, the commanding officer; Lieut. J. J. Kelly, Brantford, Ont., and Lieut. Denis Cowan, Guelph, Ont.; Back row: Lieut. James Baker, Halifax, N.S.; Lieut. Robert MacDonald, Halifax, and Sydney, N.S.; Lieut. George Johnson, Winnipeg, Man.; Lieut. Donald Anderson, Halifax, and Sydney, N.S., and Lieut. Joe Clark, Toronto, Ont.

Lt. Richard Hart, R.C.N.V.R., Commands New Frigate

CREW OF 140 MEN

Somewhere in Scotland. — In a simple and brief ceremony among the rugged hills of Scotland, H.M.C.S. Loch Achanalt, Canada's second loch-class frigate, officially became part of the Royal Canadian Navy here recently when it was commissioned by its new commanding officer, Lieut. Richard Hart, R.C.N.V.R., of Belleville, Ontario, Vice Admiral Percy W. Nelles, head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas, representatives of the Scottish ship-building company who constructed the ship, and other high ranking Canadian and British naval officers were present.

Impressive Ceremony.

Assisted by a Royal Navy chaplain, the ceremony was conducted by Rev. E. G. B. Foote, Senior Canadian Naval Chaplain overseas, on the ship's port after Oerlikon platform. The band of H.M.C.S. Niobe, Canada's only overseas naval shore establishment, was in attendance on the jetty, flanked by the ship's company and a guard of honor.

The newest addition to the many ships built in the United Kingdom for the Royal Canadian Navy, it is the latest in ship construction and armament. Similar to the castle-class corvette but slightly larger and more heavily armed, she is equipped with the most modern and effective anti-submarine equipment to come out of this war.

New Ship 330 Feet Long.

The new frigate measures 330 feet in length with a 38 foot beam. It carries a crew of 130 men and ten officers and her armament consists of six single oerlikons, two twin power-mounted oerlikons, a four-barrel pom-pom and a four-inch gun up forward.

Appropriately named after one of Scotland's beautiful lochs in the heart of the highlands where the scenery is typical of that of Northern Ontario, Loch Achanalt gained added prestige by being christened by Mrs. A. V. Alexander, wife of the First Lord of the Admiralty.

Addressing the men on the jetty and civilian dockyard workers who had gathered for the ceremony, Vice Admiral Nelles delivered a short, crisp address and told his audience that the Royal Canadian Navy "has just begun to meet the Hun, but have yet completely to beat the Hun".

"Your ship", he said, "is the newest ship in the service and I know will prove to be one of the most efficient in the service. She's a beautiful ship and well constructed. It's up to you to keep her going.

"If I had my way", he added, "you'd go out to the Indian Ocean and show the Japs how to fight, however, I trust that when you see your first sub you'll hit him hard for me".

Lt. Hart's Second Command.

Loch Achanalt is Lieut. Hart's second command. He joined the navy in Sept. 1940, received his training with the Royal Navy and served in several R.N. and Canadian ships before taking command of a Canadian corvette serving in the North Atlantic. He survived the torpedoing of an R.N. trawler in the South Atlantic during convoy duties back in 1942.

Other officers serving in the new ship are: Lieut. George Johnson, Winnipeg; Lieut. Donald Anderson and Lieut. Robert MacDonald, both of Halifax and Sydney, N.S.; Lieut. Denis K. Cowan, Guelph; Lieut. Allan Fetterly, London, Ont.; Lieut. James Baker, Halifax; Lieut. J. J. Kelly, Brantford, Ontario and Lieut. Joseph A. P. Clark, Toronto.

GERMANSOPENING FLOOD GATES IN NORTH BELGIUM

Nazis Acknowledge Forthcoming Loss of Country in Farewell Broadcast

ACTIVITY IN BRUSSELS

London, Sept 2 (CP)—The Germans acknowledged the forthcoming loss of Belgium in a startling farewell broadcast last night over the Brussels radio

Apparently preparing for flight before the Allied armies which, at the time of the broadcast, may already have crossed the border, one Nazi announcer urged the Belgians "not to show hatred against us or against those in your country who worked for us"

"I know you are friends of the British and that you are eagerly awaiting the British and American forces," said S S leader Hans Friedrich who next came to the microphone.

"Within a short while you will fill the streets of Brussels and shout 'at last, at long last, they are here, the liberators."

"You all will acclaim the Allied troops as they march through your streets. You all do that because you know that Britain has never lost the last battle

"We National Socialists, however, will face any situation. We shall have means to watch you, for we shall never give up our principles.

"One day we shall come back."

Then the Brussels radio went dead.

Unrest Growing

A Berlin broadcast has reported earlier that wounded German soldiers filled Brussels streets and that "unrest and fever" was growing among the populace.

American fighter pilots reported the enemy was opening flood gates and permitting waters to sweep over large sections of northern Belgium and southern Holland—an act that will result in extensive property damage. The Germans long have boasted of plans to flood the low countries in the path of any invasion armies.

From Associated Press war correspondent William Smith White came a story of grim brutality—of 14 French male civilians of Plomion, France, near the Belgian frontier, murdered and dismembered by the German garrison of the town before fleeing.

Along the channel coast the Germans fired their big coastal guns last night in a sharp duel with their British counterparts on the opposite shore near Dover—a flurry that may be their last.

BRITISH BREACH GOTHIC LINE ON 20-MILE FRONT

Complete Destruction Of All German Troops In Italy Will Soon Be Accomplished

CANADIANS IN ACTION

By George Tucker
(Associated Press War)
Correspondent

Rome, Sept. 2-(AP)-British 8th army troops have broken the Nazis' vaunted Gothic line in Italy along a 20-mile front, opening the gates to the PO Valley, Allied headquarters announced today, and a spokes man declared it was only a matter of time before complete destruction of all German forces in Italy will be accomplished.

British, Canadian, Indian and Polish infantry are taking part in the advance which has penetrated miles, a communique said.

It was the first disclosure that to a depth of from three to four Canadian infantry was in action following their exploits in aiding the Allied break-through the Gustav and Hitler line and drive for Rome, in late May and early June.

Entered Battle Aug. 24

Canadian press war correspondent Doug How said the Canadians entered battle Aug. 24, and crossed the Metauro River late the following day to advance on the Gothic line from positions some 11 miles distant.

The Gothic line operation is the last phase in the Italian campaign. The fortificatons there represent the next to the last prepared German position of depth and importance in Italy.

While 8th army troops broke through the bristling defences near the Adriatic to a depth of four miles, the Allid 5th army crossed the Arno river from Florence west to the sea.

Heavy fighting raged along the front as the Germans threw in reinforcements.

A communique said 8th army troops, sweeping forward from the Metauro river Aug. 26, fought their way 15 miles through difficult country "and have now broken through the enemy's elaborately prepared defenses."

"Thus," the communique added, "The last enemy prepared defence line south of the river PO has been successfully breached.

Throughout the operations, the announcement said, "The 8th army has been ably supported by its old associate of past victories, the Desert Air Force."

Americans Reach Charleville

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Sept. 2 (AP—Battlefront dispatches reported today that the U.S. 1st army had reached Charleville and Hirson and within five to eight miles of Belgium, on a 30-mile front west of Sedan.

7 MILES INSIDE ITALY

New York, Sept. 2 (CP)—American troops striking east of Nice in Southern France are already 7½ miles inside Italy, and have captured Ventimiglia, BBC, heard by CBS, said today.

BRITISH PUSH TO LENS

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Sept. 2 (AP)—British forces thrust 15 miles northeast of Arras to Douai, pushed eight miles northwest of Arras over historic Vimy Ridge to Cambigneil, and thrust patrols to Lens and Pernes within 18 miles of Armentieres and Lille, headquarters said.

Break With Germany Predicted

The government of Field Marshal Mannerheim, President of Finland, was reliably reported to have taken a decision to break completely with Germany.

The newspaper Aftonbladet said the Finnish parliament, meeting in a special session this afternoon will ask sanction of such a decision.

A source usually well informed on Finnish questions said "it seems likely that the break with Germany will be declared by tomorrow.

With the 1st Canadian Army in France, Sept. 2. (CP-Reuters)—Canadian armored elements reached the Somme during the night just north of Abbeville and Polish armor rushing upon the Canadian left flank is almost to the river.

There are no signs of a German stand near the mouth of the Somme as the German positions there are already outflanked by the spectacular British armored drive far to the east.

The triangle running from the mouth of the Somme up to Abbeville and then west to Treport has not been cleared of the enemy.

Three bridges at Abbeville have been captured and armor is poised to rush on beyond the river.

Despite the hopelessness of their position, the Germans in Le Havre are expected to make suicide stand and Allied troops are now preparing to invest the city.

These troops are just short of Harfleur, which is on the outskirts of Le Havre.

In the last three days the Germans have made demolitions in Le Havre, blowning up installations.

The only actual fighting on the entire Canadian front yesterday was near Abbeville where armor encountered an enemy pocket and a sharp clash ensued.

The Canadian army is capturing on an average of from 2,000 to 3,000 prisoners a day.

RIOTERS DEMAND BULGARIADECLARE WAR ON GERMANY

Russian Army Faces That Country From Black Sea to Danube River

ROMANIA FREE OF NAZIS

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Sept. 2. (AP)—Demands that Bulgaria declare war on Germany were shouted in the streets of Sofia by rioters battling police, Moscow heard today, as the Red Army faced the frontiers of that Balkan country from the Black Sea to the Danube River ferry crossing between Giurgui and Ruse, 140 miles inland.

The tensest moment of the war had struck for Bulgaria, whose Premier Ivan Bagrianov resigned while his peace envoys were conferring with representatives of Great Britain and United States in Cairo.

(Reports from Cairo said the resignation caused a suspension of the armistice talks, which had entered the preliminary phase. Apparently they will not be resumed until a new government is formed. A Cairo report said Bagrianov might form a Leftist government and continue the conversations.)

Russians armored columns which had secured the Ploesti pipeline terminus at Giurgiu were only 355 miles northeast of Sofia and 150 miles east of Yugoslavia. Germans in Southern Yugolavia and Greece were declared in direct peril if Bulgaria capitulates.

Romania Free of Nazis.

(The Swiss radio said in a broadcast heard at New York that Rumanian communique said that "Romania is free of German troops".

(Col.-Gen. Geza Lakatos, newly-appointed premier of Nazi-occupied Hungary declared in a domestic broadcast over the Budapest radio reported by the Unites States office of war information that "everything will be done to use our forces"

Canadian Dairy Herds Contribute Whey for Penicillin Production

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Sept. 2 (CP)—The dairy herds of Canada, with a major part in feeding the nation, have become its healers as well.

Agriculture department officials today told how whey, the part of milk that remains liquid when the rest forms curds, has contributed to the production of the life-saving drug penicillin.

An increased demand for whey developed last year as penicillin output got under way in Canada. It is employed in making lactose, used in preparing the drug. Penicillin production has been increasing and the deep culture most manufacturers now adopt requires even more lactose than earlier methods.

An agricultural supplies board report said that six cheese factories in Eastern Ontario early this year were selling up to an average of 200,000 pounds of whey a day and it was estimated the sales now run about 300,000 pounds.

The latter quantity would produce about two tons of lactose and four tons of whey powder. It was understood a substantial part of this production went for medical supplies, as medical research workers have been studying the use of whey powder in treating wounds.

The new demand for whey posed a problem for the board in some cases, the report said. While the essential need for penicillin was acknowledged, the value of whey as a feed for hogs and whey powder for use in poultry and livestock feeds could not be overlooked because of the tight livestock feed situation.

"It was possible however, to make arrangements under which, while lactose was made available in sufficient quantities for the manufacture of penicillin, farmers who wished could still obtain from cheese factories the whey they required for feeding hogs and whey powder was also made available for poultry and livestock," the report said.

Officials said additional cheese factories were anxious to sell their whey under similar arrangements but processors had found their needs were being met.

BAT CAUSES FLURRY IN LIPSON'S STORE

Maybe it was the advertising, or perhaps the thing was "just looking around."

In any event an uninvited customer to the Lipson Sale the other day was a large bat, which flew in and about the main floor oblivious to the frightened cries of women customers and the amused grins of the male species.

Main floor commandoes, armed with brooms sought to evict the furry visitor. One of them, after several sorties through, and around the counters, finally brought it low with a well-aimed broom handle.

Then, to the surprise of all, a saleslady calmly walked to the prostrate body of the winged invader, picked it up and quietly removed it from the scene of combat.

LARGE ONIONS GROWN IN QUINTE DISTRICT

Dry and hot weather experienced in the Bay of Quinte district the past summer may not have been conducive to good pastures, hay and grain crops, but at least it seems to have served for the growing of large onions. Mr. James Halladay, R.R. 7, reports harvesting a large onion from his garden measuring 15 inches in circumference.

Killed in action Feb. 1943 during an R.C.A.F. bomber raid to Cologne, Sgt. Grant Longwell, son of Mrs. Donald Longwell of Foxboro, is resting with the other five members of his crew at Vinlo, Holland, his mother has been informed through International Red Cross channels. A wireless air gunner, Sgt. Longwell went overseas in the spring of 1942 and had been on operations only for a brief period when he was reported missing.

Well and popularly known throughout Sidney township and in Hastings county, Sgt. Longwell took great interest in the welfare of the farmer and took an active part in agricultural organization. A devout Presbyterian he was active in church work and was superintendent of his Sunday School prior to his enlistment.

Carrying with him into the Air Force the same personality which had made him popular with rural and urban residents in the district, Grant had been instantly accepted by all in the service. Indicative of this high esteem is the tribute written by Flight Lieut. Noble Hatton, chaplain of the bombing squadron of which Grant was a member.

"I got to know Grant very intimately at wireless school at Guelph," wrote the padre to Mrs. Longwell. "I assure you he remained the good lad you thought him to be. He had such a fine mind and such good ideas about life. He was one of those lads who had a worthwhile object in taking part in this awful war. Moreover he was a good W.A.G. The fact that he was chosen to fly with our wing commander is proof of that fact."

Highly Respected

"He was very quiet and yet as the lads got to know him they respected him highly. He was one of the most regular lads in his attendance at church, which was entirely voluntary. He was very keen on his job and along with his crew always ready to be on operations. I was with them while they were preparing for their trip to Cologne that night of February 14th. And he was in the best of spirits. We never heard any further word from them. A group of us waited up most of the night expecting some message from them but gradually had to admit that they were "missing."

"I hesitate to add any further word—words are such empty things at such a time—and I realized that it is impossible to lighten your heartache — May I again assure you that his friends over here are carrying on with a grim determination to achieve that for which Grant and you and so many others have sacrificed so much."

Surviving Grant are his mother, three sisters, Jean, at home, Mrs. Graham MacNae, Ottawa, and Mrs. Clare Finkle of Foxboro; and two brothers, MacLaren of Port Colborne, and Ronald, at home.

FO. William B. Sargent Buried in Scotland

Impressive funeral rites were observed recently at Rosskine cemetery, Invergordon, Rosshire, Scotland, when fifteen victims of a bomber crash were buried with full military honors.

Among the dead was Flying Officer William Benedict Sargent, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Sargent, 2nd. Concession of Sidney.

Flying Officer Sargent was born in Sidney township and attended public school there. He later graduated from Belleville Collegiate Institute and went to Queen's University where he later received his degree of Bachelor of Science. Leaving college he became associated with the Wright-Hargreaves Mine at Kirkland Lake, remaining there until the time of enlistment in 1941.

Joining the R.C.A.F he trained in various air stations of Canada receiving his observer's wing at Jarvis. From here he was posted to the Queen Charlotte Islands B.C., and went overseas in May of this year.

The fatal accident occurred on August 15th.

City Organizations Plan For Victory Celebration Following Germany's Defeat

When the long-awaited Day of Victory arrives, and the cessation of hostilities in a war-torn Europe is announced, five years of pent-up emotions will be, in all probability, loosed in a flood of celebration unheard of since that memorable Armistice Day of November 11, 1918.

The potentialities and probabilities of such a celebration are perhaps, beyond conjecture at the present. When the great import of the news strikes home, when war-suppressed feelings seeking an outlet, "fan out" in a surge of celebration, far reaching effects may be apparent.

However, organizations and associations of the city are ready. Working quietly behind closed doors for the past few weeks, the Retail Merchants' Association; Manufacturers' Association; the city council; service clubs; school boards; ministerial association; St. Michael's parish representatives, and municipal authorities, have perfected a tentative program that embraces the many phases that should be included in general celebration plans.

Cognisant of the fact that the "great news" may come at any hour of the day or night, the committee, formed of representatives of the above-mentioned organizations, has so arranged the Victory Program that its various parts may fit in with the hour of the arrival of the news.

Other cities and municipalities have announced that they are ready for the "Great Day." Belleville has fallen in line and will be ready to appropriately observe it.

Details of the plans of celebration will be announced in the press later.

Residents of the city and district, however, are requested not to assume the attitude that this committee is already aware of the date of the day of victory. It may be a few days; it may be a month or a few months, or perhaps a year or two. The fact is, that whenever it falls, the city is ready to stage properly and fittingly an organized plan of celebration, in which, there is not the slightest shadow of a doubt, every resident will want to participate.

Another 'Secret Weapon' Sent Against England

London, Sept. 2 —(CP)— The Germans sent another "secret weapon" flying against Britain Friday night—apparently a makeshift application of the old pick-a-back plane idea—which caused neither casualties nor damage.

The Air Ministry and the Ministry of Home Security tentatively labeled it a "composite aircraft" and made no amplification of this brief communique: "Last night two enemy aircraft believed to have been lower components of composite aircraft were launched against this country. These caused neither casualties nor damage."

Late last month a German composite aircraft encountered in France consisted of a Junkers-88 bomber "married" to a Messerschmitt 109 fighter in the pic-a-back fashion that had been tried out years previously.

Fighter and bomber take off together with their total of three engines running, the Junkers being remotely controlled by the Messerschmitt pilot. At the appropriate moment the fighter pilot releases the explosive-laden Junkers to glide or fly under its own power until it crashes on its objective.

The freak was not regarded seriously here as a major air weapon because it is slow and unwieldy and an easy target.

It was considered here that the composite aircraft definitely could not be the Nazis' threatened "V-2" reprisal weapon and not even in the same league with "V-1," the flying bomb.

Late last month one of the pick-a-back planes was encountered off a British beachhead in Normandy. An R.A.F. pilot shot it down into the sea and Capt. A. C. Lewis of the British army, who watched it from a beach anti-aircraft post declared "it made a colossal splash but that's all."

RIOTERS DEMAND

to resist Romanian attempts to regain northern Transylvania. The Romanian army has begun such operations, the BBC said in quoting a Bucharest report.)

Eastern Front Quiet.

As the fuse in the Balkan power keg sputtered, threatening to destroy the Germans in a sudden explosion, the far-flung eastern front in Poland and the Baltic lapsed into uneasy quiet.

For the first time since Premier Stalin's tremendous summer offensive started, Soviet commanders for the most part reported only reconnaissance activity.

The Russian war bulletin said, however, that Red Army forces had captured a dominating height in a lightning thrust against the Germans near Praga, Warsaw's eastern suburb, and held it against counterattacks that cost the Germans two infantry companies.

(A dispatch from Associated Press War Correspondent Joseph Morton in Buharest said a great demonstration took place yesterday as the Red Army arrived with Romanian prisoners from Stalingrad. The former prisoners paraded before great crowds in the heart of the city.)

Conclusion of a formal armistice between Russia and Romania was expected soon.

Romanian armistice delegates in Moscow said their country had paid a tremendous price for their alliance with Hitler, with estimated of army casualties placed as high as 1,000,000.

VICTORY PATTERN EMERGING AFTER FIVE WAR YEARS

British Empire Looks Back Over Hard Road Travelled Since War Declaration Sept. 3, 1939

By STUART UNDERHILL.
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Five years of war—years with a heavy burden of hard blows, disappointments and suffering—lie behind the British Empire, while ahead the pattern of victory emerges more vividly with each new blow at Germany.

Looking back on other anniversaries of the day Britain went to war—Sept. 3, 1939—followed rapidly by the Dominions, the people of the Empire can see how their fortunes turned, though just where that turning-point was none could say.

There was that Sunday when the tired voice of the late Prime Minister Chamberlain reached by radio into millions of homes with the word that sent the Empire's sons to war with Germany for the second time in less than 25 years.

News reports of the day record that the people went to war grimly, as well they might had they known what the coming year held—the fall of Poland, Norway, France, Denmark and the Low Countries.

The first anniversary of war found Britain shaken but still standing doggedly under a rain of German bombs. Behind her the Commonwealth rallied its strength, and settled down to the task that lay ahead.

By the time another year had rolled around such men as Canada's Lt.-Gen. McNaughton and Britain's Lord Halifax were predicting with assurance that an Allied invasion of Europe would come—some day.

But Prime Minister Churchill was telling the House of Commons that Hitler "still retains the initiative" and Russian cities were falling so rapidly before Germany's sudden drive to the east that Hitler himself was proclaiming Russia was "already broken and will never rise again".

Road to Victory.

Sept. 3, 1942—The Germans were still advancing in Russia, and were nearing a city called Stalingrad. In Egypt they were almost in the Nile Valley, wincing outside El Alamein from an audacious attack by the British 8th Army which was to roll them back across the desert and eventually out of Africa.

Sept. 3, 1943, —British and Canadian troops stepped off from Sicily to invade Italy. The Red army was advancing in Russia, heavy American bombers were flying from British bases to help the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. pound Germany, and the evil threat of the U-boat had been all but conquered in the Atlantic.

Now the fifth anniversary has come, full of the promise that it may be the last to be observed while the war in Europe is still in progress.

Germany is reeling under heavy blows from east and west and south amid increasing signs that the Allies soon may be able to turn from one fallen enemy to strike in full force at Japan, and eliminate the last remaining member of the once-dreaded Axis.

Americans Close In on Lyon

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, Sept. 2 (AP)—Despite scattered rains that hampered progress in some areas, American and French columns of the 7th Army were closing in steadily today on the great French City of Lyon, where the retreating Germans were reported feverishly digging rear-guard positions in an attempt to slow their pursuers.

Lt.-Gen. Patton's headquarters said heavy motor movements continued in the roads north and northwest of the City, as the Nazi command sought to escape from the jams of an Allied trap closing in from both the north and south.

An Allied headquarters announcement said the count of prisoners taken since the landing in southern France exceeds 55,000, or which French troops captured 35,000, including 15,000 at Marseille and 10,000 at Toulon.

On the eastern edge of the invasion front Allied troops have entered Contes, eight miles northeast of the captured Riviera resort town of Nice.

POLICE BLOTTER

Local Man Arrested For Upsetting Garbage Pails

The practice of purposely knocking over garbage pails to have the contents strewn about city streets causes no end of annoyance, as well as littering the streets with unsightly refuse. Last night police were patrolling Front St. when a loud noise was heard, indicating a can had been knocked over. Police were on the alert and apprehended a man, who they say gave his name as E. K. May, 329½ Front St. Police assert May pushed over a garbage pail strewing the contents about the main thoroughfare. Today May was charged under the city by-law and will appear Tuesday for hearing.

Complaints reached police Friday afternoon indicating a man was panhandling in the downtown area. Later Joseph Turcott, no address, was taken into custody and held on a charge of vagrancy.

Police were called to a downtown restaurant late Friday night where a disturbance was reported. Investigations subsequently resulted in one Robert Desgroseillers, Quebec, being held on a common vagrancy charge.

A number of inebriates were apprehended wandering about the business section of the city last night and were held until capable of returning to their homes. One was attempting to gain entrance to the Bell Telephone office building when arrested. All will be charged with intoxication.

Hearing loud voices from the vicinity of Victoria Park shortly after three o'clock Saturday morning police investigated to find three 'teen-aged Trenton lads loitering about the park. They were held until such time as they could be returned to Trenton.

Bishop To Retire As Director Of RCAF Recruiting

Ottawa, Sept. 2. (CP)—Air Marshal W. A. (Billy) Bishop, V.C., Canadian flying ace of the last war with 72 victories, will retire shortly from active service as director of recruiting for the R.C.A.F.

Air Minister Power, in announcing Friday night that the famed airman will retire "later this fall" said he will be appointed to the reserve of officers and will be subject to recall should his services be required.

Meanwhile, Air Marshal Bishop said in a press release that he felt he had accomplished all he could usefully do for the service and that he should yield to pressure put on him to return to his personal affairs as vice-president of McColl-Frontenac.

Maj. Power said he agreed "with reluctance" to Air Marshal Bishop's suggestion that he retire.

"The Air Marshal has taken the position that since recruiting has been suspended, there is no further necessity for him to retain his post as director of Air Force Recruiting", said Maj. Power.

Mr. Power emphasized that the services performed by the Air Marshal extended "far beyond" the requirements of his position. He added that Canada has cause to be "even more grateful for his contribution to the development of the R.C.A.F."

Temperatures In August Highest Since 1934

If it is any consolation to those who found the sweltering heat of August too much for them, temperatures that month reached the highest point since 1934, Public Utilities Commission figures reveal.

The mercury soared during the month just past to 93 degrees on the hottest day. In August 1934 the highest daily temperature was one degree more.

The highest average August temperature during the past ten years occurred in 1937 when it reached 83 degrees. In 1944 it was 82 degrees.

The August of 1935 proved the driest with only .46 inches of rainfall as compared to .89 inches last month.

August water filtration at the Belleville Purification Plant established an all time record this year, reaching the figure of 99,580,900 gallons as compared to 73,684,400 gallons in 1934.

Water pumped to the city in August of this year was increased by over 13,000,000 gallons over the same period in 1943.

BRITISH BREACH

Without naming any towns captured, the bulletin said that in the centre other 8th army troops had made "very important gains."

American troops of the 5th army, who had been largely idle except for patrol action since they swept to Livorno (Leghorn) and the Arno river weeks ago, jumped the stream and plunged forward, menacing at several points west of Florence historic Pisa near the coast.

The main American drive. however, was said to be toward high ground north of Florence which must be taken before the 8th and 5th armies can gain their final objectives.

Air Force in Strong Support.

The Mediterranean Allied Air Force gave strong support to the offensive. Last night bombers hit railyards at Bologna on the Brenner Pass line in northern Italy.

The attack that broke the back of the gothic line was launched on a 20-mile stretch west from Pesaro, Adriatic port. The heaviest fighting in that area began two days ago.

A secret concentration of 8th Army forces in the Adriatic sector before the push began in rough mountain country was termed here one of the classic manoeuvres of the war.

A front dispatch from Associated Press war correspondent Lynn Heinzerling said that the 8th transferred many divisions, thousands of guns and vehicles and tons of ammunition and equipment from central Italy to the Adriatic sector "to the complete mystification of the Germans."

He said the attack was so heavy and unexpceted that it caught the Germans still unpacking some of their mines and making a routine relief of one of their tired divisions.

"Even now the full story of the army's migration—a movement far greater than that which preceded the assault on Cassino and the Gustav line—cannot be told," Heinzerling wrote, adding

"One day 11,000 vehicles passed over the roads. Tank transporters, running day and night through heat and dust, travelled 60,000 miles. Planes were used to watch traffic on the roads and report jams promptly."

Heinzerling said that Prime Minister Churchill visited the front with Lt.-Gen. Leese and Gen. Alexander ,ano watched the progress of the first day's battle from an observation post near the Metauro River.

Mr. Churchill saw the troops moving in for an attack aimed directly at the richest part of Italy.

Wilbert Mumby Elected President Marmora Legion

Marmora. (Special.) — Wilbert Mumby, a former president of the branch, was elected president of Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion at a meeting held in the Council Chamber on Wednesday evening. Other officers elected were 1st Vice President, Cyril Tandy; 2nd Vice President, Norman Hipson; Committee, Nathan Mumby and Joseph Darrah; Sergeant at Arms—Albert Bartlett.

The appointment of Secretary-Treasurer will be made by the executive. District Commander George Gimblett who was present was asked to preside for the session. Also present were Zone Commander Bob Hotrum and Patrick Burke of the Peterborough executive. Eight applications for membership were received as well as two for reinstatement. One initiation and the two reinstatements were later carried out. This was followed by the election and installation of officers in which the three Peterborough comrades took part.

A past president's badge and also a blue blazer with the crest of the Legion upon it, was presented to the retiring president, Thomas E. Pritchard, who recently was moved to Peterborough. Besides voicing his thanks for the honor paid him, Comrade Pritchard congratulated each new officer personally on his election to office and expressed best wishes for the welfare of the branch. The newly-elected president then appointed a committee to act jointly with a committee from Marmora L.O.L. 319 in the endeavor to hold a street dance in the near future. The remainder of the meeting was spent in discussion with the District Commander of various matters pertaining to the welfare of the Legion.

Five Years of War

Five years have passed since that memorable Sept. 3rd., 1939. Five years of blood, sweat, toil and tears" have been the lot of the British people since the day when the greatest Empire in the world accepted the challenge of brute force and tyranny and marshalled her forces to combat the fanatical aspirations to world domination of the Beast of Berchtesgaden. Ripples of great events have stirred the Martian water that has flowed under the bridge in that time.

Hitler's troops, proud, arrogant, flushed with conquest, with visions of world-mastery within their grasp, swept through those countries which dared to stand in their way. Poland, Belgium, the Netherlands, Norway, Denmark and France bowed before the mechanical might of the invader. The Balkans, excepting Yugoslavia and Greece, outstanding examples of Fifth Column efficiency, swung their weight to the pendulum of Nazism.

* * *

Hitler and his generals stood on the Calais coast. Across that narrow strip of Channel water lay the white cliffs of Dover, stepping stone to the goal of German hatred. Mighty Britain was there for the taking. In the tight little island were approximately one hundred tanks, a few pieces of artillery and a few hundred planes. But also there were the British people, fired with indomitable courage, a love of country and a determination to resist the invader to the last drop of British blood.

But Hitler hesitated. Perhaps in a small corner of his lust-sated brain there lay an atom of respect for the fighting qualities of the British. This hesitation, experts say, was his first great blunder of the war. He turned to another phase. The vaunted Luftwaffe "cat" undoubted master of continental skies, attempted to "play" with the R.A.F. "mouse." "Never in the history of human conflict was so much done for so many by so few." The story of the R.A.F. in the devastating blitz of 1940, when it met and defeated an enemy many times its numerical superiority, is an epic of heroism that will blaze forever across the undying pages of British history.

Then, it is recorded, Hitler made his second great mistake. He invaded Russia. The Red armies, battered and bloody, were forced back to the very gates of Moscow. The Battle of Stalingrad is a glowing tribute to the courage and tenacity of Russian arms.

* * *

Then the foul attack on Pearl Harbor. Like Italy, the "Jackal of Europe," Japan, plunged the knife of treachery into the back of an unoffending nation. America awoke. The United Nations merged into a common whole that slowly but surely assumed the proportions of the most gigantic striking forces the world has ever seen.

Now at the close of this fifth year of the war, the sands of victory, starting slowly, are turning to the opposite side of the hourglass of war in a quickening tempo.

The Russian steam-roller is thundering across former Hitlerian satellite states to the threshold of Germany. In France, the Allied invaders, allotted by Hitler himself nine hours and no more, have been there twelve weeks. They have whittled Nazi armies down to one-third their original strength. They are sweeping at full pace, after liberating Paris, over the old battlefields that the German army so bitterly defended in the last war.

* * *

Friday's dispatches state that Americans are at the Belgian border. Canadian troops took Dieppe, the same regiments that won undying fame in the raid on that coastal city earlier in the war marching unopposed through cheering French crowds.

British armies are striding forward along the coast north of the Seine and the entire German military might in France is in headlong retreat. Khaki-clad soldiers are staging, in startling reverse, the world-shaking drama that was enacted in 1940 with Hitler's field-gray hordes in the title role.

Now, with Allied guns within range of German border cities, one wonders what Europe's arch-criminal and his underlings are thinking. The things that were to be, as told the German people, are not the things that present events are shaping. Der Fuehrer has urged his troops and those who supply them, to "fight to the last." But the chance to fight to the last is not, and he knows it is not, the reward Hitler promised his sheep and his wolves for twelve years of hunger, crime and horror. It is too late for the dream he promised them to come true. Allied victory is on the march in France, the Balkans, on Russia's northern front, but she has a companion. With her marches a figure in bright armor, with a flaming sword whose name is Justice.

Au Revoir

Mr. Harry Moore, genial editor and owner of the Trenton Courier-Advocate, has written "thirty" to a colorful newspaper career. He has laid down the shears and the paste-brush for the last time. On October 1st a new management takes over the destinies of the popular district weekly

The Fourth Estate can ill afford to lose the services of men like Harry Moore. For he was a man's man, and as such was popular not only with those of the profession, but with all with whom his vocation brought him in contact.

His was a rare homespun philosophy born of an intimate knowledge of human nature. For Harry knew people. He made that his business. He lived close to nature and his keen mind was always alert for the simple things that go to make the life of the ordinary human being. A keen creative ability, and the rare faculty of being able to put in words the ever changing pictures of life as he saw them, earned for him a high place in the ranks of weekly editors.

A fine sense of humor; and an engaging personality are some of the Moore personal characteristics. He has a great love of sport—and respect for sportsmanship.

His writing bespoke the man. Editorial versatility enabled him to write in that easy flowing style on subjects as variable as the stars. The "Walt Mason" of the weeklies "Uncle Hy" as he dubbed himself, contributed weekly prose-poems that were splendid examples of homely philosophy. Large metropolitan dailies often quoted him. For his was not the ornate typewriter eloquence of the distinguished columnist, but rather that of a newspaper man, who is close to his fellows; who knows their fortunes and misfortunes, their tears and their smiles.

Harry Moore will be missed in the newspaper profession. The weeklies will miss him. And we, of the dailies, realize that with his editorial passing, there has been created a vacancy that will be hard to fill.

Hold to Ethics

(Netherlands Bulletin)

Holland's doctors have disregarded the consequence of opposition to the occupation authorities, by openly denouncing Nazi efforts to force them to discard medical ethics.

The doctors declared that "serious facts again force us to send you a joint letter."

The letter reveals that the Nazis have been imprisoning doctors for refusing to disclose professional secrets; for refusing to sanction the unauthorized removal of patients from hospitals and mental institutions to "unknown destinations," and for treating members of the underground.

The Making of a Glider

A CG-4A glider has more than 70,000 parts, says William H. Nicols in the National Geographic. Every single item, down to the tiniest aluminum rivet, must be inspected before it is installed. This includes the raw materials that go to the subcontractors. A magna flux inspection apparatus detects hidden flaws in nuts, bolts and similar parts. Gliders must be safe for soldiers to ride in. The original CG-4A glider design has been altered and improved more than 7,000 times.

About now Adolf must have a more understanding fellow-feeling for the middleman who is about to be eliminated.

JUST FOLKS

THE WEATHER

From first to last throughout the year
Not many perfect days appear.
In winter, often we are told
For comfort it is much too cold.

And when at last comes spring again
Men grumble loudly at the rain.
When will the summer sun break through
And give us cloudless skies of blue?

Then summer! As the days slip by
We find the weather much too dry.
Farmers and city folk complain
And wish and watch the skies for rain.

Few perfect days! The golden fall
A little while entrances all;
A final blaze of bronze and red!
Then frost—and winter just ahead.

Food Was Scarce in Paris Under Nazis But There Was No Starvation

By ERNIE PYLE

Paris—(by wireless)—Eating has been skimpy in Paris through the four years of German occupation, but reports that people were on the verge of starvation apparently were untrue.

The country people of Normandy all seemed so healthy and well fed that we said all along: "Well, country people always fare best, but just wait till we get to Paris. We'll see real suffering there."

Of course the people of Paris have suffered during these four years of darkness. But I don't believe they have suffered as much physically as we had thought.

Certainly they don't look beraggled and gaunt and pitiful, as the people of Italy did. In fact they look to me just the way you would expect them to look in normal times.

However, the last three weeks before the liberation really were rough. For the Germans, sensing that their withdrawal was inevitable began taking everything for themselves.

There is very little food in Paris right now. The restaurants either are closed or serve only the barest meals—coffee and sandwiches. And the "national coffee", as they call it, is made from barley and is about the vilest stuff you ever tasted. France has had nothing else for four years.

If you were to take a poll on what the average Parisian most wants in the way of little things, you would probably find that he wants real coffee, soap, gasoline and cigarettes.

• •

Eating is the biggest problem right now for us correspondents. The Army hasn't yet set up a mess. We can't even get our rations cooked in our hotel kitchens, on account of the gas shortage.

So we just eat cold K-rations and 10-in-1 rations in our rooms. For two days most of us were so busy we didn't eat at all, and on the morning after the liberation of Paris some of the correspondents were actually so weak from not eating that they could hardly navigate.

But the food situation should be relieved within a few days. The Army is bringing in 3000 tons of food right away for the Parisians. That is only about two pounds per person, but it will help.

In little towns only ten miles from Paris you can get eggs and wonderful dinners of meat and noodles. Food does exist, and now that transportation is open again Paris should be eating soon.

• •

Autos were almost none-existent on the streets of Paris when we arrived. That first day we met an English girl who had been here throughout the war, and we drove her for some distance in our jeep. She was as excited as a child, and said that was her first ride in a motorcar in four years. We told her that it wasn't a motorcar, that it was a jeep, but she said it was a motorcar to her.

Outside of war vehicles, a few French civilian cars were running when we arrived but they were all in official use in the fighting. All of these had "FFI" (French Forces of the Interior) painted in rough white letters on the fenders, tops and sides.

Although it appears that the Germans did conduct themselves fairly properly up until the last few weeks, the French really detest them. One woman told me that for the first three weeks of the occupation the Germans were fine but that then they turned arrogant. The people of Paris simply tolerated them and nothing more.

The Germans did perpetrate medieval barbarities against leaders of the resistance movement as their plight became more and more desperate. But what I'm driving at is that the bulk of the population of Paris—the average guy who just gets along no matter who is here—didn't really fare too badly from day to day. It was just the things they heard about, and the fact of being under a bullheaded and arrogant thumb, that created the smoldering hatred for the Germans in the average Parisian's heart.

You can get an idea how they feel from a little incident that occurred the first night we were here.

We put up a little family sort of hotel in Montparnasse. The landlady took us up to show us our rooms A cute little French maid came along with her.

As we were looking around the room the landlady opened a wardrobe door, and there on a shelf lay a German soldier's cap that he had forgotten to take.

The landlady picked it up with the tips of her fingers, held it out at arm's length, made a face, and dropped it on a chair.

Social Reform Must Be Based On Divine Justice

London, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Pope Pius XII, speaking over the Vatican City Radio, said Friday night that "on this fifth anniversary of the war, the spirit of injustice is dying out".

"This barbaric world is going to end and a new world of humanity and christianity is to be created", the Pontiff continued.

"The new world must be one of social justice and fraternity of all the human family", the Pope said. "After so many years of uncertainty, humanity expects of the world a better social order. This social reform must be based on divine justice".

The address was recorded by The Associated Press.

"The new world must be such that men will not have to worry about their bread and shelter", he continued. "The social state of workers must be improved and capitalism will have to make concessions to this end".

At the end of this war 'which has upset all aspects of life and produced new thoughts", the Pope foresaw the beginning of a violent struggle between various currents of thought" and said great effort would be needed to prevent "misery, famine and dissipation".

He pleaded for winners and losers to join in the post-war social order.

FOOD IS NOT MEDICINE

In our talk about the most frequent complaints of elderly folks the other day—lack of "pep", rheumatism, leg cramps at night, fatigability—I said these complaints spell nutritional deficiency rather than old age, as I have observed that an adequate daily intake of vitamin B-complex and vitamin D and the high calcium foods prevents or dispels these complaints in many instances.

This practice of supplementing the ordinary diet with a daily ration of vitamin B-complex and vitamin D, and including in the daily diet a reasonable amount of milk, cheese, greens, peas, beans, nuts and peanuts (high calcium foods) is NOT MEDICINE. It is better nutrition. It is natural food.

Of course it makes little difference whether you regard it as medicine or food, except in one respect. If you think such a supplementary daily ration of vitamin B-complex, vitamin D and even some extra calcium gluconate or di-calcium phosphate is medicine you will expect it to "cure" whatever complaint you have, so you can stop taking it. I assure you it will not do so. On the other hand if you have enough sense to regard it as nutrition, food which is essential for health, vite, functional efficiency but which the ordinary diet fails to provide in sufficient amount, then you will not discontinue taking it but on the contrary you will make it a regular lifetime habit to take your daily vitamin ration just as you take your daily breakfast, lunch or supper. Only on this basis is it likely to do you any good.

In most instances one with any or all of the four complaints mentioned should take daily in the first month or so approximately 3000 units of vitamin D, 720 units of B, (thiamin) and 2000 micrograms of B2 (riboflavin), and after the first month about half of these amounts daily. One with the complaint of rheumatism or cramps in legs should take daily in addition to this in the first two weeks, approximately 27 grains of dicalcium phosphate, 18 grains of calcium gluconate and 2250 units of vitamin D, and thereafter one-third of these amounts daily for an indefinite period—depending on how much of the calcium-rich foods one's daily diet provides. And please remember, you EAT this—it is essential food, not medicine.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Dentistry for Expectant Mother

I am expecting my third baby in December. Ben Told dentist will not extract teeth at this time, least it harm the unborn baby.

(Mrs. R. L.)

Answer—If the teeth are beyond saving, by all means have them extracted. Any necessary dentistry may and should be done whenever it becomes necessary during pregnancy.

Salt.

We do not understand whether you say we should salt everything, even our drinking water, or whether you say we take too much salt and should reduce our use of salt for salting foods.

Answer—Many persons take too much salt. It is generally advisable to use salt sparingly if at all as a condiment or addition to food in cooking or at table. Foods such as meat, milk, fish, eggs naturally contain enough salt for the body's needs. In very hot weather or when one is sweating much, it is wise to take a good big pinch of salt with every drink of water—to restore the salt lost in sweat, to prevent heat exhaustion or sun stroke, to prevent heat cramps.

Hernia

I found Dr. —— of —— whom you recommended as skilled in ambulant treatment has gone into the Navy, his office closed for the duration. Can you recommend any other doctor in this vicinity? I hope my hernia will not have to have hospital operation—as far as I know it is of only two years standing. (G. J.)

Answer—I'm sorry I do not know of another doctor in your city I can recommend for the injection treatment—but there are no doubt seevral there who have mastered the technique by now.

SEVENTH SON

It was once widely believed that the seventh son of a seventh son was endowed with notable talent and supernatural powers.

According to a belief that persisted through the Middle Ages, the seventh son of a seventh son was endowed with the power not only of curing diseases and disorders of all kinds by the laying on of his hands but also of practicing magic and foreseeing future events.

Even as late as the 19th century many people still believed that the seventh son of a seventh son was a born physician and possessed intuitive knowledge of the healing art. The natural gifts of such a person were supposed by some to be superior in medicine to the professional training of an ordinary doctor.

Seven was regarded as a sacred and magical number among many ancient peoples, particularly the Hebrews, Assyrians and Arabians.

The ancient belief about the seventh son of a seventh son may have had a slight foundation in fact.

Some students of eugenics are of the opinion that the younger children of an unusually intelligent man are likely to inherit more of their parent's mentality than his earlier children are.

This is based on the theory that a man of unusual intelligence generally continues to develop mentally until late in life and his older children have a tendency to inherit only what mental qualities the parent possessed when they were conceived, while the children born later have a tendency to inherit their father's natural mentality.

This, of course, is only a theory, but assuming it to be correct, in cases where a man marries young the difference in the mental qualities transmitted to the first children and to those born eight or ten years later might be considerable.

Richness Marks Fashion Colors In Fall Styles

Montreal, Aug. 30—(CP)—The fall fashion parade is underway and milady will have the finest selection of wartime styles and colors in five years, says Albert Alfandri, one of Canada's leading designers of gowns and dresses.

Black numbers predominate again, says the French-born designer. But complementing this most popular fall color will be an entirely new range of reds, blues and browns.

The war influence is strong in the new textiles. What is proving one of the most popular of the new shades is Cossack Steel, a rich, deep brown. Another of the new browns is Brazil Coffee, a shade named in honor of our Latin-American Allies.

The top red for the season, according to Alfandri, is Marcella, a combination bluish rose which has the effect, he says, of crushed raspberries and cream. This shade is liked in one and two-piece dresses for young women from 18 to 35. Framboise, a trifle darker, is another new red in demand by those ranging all the way from 18 to 60.

Acanthus is the newest thing in blue. It's a medium shade with a touch of green and lots of grey and is popular among all age groups. The early fall bride appears to favor metal grey, while forest green is as popular as ever for afternoon wear.

The restrictions in styling, which limit dress manufacturers to 50 per cent of their pre-war styles, is resulting in a smaller but more choice selection.

"I used to turn out about 100 styles each season," Alfandri says, "and the fact that I am limited to 50 gives me and my artists more time to concentrate on finer styling."

For Afternoon Wear

Dominating the field for afternoon wear is the one-piece dress with lines which concentrate on a high neckline. Also achieving some degree of popularity are the two-piece, two-color numbers. Shops are showing Marcella red tops and black skirts and chartreuse tops with the new Cossack steel skirt among others.

Currently favored for fall evening wear are short dresses with a number of new features such as the drop shoulder and deep arm holes with emphasis on an extremely small waist-line.

Gasoline and tire restrictions and the difficulty in getting taxis have their influence on evening styles. With many women using trams and buses for evening engagements, the low neckline is out. Alfandri also believes that a full decollete neckline does not go well with a woman accompanied by a serviceman.

Alfandri is an unorthodox designer. Whereas most designers do their own sketching, he admits he can't draw a bust line. He designs in his mind, has his artists transfer his ideas to paper and he, in turn, transfers them to the material. Born in Marseille 60 years ago, Alfandri went to New York with his family when he was five. He was educated there and started designing in 1910. In 1024 he came to Montreal for what was to have been a one-month visit. He has been here ever since.

He is as temperamental as most persons of artistic qualities. He frequently refuses to make a gown for a woman if he doesn't think it will become her, regardless of the price she is willing to pay.

"I would rather design for the better-dressed woman than for the one with more money than taste," he says.

Blouse Beauty

BY ALICE ALDEN

THERE ARE so many bow-necked blouses that we can't remember when we didn't have one. But there's no doubt about it, this line is ideal, especially with the cardigan neck that obtains in to-day's suits. Celanese crepe makes this pretty suit blouse that offers many features including self-scalloped tucks that add a dash of distinction, and push-up sleeves. Not made to huddle beneath a jacket, here is a blouse that is definitely a show-off affair.

British Women To Learn About Life in Canada

By MARGARET ECKER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 30—(CP)— British girls will not be impressed with a line about a million-dollar gopher ranch in Toronto or a family manner house in Saskatchewan, now that the Canadian Army in England has opened a Canadian Wives Bureau.

Workmen are still hammering in the big headquarters on King Charles II Street, but already enquiries have flooded the office and Lt. Col. A. D. Clarke, M. C., admitted, "These premises are too small for all the work we have to do."

The purpose of the bureau, he went on, is to give the 20,000 English women who have married Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen, any information they want about Canada. The secondary purpose is to arrange passage for these women and their more than 8,000 children and to conduct them to Canada.

"Eventually we hope to send workers of the Canadian Red Cross back to Canada with each party," the colonel explained.

When 200 British wives and their children departed for Canada recently, the British Red Cross looked after them until they got on board ship.

Attractive furniture and reproductions of Canadian paintings were being arranged in the large, pleasant lounge, to which Col. Clarke hopes the wives will come to learn about their new homeland.

Staff members will talk to the men and answer their questions and clubs will be formed here and throughout England for the women.

To Arrange Lectures

Two field workers, Eileen Griffin of Vancouver and Mrs. Margaret Lee of Toronto, who was formerly Canadian Red Cross commandant in England, will arrange lectures on Canada for the wives, as well as demonstrations of Canada cookery. At present they're working on the cataloguing of the Canadian dependants in the British Isles. But it's a job for Hercules, since men in the Canadian Army alone are marrying between 400 and 800 English girls each month.

So far, the army is the greatest supporter of the marriage-across-the-ocean movement. Only 2,000 R. C. A. F. and 300 navy men have married over here.

"The biggest problem we have is to give the girls a true picture of Canada," said the tall, kindly colonel, whose own background gives him the viewpoint of both sides of the Atlantic. He's a Canadian who as a professional soldier has spent most of his life in Britain, but his mother lives in Victoria and he has a brother in Calgary.

The pamphlet called, "Welcome to War Brides," has an introduction written by the Countess of Athlone and describes as well as the country Canadian food, clothing, climate and activities.

"So many of the Canadian soldiers left Canada when they were very young," said Col. Clarke, "they remember Canada as a land of sport, a huge playground, where no question of work spoils their fun. They've passed that picture on to their wives and it is important that the girls be given a more realistic view if they're not going to be disillusioned."

Also under the bureau is the Civilian Repatriation Section in Piccadilly which helps the wives and children secure passports, visas, and exit permits, as well as ship passage when possible.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

By All Means, Write to Her

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Will you please help me with a family problem that is troubling me very much. In my family there are five of us sisters, all married and all living away from home. We have only one brother, who came home from his camp this past week and married a girl from our home town. All his sisters, except me were there and met my brother's wife. They all resent her and have definitely shown her that they do. My brother has written me and has told me this, and also that they both are very deeply hurt.

I have wanted so much to go to our home town to see her, but my husband is in the Navy and my allotment pays for only our living expenses. But I would like your advice as to whether you think I should write to her so that she will know that I at least want to be friends with her. If you think I should write her, would you suggest what I should write? I would like to be friendly with her, Mrs. Beeckman, for I know so well what it is like to be left alone.

What a kind and human person you are, and what a Good Samaritan you will be if you will reach out your hand to your new sister, give her friendship and solace and comfort. And loving words from you, who knows the pangs of loneliness, will show her, particularly, your understanding. You didn't tell me why your sisters "resent" your brother's wife. Is it, as is often true, when there is only one brother among several sisters, that they feel that no girl is quite good enough for him? If so, then your letter-of-welcoming-and-friendliness is especially important, for few girls can compete with this point of view.

Do write her please do, and say, perhaps something like this: "Tom has written me so lovingly about you, has said so many beautiful things about you, that I want to welcome you, my dear new sister, into our family and into my heart. I am so sorry that I wasn't able to come to your wedding, for I so very much wanted to meet you, to know you, to give you loving welcome. You have made our Tom very happy, and thank you for that, dear Betty, for Tom and I have always been particularly close, and so often he has talked to me of his 'dream girl'. And now here you are, Tom's wife, and my new sister. . . and my dearest love to you, my blessings, and every high wish for your happiness, for now, for always.

"I do hope that very soon good fortune will bring our paths together. We could have such good talks together. And I know that we could comfort each other, too. . . I know how lonely you must be now that Tom has left, and I know, so deeply I know, what it is to be left alone. However, for now we must become friends by letters, and I am most eagerly looking forward to hearing from you, having you tell me how things are going with you, and any other news you will share with me".

If I were you, I would mention nothing about your sisters or their attitude. I am sure that, through your devotion and good thoughts, you will be able to show them that it is their sisterly duty to extend the hand of welcome and devotion to this girl whom your brother has chosen for his wife.

What the Bridesmaid Wears.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Is it, or isn't it, permissible (or even preferable) for a bridesmaid at a late-August wedding, to be held in a rather small chapel, to wear short sleeves and no gloves? The bridesmaid is to wear a long net dress with short puff sleeves. The shop where the dress was bought tells us it is perfectly proper for the bridesmaid not to wear gloves with this dress, and personally I would prefer that too. But the bride's mother feels that gloves are a necessity. What do you think?

S. D.

Even if the sleeves of the bridesmaid's dress are short, it would not be necessary for her to wear gloves at this summer wedding in a small chapel.

Semi-Formal Spinsters' Dance.

In answer to a question sent to this column asking what obligations a girl has when taking a boy to a semi-formal Spinsters' Dance. I think that she should of course pay for the ticket to the dance, but it is entirely up to herself whether or not she pays for other expenses such as taxi, checking, and lunch after the dance. This also applies to the question of corsages. Also, if the girl feels that she is more financially able to pay for everything in regard to the evening's entertainment she can do so. I think that I would be safe in saying that it is all a matter of opinion or choice.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Treatment of Naturally Curly Hair

In the prehistoric period of the pigtail, every straight-haired girl child prayed for curly hair. Ringlets were considered the priceless glory. Now the prayers of the feminine contingent are answered; this happy state of affairs came about because a bright man thought up the permanent wave machine. For years false hair had been rolled on wooden pegs, plunged into boiling water, were formed into curls. Why wouldn't the same principle work on the human head? It did. Strands of hair were wound on metal rods, subjected to steam. It was as simple as that.

In some ways the permanent serves better than the natural undulation because nature does not always make a success of her efforts. The curl may be too frizzy, or not strong enough, and when the ends of the hair are trimmed they do not form ringlets. The manageability of the permanent is surprising; it fills the bill precisely and exactly.

A tight natural wave won't have a thing to do with the finger wave, while the permanent yields to it with amiability; the natural fuzz soon resumes its narrow wave lines, is as bushy and bouncy as ever. Women who have hair of this character do a great deal of complaining against fate.

If there is a pleasing undulation, Curly Girl can have the ends of her tresses submitted to the machine, sport as pretty ringlets as the next one. The treatment has no ill effect upon the natural state.

She must be wary of certain dyes and bleaches, the chemical ingredients of which may remove every vestige of wave. It is a rash adventure for her to take a ducking in the dye pot unless she knows what the results will be. Conscientious operators in shops who understand these matters, will give professional advice.

Some dyes or bleached heads can be waved, everything depending upon the coloring agent that has been used. The cash customer should state exactly what she has been applying.

Careless shampooing will turn a curly head into a straight, stringy one. Soap scum left upon the shafts will weaken the spirals of natural and artificial waves.

Every girl or woman blessed with the natural wave knows the difficulties attendant upon a short hair cut. The ends must be tapered skillfully; due regard must be given to each individual line so that it will flow into the other. A straight clip means ugly, stubby ends. A good operator knows the tricks; an inexperienced one is confounded and perplexed, makes a mess of the job.

The Marry-Go-Round

You Can't Guarantee Marital Success

"Does just being in love guarantee a successful marriage?"

That is one of the most intelligent and sagacious questions I have ever been asked; and it comes from an astute but perplexed young warrior about to go overseas.

The speed with which love hits people in wartime is very confusing. Sometimes you are not sure whether it really IS love—or is only sympathy or compassion or loneliness. Time is so condensed during war that it is almost eliminated as space has been.

But granted that it is really love—mutual love—it does not guarantee a successful marriage. Emphatically NO! Yet there is no such thing as a successful marriage without love. Love is the first thing to consider and to be sure of before marrying. Yet I have seen perfect love-matches which began in Seventh Heaven and turned into life-long battles.

The point is this. You would no more choose a life-partner whom you did not LOVE and trust than you would tie yourself up with a business partner whom you did not LIKE and trust. Yet think of the people whom you LIKE with whom you would not form a business partnership. Just because you find a man good company at a lawn party or a girl charming in the moonlight is no reason why you would find them congenial or helpful in the office.

In the same way a girl and a man may be wildly infatuated or deeply and honestly in love—and wake up after the honeymoon to discover that they are as far apart as the poles in their tastes, aspirations ad ideas of life. Especially after these speedy war-marriages, when they don't have time to get to know each other.

This doesn't always mean unhappiness, if both man and girl have plenty of common sense, plenty of love and a sense of fair-play. They will compromise and adjust themselves, and gradually they will grow together and be very happy. But if one of them is selfish or too self-willed, that marriage will soon sag in the middle and come apart. Or it will become a continuous battle royal for supremacy.

So many things besides love contribute to the success of a marriage I sometimes think that to like a person (to be congenial with him or her and see eye-to-eye) may be more important than to be madly in love.

"I love you because you love the things I love", wrote the late Elbert Hubbard, and that of course is the foundation of companionship and the cornerstone of a successful happy marriage. Then there are loyalty, consideration and tenderness, all a part of love itself.

A coat cannot be made without cloth. Yet the cloth does not "guarantee" the success of the coat. A strawberry short-cake must have strawberries, but the berries don't guarantee the success of the cake. And a marriage must have love—but love alone does not guarantee its success!

Heads Up for Style!

Linda Darnell has a very graceful posture.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN TRAVELLING the road to good looks it is an advantage to have a well balanced head, balanced inside and out, and to carry it with unstudied grace. Observe the bad examples, the woman who carries her nose in the air, looks haughty, and the one who throws the chin downward, has the pose of the defeatist.

No girl can hope to attain pulchritude, splendor or smartness of dress unless head carriage is correct. There is a simple rule to keep in mind; if you pull up your backbone, keep the abdominal muscles tight and flat and chest lifted, your head will take care of itself. With correct, vibrant posture the head cannot be sent forward. If this rule were followed there would be few double chins, creased necks or prominent collar bones. Poor posture brings a trail of beauty griefs, one follows another. So "Heads Up," lady.

Posture Exercise.

Your head should follow the line of the spinal column; if it is tilted backward, there is strain on the muscles; if it is thrown forward there will develop an ugly bulge below the nape line.

There is an old fashioned method of attaining erect carriage of the body and good chest pose; that is to walk with a book on your head. It's not as easy as it sounds. Walk a straight line, toes pointing straight ahead.

Think Good Looks.

Good posture begins in the mind. Think good looks, all the time; have a feeling of beauty and charm. This practice will lead you to be body conscious, will inspire you to appear your best.

It will make for graceful movements too, give one an air. Those little bargain models from the basement dress department will look double the price mark. An old bromide to the effect that it isn't the clothes you wear so much as how you wear them is worth repeating. A smart appearing woman looks better in a kitchen dress than the slumpy frump in expensive sartorial glory.

FEDERAL SCHEMES BRING BENEFITS TO DROUGHT AREA

Rehabilitation Work Has Changed the Farm Picture in Southwestern Saskatchewan — Fine Cattle Produced

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Val Marie, Sask., Aug. 29 (CP) — In this southwestern Saskatchewan area the old west breathes again, more vigorously than ever. It's the west of cowboys, jingling spurs and roundups.

Years of bitter trial and error wherein men's sweat and women's tears watered the land never meant for grain production have ended and the short-grass acres are being restored to the service they can best perform—the feeding of cattle.

The restoration work is being done under the federal Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act with the co-operation of the provincial government and municipal councils.

At Val Marie are two P. F. R. A. projects. One is quickly appreciated because of the gem of green fields lying between the sombre buttes about this town. The fields, where a second crop of alfalfa for the season now is being harvested, result from an irrigation project started in 1936 and which, with two major dams, eventually will serve some 10,000 acres of irrigable land in the valley.

The second is the community pasture covering more than 160,000 acres among the grey hills and coulees. The riders with 10-gallon hats and brisk saddle ponies who pause on the trail to roll a cigaret and pass the time of day say they'd like all Canada to see the community pasture and the fine Herefords that graze on it.

Stock Improved

They point to a white-faced calf, fat and merry, who pretends he is terrified of the ponies. They explain he's a good beast, far better than 90 per cent of those they could see in a week's ride in this country 10 years ago. This calf and hundreds like him are the progeny of registered bulls placed on the community pasture by the federal government. At Val Marie, the advisory council of local residents decided it wanted Herefords. On others of the 70 community pastures scattered throughout Manitoba and Saskatchewan, different varieties were chosen.

P. F. R. A. officials said they felt they had reached the peak of achievement when cattle fed on community pastures began winning prizes at provincial fairs.

The pastures are established only on land which has failed to fulfil the hopes of those who settled it. Drought, together with some overgrazing, wrecked range lands. Drought added to the normal difficulties of farming light soil, spelt disaster to those who had hoped to make their living from wheat. When the rancher and the farmer both had failed the P. F. R. A. took over and has brought the land back to useful service in the pastures.

When a pasture is established farmers within its area are moved to other land where they will have more prospect of success, their moving expenses being paid by the government and their acreage of sub-marginal land exchanged for a corresponding acreage in the new locality. There is nothing compulsory. If they want to remain they can do so, and the pasture fences will circle their property; but most of them go readily.

Farmer-Ranchers

The immediate benefit of the pastures comes to those who have their farms on its borders. A new agricultural type, the farmer-rancher, has been created in areas like Val Marie. In this region, where farm cattle herds averaged perhaps five head, they now run to 35 or 40. For a small fee, the farmers are able to leave their cattle on the pasture throughout the summer and during these months beef cattle will put on from 300 to 500 pounds of weight and thus have their value increased by $30 to $50.

Therefore, when wheat fails the farmer no longer suffers complete disaster. He has his fat cattle to sell in the fall when he takes them from the community pasture and has a market on which prices are upheld by Dominion government purchases for overseas. Community pastures are under the care of experts in cattle management, water supplies have been developed and the grazing is so allocated that there is a sufficiency of feed even in dry years. Thus the farmer is able to depend on returns from cattle he sends to the care of the P. F. R. A. pasture manager and riders.

This has meant that the old arts of the cowboy are held in new esteem in Saskatchewan, which once concentrated on wheat to the near exclusion of everything else. Boys, whose ambition in the past was to drive a tractor, beg for ponies and practice roping. There is talk of rodeos instead of movies and saddle ponies instead of cars. The roundup in all its glory has returned, for at Val Marie alone, 3,000 cattle will be gathered up late this summer and fall. The farmer-ranchers come in for the roundup, some of them with embossed high-heeled boots and bright cowboy shirts, ready to admit that they prefer fat cattle to thin wheat. They say this business suits their land—and their pocketbooks.

Normandy Peasants At Best on Market Day

(By P. W. Luce, In the Vancouver Daily Province)

Invasion correspondents give varying pictures of the reaction of the peasants of Normandy to the stirring events taking place in their midst. Some report wild enthusiasm and gifts of wine and fruits. Others tell of phlegmatic farmers working in their fields while battle rages nearby. Sordid stories reveal that women snipers are shooting Allied soldiers from tree-tops, at so many reichsmarks per head.

All these tales may be true. The Norman is strongly individualistic and will do what suits him best at the moment. He can look out for No. 1 better than any other man, and his love of self is proverbial.

Frugal and hard-working, the Norman peasant is seldom more than a step ahead of poverty. He is extremely pious on Sunday, but makes up for this the rest of the week. He welcomes tourists, and will do verything he can for them—and to them.

To see the Norman at his uninhibited best one must be in the town on market day. Any town will do. For me, it was Avranche.

* * *

This old creamy-stone town with tip-tilted roofs is perched on a steep hill. Saturday is market day. Vast numbers of cattle, horses, sheep, pigs, goats, poultry, and a few donkeys, are driven into sketchy corrals hard by the railway station in the early hours of the morning.

Selling starts at dawn. Tradition demands that dealers wear stiff hats. The farmers are in billowy blouses, and their wives look quaintly picturesque in starched "coifs," a headgear which is distinctive for each district and which, in some subtle way, proclaims the social standing of the wearer.

Everybody talks all the time. Nobody is in a hurry. Chattering and haggling goes on and on. There is no record of the asking price for an animal ever having been paid, or a first offer ever accepted. Trading is the order of the day, with each party trying to put something over. Sales are for cash, and no refunds if goods are not as represented. Caveat emptor!

To the stranger, it looks as if everybody sells one animal and buys another, and then prods it reluctantly afoot to its new home. The roads to Avranche are a bit difficult for motorists on Saturdays, and wise is the tourist who heeds the good advice of the Guide Michelin:

"It is well to your advantage to go not to Avranche by car by road on the market day. The congestion is very strong."

* * *

A dietitian would feel sadly out of place in Normandy. The peasant gets his calories, but he must be shy quite a few vitamins. He knows nothing of a balanced diet.

So long as he has a hunk of coarse bread, a thick slice of fat pork, boiled potatoes and a bit of cabbage, and enough strong cider, he is satisfied. But he must have enough cider, and that is a great deal. He would rather have cider than wine, even if he could afford wine.

In the evenings and on holidays he loves to sit outside the cafe, drink glass after glass of cider, and dispute matters of state with his neighbor. With gestures, of course. The Norman is a natural gesturer, and he improves with practice.

* * *

Labor-saving devices are rare in Normandy. There is more brawn than brain in that province, and a thatched cottage is hardly the place for a vacuum cleaner or an electric stove. As for washing machines, would it not be a waste of good money to buy such a contraption when the village brook is handy, and the women can kneel on the bank, spread the wet clothing on flat stones, and paddle out the dirt as their mothers have done for a thousand years?

A little hard on the back, perhaps, a trifle uncomfortable in winter, maybe, but where else could the womenfolk get together for a social hour once a week?

There are no afternoon teas in Normandy.

People of Dieppe Almost Hysterical With Happiness as Canadians Enter

New York, Sept. 2-(CP)-Broadcasting from France, NBC's David Anderson said yesterday that Canadian forces entered Dieppe "at 12:25 P. M." virtually without opposition.

I was with the Canadian troops who entered Dieppe soon after noon today. They had advanced more than 15 miles last night.

They took the city without a struggle.

There were only a few German snipers scattered throughout the port. A number of prisoners have been taken in the area, but there has been no exact total released. I saw about 100 of them as I drove into Dieppe.

The same Canadian units which participated in the Dieppe raid two years ago were selected to take Diepe. The men were charged with avenging comrades killed in the Dieppe action, and later German actions which resulted in a number of Canadian prisoners taken at Dieppe being put in chains.

This was more a day of glory than a day of vengeance, because there simply were not enough Germans around to defend the city.

Achieve Decisive Goal

In the capture of Dieppe, the Canadian army has achieved one of the decisive strategic goals of this campaign. They were the first troops to reach the English Channel north of the Siene. They've already captured a number of flying sites in the Dieppe area. They have isolated Le Havre, and the German troops and bomb installations in that region. And now they are established in a position to clear the channel coast of France and the low countries in one clean sweep.

No Roman Emperor ever received any greater welcome than the people of the Dieppe region have given the returning Canadian troops. From Rouen to the Sea people lined the roads, waving flags, cheering, applauding. If any army car happened to stop, it was immediately surrounded by shouting civilians, mothers who wanted their babies kissed. In fact everyone got kissed. And everyone shook hands.

Grateful For Liberation

Several times I saw instances where military convoys were held up by people who just couldn't quit thanking the Canadians for the liberation.

The wine is mostly gone and there has not been much food around lately. But they stood by the side of the road offering us water. And they picked the ripening apples from the trees. And they went into their gardens and gathered tomatoes, and they tossed them into your car as you sped past. Their aim was not always good, and there probably are a few black eyes among the troops hit by the victory apples thrown by the enthusiastic residents of Dieppe.

Entering the city, a large crowd made a funnel for the entering troops. We thought at first the crowd wanted us to stop. But then we saw the reason for the lane they made in the centre of the road. In the middle of the street was a huge swastika flag, and the crowd forced every Canadian vehicle entering the town to drive over the flag. It was their demonstration of contempt for the Nazis.

Surprisingly Intact

A large oil dump in the north part of the town was burning when we entered at noon today. But the town is surprisingly intact, the Germans were carrying out demolition of the port when the Canadians approached. They did not get a chance to complete the job. Explosions were going off intermittently as time bombs blew up.

But never have I seen such enthusiasm in any city in this part of France. "We were so happy to see you," the proprietor of a restaurant said. "I wish I could give the whole army a free meal.

I ran into Bill Gray from Chicago, out Cicero way, in this same cafe. He joined the Canadian army in 1940 and was one of the men at Dieppe. "These people have gone through it," he said. "I never saw anything like it. But if you think they are glad to see us, just imagine how happy we are to be back at Dieppe--Back here, after what happened to us two years ago."

BROWNIES' LEAD CUT TO TWO GAMES BY LATEST LOSS

Detroit Tigers Move Into Second Place by Beating Leaders

YANKS MISS CHANCE

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

Pitching miseries in St. Louis gave the Detroit Tigers and New York Yankees a chance to pass the stumbling Brownies this weekend as Luke Sewell's battle-worn leaders saw their once-robust lead fade to two skimpy games.

Only seven St. Louis pitchers were able to go the route in the last 28 games.

Nelson Potter, 32-year-old veteran, was able to halt the last previous slump in Detroit a week ago. Last night at Sportsman's Park, Potter was batted off the hill and solidly spanked for seven hits in two innings as the Brownies fell before Detroit, 6-3. The Tigers thus surged past New York into second place.

Joe McCarthy's Yanks blew a chance to sneak up right behind the leaders when they bowed to the last-place Washington Senators, 10-7, after muffing several chances to win.

Boston had to go hard to top the troublesome Athletics, 4-3, with the help of Jim Tabor's 13th homer as Joe Bowman earned his 11th decision over Don Black. Chicago's Joe Haynes won his own game with a 12th-inning single to shade Cleveland's Al Smith, 5-4 in a night tilt.

Fritz Ostermueller allowed 11 St. Louis hits but scattered the blows for his 12th win with the help of Babe Dahlgren's two-run double and Frankie Gustine's single in the sixth.

Bucky Walter's attempt to become the first National Leaguer to capture 20 games missed fire when Chicago's Paul Erickson took a relief verdict over Cincinnati, 3-2.

Boston trimmed the Phillies twice in a twi-night doubleheader, 3-2 in 10 innings on Damon Phillips' single and 7-4. Brooklyn's Art Herring stopped New York for the second straight time, 8-1, on a four-hitter, beating Harry Feldman.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 2 —(AP)— One record the Cardinals won't break is Chicago Cub's mark of winning 100 games by Sept. 9 . . . The Cards were a day ahead at the No. 90 but there are too many blank spaces in the schedule for them to add 10 more in 13 days . . . No other National League club ever reached the 100 mark before Sept. 20 and only the 1909 Pirates and the 1942 Cards did that . . . Since Bobby Jones has returned to civilian life, the P.G.A.'s Freddie Corcoran thinks the Augusta Masters' Golf Tournament may be revived this year . . . Replying to a scribe's query about Mississippi football prospects, coach Harry Mehre wrote, "You have the schedule OK. If you can fix us up with a few tackles, ends, guards, backs, etc., send them night press collect."

Fanning Bee.

After Armando and Rolando Vega of Mexico barely skinned through to win a doubles match at Forest Hills the other day, when Rolando ruefully admitted he couldn't do anything right, Armando gave this explanation in rapid-fire Spanish: "It was like a baseball game where I was the pitcher with the bases full and none out. And the best batter against me was—Rolando."

Mel Hein, who "retired" two years ago, may turn up in a football Giants uniform again this fall. The four-game schedule for the Union College team Mel coaches ends the day before the Giants open their campaign.

TEAMMATES FIGHT FOR BATTING LEAD

New York, Sept. 2 —(AP— A battle right down to the wire between teammates Eddie Kobesky and Mayo Smith of Buffalo for the International League batting title is in prospect.

Including games played Wednesday, Kobesky is leading Smith by four points, .330 to .326, as the season enters the final two weeks. Both improved their averages during the last week, with Smith gaining six points to Kobesky's two, to narrow the gap between them.

Tony Castona of Toronto, early-season leader, remained in the running with a third-place mark of .317. Stan Benjamin of Baltimore jumped from seventh to fourth with a .311 average. Another Bison, Bobby Maier, who was recently purchased by Detroit, and Chico Rodrigues of Syracuse were tied for fifth with .309.

Baltimore's Blas Monaco and Howie Moss with .305 and .301 respectively, Syracuse's Al Lakeman with .300 and Buffalo's Otto Denning with .298 round out the Big Ten.

Bob Malloy of the last place Syracuse Chiefs led the pitchers with a 14 and 5 won and lost record, though Al Jarlett of Toronto won the most games, 18.

DING LUFFMAN THROWS 5-HITTER TO BEAT MARINES

SCORE IS 10-3

Point Anne "Cementmen" took a two to one advantage in the Belleville City Softball League finals by beating the SACO "Marines" 10 to 3 last evening.

"Ding" Luffman's five-hit pitching effort halted the Marines early in the game, as the losers counted exactly two base blows after the third inning, as Luffman retired the Marines in order in the last three frames, as well as the second and fifth.

After getting two runs, on a walk, error and hits by Green and Bennett to score two runs in the opening frame the "Cementmen" added a brace more in the third with a walk and Hutchings' home run. In the meantime the Marines gathered in two runs in the first on Carson's triple and two errors and added their final run with hits by Henn and Wardaugh in the third.

It was pretty well even until the seventh when Whalen singled, Bennett came through with a triple and Hutchings added a one base blow to give Point Anne two runs to cinch the piece. To add assured victory the Ox Point nine pushed four more over the home base in the top half of the ninth when Luffman helped his own cause with a double and Ford drove hard for a triple. Jim Hunter was on the hilltop for the Marines with Stan Luffman, the winning hurler, lor the Cementmen. The game was handled by W. Kiser and Cy Young. The fourth game in a best-in-five series for the Bank of Commerce Trophy will continue at the Fair Grounds on Tuesday night.

SQUIRES MOVE INTO O.A.S.A. SEMI-FINALS

Defeat Hastings 24-4 in Second Game of Series at Hastings

The Columbian Squires advanced to the Junior O.A.S.A. semi-finals and go to Toronto next week as the result of beating Hastings two straight games in the Eastern Ontario finals. In a third attempt for a second game the Boyle-led Squires finally broke through to beat "Dit" Clapper's junior nine by a 24 to 4 score at Hastings last evening. The local Squires had won the first game of the series here over a week ago.

Don Boyle pitched for the Squire kids and blanked the Hastings team until he eased off in the eighth inning, when Belleville was leading 21 to 0. Boyle started the game in a most auspicious manner by striking out two of the initial three batters to face him. In all Boyle whiffed an even dozen Hastings batters.

As their pitcher was doing a rare pitching chore the Squires added more power to their attack by scoring no less than eight runs in the initial frame to practically cinch the game. However, to make matters rather certain, they added seven more in the fourth and kept adding to their score as the game advanced. Jerry Moher and Dick Fitzpatrick hit home runs for the winners with Bob Bunton clubbing a triple.

Hastings — Walsh, Wilson, Fife, Hamilton, Griffin, Quigley, West Warner and Coughlan.

Line score:
Belleville .... 810 703 023—24 runs
Hastings .... 000 000 013— 4 runs

Umpires — Bawden and Wellman; scorer—Al Adams.

NEWARK BEARS CROWDING BIRDS FOR LOOP LEAD

Winners Closing Fast in Race That Has Been Exceedingly Close

LEAFS SPLIT

(By The Associated Press.)

Famous for their fast finishes, the Newark Bears continue to narrow the Gap between themselves and the first-place Baltimore Orioles in their quest for their second International League flag in three years. Newark won the pennant in 1942.

Last week's triumph over the Orioles 14-0 made it two straight for the Bears over the flock with three games remaining in their five-game series.

Yesterday's game was a walk-over for the Bears, who hammered three Oriole pitchers for 16 hits, with everybody in the Newark line-up hitting safely.

Buffalo retained third place by an even split with Rochester, winning the nightcap 10-4 after losing the opener 5-2 in a twilight-night twin bill before 8,620 fans Eddie Kobesky regained the home run leadership, hitting his 26th in the nightcap and also drove in four runs to edge nearer to Baltimore's Howie Moss. Otto Denning Buffalo's all-around man hit his 21st round tripper in the opener.

Toronto moved a step nearer to the playoffs by dividing a double-header with the Montreal Royals, winning the finale 5-1 after the Royals had copped the lid-lifter 11-4. Luther Knerr won his 12th in the nightcap, after Montreal had broken a jinx by routing Alex Mustaikis in the opener. Mustaikis had beaten his Canadian rivals four times this season.

Toronto, Sept. 2 —(CP)— It's beginning to look as though those opposition junior hockey teams which have been crying: "Get Oshawa Generals" these many years, may have their hopes realized this winter as the result of a mass flight of enlistments.

The proud Generals, last winter's Memorial Cup champions and a power in the junior hockey realm the past seven years, will have few familiar faces when they hit the ice for their first practice session. Don Batten, Bobby Love, Floyd Curry and Ken Smith all are in the navy, Bill Barker has just signed himself into sailor-blue "tiddleys," Bill Ezinicki is in the R.C.A.F. and Johnny Chenier, Bob Dawes and Bobby Porter have joined the army.

That doesn't leave much of the championship machine, and even the remnants aren't certain of being around long. "Soup" Campbell of the Oshawa Times says an unnamed pro club is after Jack Taggart, Al Schewchuck will be trying out with Boston Bruins again and goalie Harvey Bennett also will get a chance with the Bostonians.

Though everyone growled about the Generals monopolizing the junior hockey bracket, it's our guess the fans will be a mite sorry to see a colorful team, and a game team, leave the picture.

More Female Encroachment?

Mike Rodden of the Kingston Whig-Standard, eyeing askance the dozen-and-one suggestions put forward to find a successor for N.H.L. President Frank Calder and temporary managing-director Red Dutton, puts his own candidate in the field. Mike suggests the governors might elect Miss Dorothy Pinard, the league secretary, "who is quite capable of directing operations."

Incidentally:

Perhaps the next thing in ring circles will be a genuine "white hope" from the great frozen white spaces of the Far North. Jack Peppin, a former Winnipegger and fight manager, writes Harry (Calgary Albertan) Scott about a heavyweight find he uncovered at Fort Nelson, B.C. The newcomer is a six-foot-three young Irish giant, schooled in the rough-and-tumble Alaska Highway battle rules, and Peppin thinks he has the stuff to go far in the ring . . . Maurice (Winnipeg Free Press) Smith comes out for President Frank Sargent of the C.A.H.A. in the current N.H.L. president derby. His record at the head of the amateur body has shown his organizational ability, Smith says, and besides he is still young—"and we are sure the governors of the N.H.L. don't want to be electing a new president every five years or so."

Two Conclusions

A group of workmen were discussing the evolution and origin of man. One of the party remained silent, when a companion turned to him and demanded his opinion.

"I ain't going' to say," he replied, doggedly. "I remember as 'ow Henry Green and me thrashed that out once before, and it's settled as far as I'm concerned.

"But what conclusion did you come to?"

"Well," he said, slowly, "we didn't arrive at the same conclusion—no, we didn't. Henry arrived at the 'orspital an' me at the police station."

Reckless Abandon.

Apparently wrestling promoter Frank Tunney doesn't value the Hume Arena property too highly. At least that is the opinion of many after Marse Tunney announced he would stage a "villains' night" at the Hume Arena next week. To prove his sincerity Mr. Tunney matched "Fingers" Katan and Jerry Monahan and also is bringing to town "Strangler Bob" Wagner and that vociferous villain, Nanjo Singh, to say nothing of Frank Sexton and Pierre DeGlane. It takes nerve to herd such a gang of ring pachyderms in the same edifice.

Remember Him?

Here is an opportunity for the sportsmen of Belleville to exemplify their good will towards one of the really swell old boys.

Of course you all remember Billie Smith, who was one of Belleville's better known harness horsemen, as well as connected with hockey teams these long years past. Unfortunately Billie had the misfortune of falling and breaking a leg recently and is at present confined to his home at No. 8 King Street....Just when you're going out for a little ride in the family gas buggy how about dropping around and picking up Billie to relieve the monotony of having to sit around waiting until he can again go to the Belleville Fair and watch the harness horses?

The Washington Park Futurity with a gross purse of $62,300, brings together seven two-year-old contenders at Chicago today, the field including Free For All, undefeated colt from the John Marsch stable which won the Arlington Futurity and two other important recent contests. Chief opponent for the undefeated Chicago entry is expected to be Sir Bim, owned by Don Ameche of screen and radio renown. The winner takes $49,400 as its share of the purse.

The inter county junior baseball championship was won last night in the sixth game of the tight playoff series when Galt Terrier Pups turned back Kitchener Rangers 3-2 in 11 innings at Galt.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 471

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Compare. Comparison proves that each opening bid has its own particular meaning. Stack up the one bids alongside the two bids and see how they differ.

An opening of one in a suit shows five suit tricks, four of them high cards, two of them sure tricks; and a biddable suit. An opening of one no-trump shows five high cards, of which two are sure tricks.

Notice that any opening bid of one promises five tricks, two of which are sure tricks. It may have more. But it must not have less.

An opening bid of two in a suit shows nine tricks. It may have more. But it must not have less. An opening of two no-trump shows seven or eight high cards. It must not have less or more.

Thus, in their order of power, an opening of two in a suit is the strongest; an opening of two no-trump is barely weaker; an opening of one in anything is the weakest.

How can you tell when a strong hand is not an opening of two no-trump? If it has less than seven high cards, it is a one bid. If it has more than eight tricks, it is an opening of two in a suit.

Investigate this hand:

♠A K Q
♥K Q 9
♦K Q 7
♣K 9 8 4

This hand has eight tricks; all high cards; one ace, four kings, three queens. They are what you need for an opening of two no-trump.

Has it enough for an opening of two in a suit? No. Because it has not nine tricks. Has it enough for a one opening? Yes, indeed. But the stronger opening of two no-trump is preferred.

You already know that an opening one bid does not require your partner to bid with less than three tricks. And you know that a two-in-a-suit opening orders partner to bid with no tricks.

Therefore, in answer to a two no-trump opening, what does partner need for a responding bid? Anything more than none. You heard me.

"Harvest Melody"
(First Belleville Showing)

The story of "Harvest Melody" gives Miss Lane wide latitude for her abilities. Playing a temperamental cinema queen, she volunteers to bring entertainment to the farm front in hopes of getting herself enough publicity to wangle a new contract with her studio. The star's press agent even sets up a nation-wide chain of clubs to help the farmers get and keep workers. To crack the papers he arranges a romance between the star and the farmer's son. The whole plan works but the movie queen decides to stick to giving the farmer a hand for the duration, turns her back on the tempting new film contract, and turns back the farm lad to his true love.

Comedy bubbles throughout the film as the Hollywood citizens harvest the crops in swing time and romances blossom all over the place.

The PRC musical was directed by Sam Newfield from the screenplay by Allan Gale. Musical direction is handled by Jay Cherniss.

"The Oklahoma Kid"

With James Cagney scoring what everybody concedes to be his greatest success in his Academy-Award winning "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and Humphrey Bogart sky-rocketing to top-flight popularity in "Casablanca" and "Action in the North Atlantic," Warner Bros. has decided to re-issue "The Oklahoma Kid" which co-stars both these popular players. The picture opens Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre.

A special matinee on Labor Day.

AT THE BELLE

"The Story of Dr Wassell," in Color

Finding a dull moment in one of Cecil B. DeMille's secreen epics is like finding a needle in a haystack and so it's expected that Paramount's "The Story of Dr. Wassell" in technicolor produced by DeMille will be equally as exciting as his previous screen triumphs.

In fact, insiders say that "The Story of Dr. Wassell," arriving today at the Belle theatre with a special Sunday after midnight performance at 12.05 a.m., overshadows any action film to reach the screen thus far. There's logic behind their statements of fact, too. The reason is that the story is based upon the incidents which actually happened to Commander Croydon M. Wassell, U.S.N. and in turn were related by him and the wounded sailors whom he rescued from Java.

Playing the part of Commander Wassell is Gary Cooper while Laraine Day portrays the role of a nurse whose love for the doctor inspires him to great deeds. The deep emotions displayed by these two, it is said, reach out to pull at the heartstrings of movie-goers. Others whose fine acting makes the vivid scenes as realistic as the actual incidents, it is reported, are Signe Hasso, as the Dutch nurse; Carol Thurston, as Tremartini, a native girl; Dennis O'Keefe, as Hoppy; Carl Esmond, a Dutch Officer; Oliver Throndike, Renny McEvoy, Melvin Francis, as wounded sailors.

The story is one of an Arkansas doctor whose devotion to duty first brings him to China where he administers to its suffering millions. With the outbreak of war his navy orders read Java and he leaves for that base — he leaves also lovely Laraine Day, the nurse in China who inspired him to discover the germ striking down Chineses people. The parting scene, it's said, is one of the more tender moments in the picture, for Dr. Wassell sacrificed marriage to the nurse in face of his call to duty.

An almost superhuman task faces the navy commander upon his arrival. Wounded sailors from the U.S.S. Marblehead are being evacuated and the doctor's job is to shepherd them to safety. The picture describes the details of the long trip through the Jap-infested jungles where capture or death lurks behind every bush. The courage and heroism of the little staff who guarded these disabled sailors is almost beyond comprehension.

Villains' Night For Hume Arena Wrestling Show

Tossing caution to the wild winds and showing little regard for the safety of the public Promoter Frank Tunney took matters in his own hands to sign wrestling's roughest pachyderms for his next Hume Arena Show. Not only did Maestro Tunney show utter disregard for the safety of ringside patrons, but openly boasted he had at last attained his dearest wish in the perfect villains' night at the local palace de sport.

Just imagine such ring ruffians as "Irish Jerry" Monahan, the former Masked Marvel John 'Fingers" Katan, the Palermo Panther, Nanjo Singh, the mad and irresponsible Hindu all under the same roof at the same time. True enough, folks, it is hard to imagine such a galaxy of vociferous villains in the same building without mayhem or riotous measures following, but that's the way it is at the Hume Arena next Wednesday night and if you have a weak heart or suffer from nervousness stay away.

Here's how the show will go—Monahan and Katan will slug it out in the main affair, Bob Wagner will try to disect Frank Sexton, the Ohio Powerhouse, while Nanjo Singh tackles Pierre DeGlane and that is how the program goes.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was drinking his 2nd cup of coffee this morning and ma said, You and Mr. Spruance seemed to be deep in a very serious conversation last night, William.

Yes, we were, pop said. Spruance is a very intelligent chap, it's a real pleasure to talk to him, he said, and ma said, I wanted the worst way to listen to you, but that silly wife of his kept me pinned down with a tippical woman's endless conversation about clothes and the servant problem, and every other Tom Dick and Harry of a feminine subject you can think of. So I didn't catch enough of what you and Mr. Spruance were discussing to even go in one ear and out the other. What were you talking about? she said.

Oh, the world in general, pop said. The seriousness of the general food situation, for example, and the slow advancement of modern medical science compared to the giant strides made by our mechanical geniuses. Of, if you want me to go into details, we both agreed that it's impossible to eat comfortably in Sharkey's Chop House since they substituted slippery paper napkins for linen ones. That took care of the food situation. As for medecine, it seems we've both had a touch of lumbago recently, and there was nothing to do for it but apply a good strong liniment, just as our great great grandfathers did, while a vast improvement in machinery that with the aid of the Super Rotary Home Sharpener it's possible to make an ordinary safety razor blade last for 15 or 20 shaves, pop said.

Such a riggamaroll, I dont believe there's a slightest difference between the sexes after all, ma said.

Bahamas Portrayed As Earthly Paradise

(By Randal Dumeret, in the Empire Digest)

Four hundred and fifty years have elapsed since the discovery of the Bahamas, but these lovely islands have yet to be discovered by many discriminating travellers. Those who discover the Bahamas today would be impressed by the constantly even climate, the subtropical beauty of scenery, the landscape of undulating coral, white roads and limestone houses set amongst the colorful Poinciana and the climbing Bougainvillea; the seascape of sandy beaches fringed with palm and pine trees and the clear waters reflecting azure skies. They will wonder at the peaceful aspect of this pleasant land untouched by the ravages of war but they will be reminded of war by the passage of training pilots and the 'planes which disturb the normal serenity of the skies.

These twentieth century discoverers of the Bahamas could reflect upon the changes from the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries when the skies were peaceful but the land and sea were turbulent with the activities of marauders and adventurers. Here the ancestors of British Commandos demonstrated the bravery, skill and ingenuity displayed in other theatres today by their descendants. Their daring and resourcefulness was exemplified in the year 1783 by Colonel Deveaux who, with 220 men and 150 muskets sudbued the occupation soldiers of Spain in the Bahamas. He terrorized the Spaniards by skilfully dispersing his handful of volunteers; by dressing some as Indians and by placing dummy soldiers on the heights; he also caused his men to be rowed back and forth between ship and shore, standing on the way to shore and lying low on the return to ship, in order to give the impression of great numbers. The numerically superior Spanish garrison capitulated after the first round of shot.

The modern discoverer might marvel, too, at the metamorphosis of trade which has followed the pattern of the colony's motto, Expulsis Piratis Restituta Commercia." During the American Civil War Nassau was the headquarters of the blockade runners and the total value of trade rose from one half million pounds in 1860 to ten million pounds in 1864. Today, even with the stimulus of war economy, the value of total trade is under two million pounds and comprises the antithetically peaceful pursuits of agricultural and marine industries and tourist trade. Food crops are expanding under the impetus of concerted efforts to grow more food for self sustainment.

The collection of sponges is the most important of the marine industries but this has had a setback in recent years. In normal times a fleet of small vessels and boats transport the sponges from the sea and hundreds of men and women are employed in clipping, grading, packing and exporting. Fishing is plentiful and the local consumption eases the culinary problem. A considerable quantity of crawfish is exported and also tortoise shells and sea shells.

The cultivation of tomatoes for local consumption as well as export is the most important of the agricultural industries. Minor industries include the raising and cleaning of sisal-hemp and the gathering of cascarilla bark on the southern islands. Efforts are being made to revive the citrus industry and acreage under cultivation is expanding. Pine trees and palm trees grow together and extensive acres of pine forests on various islands are let to private firms who pay royalties on hewed timber. Bahamas pitch pine is believed to be the hardest and heaviest in the world and makes excellent flooring. Other woods of commercial value found in limited quantities are logwood, lignum vitae and cedar.

• • •

The total area of the Bahamas is about 4,400 square miles, comprising approximately 700 islands and "cays" and two to three thousand rocks. Some 30 of the islands are inhabited and the total population is about 67,000. Nearly one-third of the population lives on New Providence which, though not one of the larger islands, contains the chief port and capital, Nassau. The islands are generally long, narrow and low lying, the highest point being only 240 feet. By steamer the Bahamas can be reached in two and a half to three days from New York and from Canada in about one week. In normal times luxury liners ply regularly between the Continent and the Bahamas where the hotels are open throughout the year. Miami is only 16 hours distant by steamer and aerial communication reduces the time of passage to a minimum. Because of this proximity to the mainland and the numerous islands and sandy beaches, the Bahamas is ideal for yachting cruises. Amongst the sports which may be enjoyed are tennis, golf, cricket, football, motoring, boating and bathing. Duck shooting can be indulged during the equivalent of the winter months and wild pigeon in the summer. The wild boar can be hunted on some of the islands where horses, donkeys and cattle also run wild.

How Boys From America Won Hearts of Britons

(A Letter In the New York Times)

You may be glad to hear from someone who has been in close touch with some of your lads for some months and to know how we get along with them.

For a while your boys were being billeted in their own buildings, and apart from those few who got into touch with local residents there was not much opportunity to get to know them. As their numbers increased, the authorities began to billet them in private homes. In our district we have had the most wonderful experience.

Our first impressions were caused by the type of movie you send over and is nothing like the American character we discovered. It was not long before most of the lads were given latchkeys to come in when they liked, and in many cases their hosts would not go to bed until they had seen the boys safely in. Moreover, parties were arranged and they soon became part of the population, calling here and there and "passing the time of day" to us like old residents.

So they won their way into our lives and hearts. At last the day came for the move, and it is difficult to convey to you how we all felt. It was as if our own boys were off.

Perhaps two incidents which I witnessed on the morning of their departure will interest your folk. I left the house to get my car (I am on special work) and my neighbor hailed me with tears in her eyes, saying that their boys had gone. Outside in the road your boys were all trekking down to the assembly point with their heavy kit bags, in many cases being helped by their hosts.

As I turned into the main road there were three of your boys just leaving a house of a neighbor. "Mother" was crying, father looking very glum, and the daughter, about fourteen had evidently been crying. Into my car the three boys tumbled, with their kit bags on the carrier.

On the route was another incident which tells its own story, but to appreciate this I must explain a little. Mr. A. lives in a villa and has a wife and two children. When he was told that two American soldiers were to be billeted with him he was not at all pleased. I must also add that he is very "respectable." Imagine my surprise to see him trundling a wheelbarrow down the main road, with the soldiers' kit on board and his wife and children walking down with your soldiers to the assembly point to see them off.

I must add that the soldiers to whom I gave a lift arrived at the assembly point in a private car, and they were amused, as the officers only had a jeep. As you know, all private cars are off the road unless on work of national importance, and I happened to be going that way.

• •

Yes, your boys have wound themselves around us and our hearts are with them. This is not only true of this particular district, but everywhere one goes it's the same story, "We miss them very much" and "They were dear lads."

I only hope that, arising from this terrible war, a better understanding between our two countries will follow, as I am sure it will.

To a mother it will be of interest that the American soldier who was chiefly associated with us and made our home his own here was Private Alfred De Lorame, who lives in Maplewood, N.J.

As long as men are serving in the armed forces, there'll be a few who try the "hard way" of getting off the station. Two members of the service police at No. 10 Bombing and Gunnery School, Mount Pleasant, P.E.I., are shown above with a non-too-gentle grip on a miscreant corporal who has almost slipped under the fence. "THAT KEITH WOMAN"

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER 10.

"All right," I snapped. "How about starting on her!" And I gestured toward a South American female who was as slim and trimly round and dangerous looking as a cobra, making every wiggle count.

"I'm afraid she wouldn't be a very Good Neighbor," said Peter. Then he said: "Look, there's Mrs. Faontaine Corligan. She has on a beautiful blue scrim. Jot that down."

"Scrim! Oh, Peter!"

"Well, calico then. Anyway, it's blue. And it's got a bustle which on Mrs. Corligan is like carrying coals to Newcastle."

"That isn't a bustle," I said. "That is Mrs. Corligan."

"Oh," said Peter. Then, "Look, that big CIO official has on a toupe, does that come under social news? Then there's Mrs. Clarkson. She has a new set of false teeth."

"The ones that bit you, dee-ar?" I asked, archly.

"The very ones, pet. Those are her extra-special party set. Look, I'll bet that guy over there is a spy. He has a nice continental manner, much heel-clicking and hand-kissing, only slightly spurious, Say-y, there's rich old Mrs. Comints who's trying to buy her husband a job as an ambassador. See the pretty red tape in her hair? And see the nice trained way her husband follows her? I'll bet he's covered with moss from walking in her shadow all his life. That's the hideous result of marrying for money."

"You're a big help," I said. "I suppose you want me to write all that."

"Certainly."

"Did you ever hear of libel suits?"

"Do they come with two pair of pants?"

"And a lot of sighs!"

At eleven o'clock when I was stuffing myself in a Fanella Castigena sort of way—as if this was my last chance at food come the Revolution, or maybe only Leon Henderson—Peter said: "Lambie-pie, you have exactly one hour in which to make your deadline."

We left immediately and went to my apartment. When I had finished typing my story, Peter read it over for typographical errors. He said, "Well, this certainly won't take any prize for the best reporting of the year, but you do deserve some sort of prize at that. Gal, you know more slushy adjectives than anyone I ever knew! Most of the dames at that party looked as if they'd stepped out of a Grant Wood painting, and yet you made them..." His voice trailed off in awe and he stood there shaking his head.

A little while later the story went on its way by messenger, and I settled myself on the Virginia sofa. Peter sank down warily two feet away from me and I was thinking up ways to lure him closer when I heard the strangest noise outside the window. I can't describe it. It was a sort of swish-swosh, swish- swosh, and then a horrible, ghastly, ghoulish PLUNK! There is really no way to describe the sound of a human body hurtling through space.

I know my heart stopped for an instant or two. "What was that?" I breathed.

We ran swiftly to the front windows and then bolted for the kitchen. Peter pushed up the long window there which is the only opening to our small balcony. A few seconds later we were joined by Mother and Dad leaning over the balustrade, staring down upon a lawn mottled with shadows and moonlight, we saw the crumpled figure of a young girl. She was scarcely more than a shadow among denser shadows but the moonlight touched her pale hair with a radiant finger, touched something glittering on one of her arms something glittering on one ankle that was bent back hideously beside her leg...

I put my hands over my face and began to sob miserably. Then my head was buried against Peter's shoulders, his fingers were caressing my red hair gently.

"There, there, dearest.... There, there..."

I scarcely heard him. The girl was so young to commit suicide. So young.... I couldn't bear it. I burrowed my head deeper into Peter's shoulder.

Mother said very softly, "Oh, why do you suppose a child like that would want to take her life?"

Peter had let me go now and was already hurrying through the window, Dad behind him. Peter was saying, "Maybe she's still alive..."

Mother said, "No. She couldn't be. She probably jumped from the roof. Remember that other young girl who committed suicide — just like this, Letty?"

Suddenly my back went rigid, and I was standing stiffly against the balustrade. Suicide? Or was this—murder? Had the young girl taken her own life? Had someone pushed her off the roof? Had someone thrown her out of one of the upper-floor windows? Who was the girl? I turned and stared down at that broken little figure on the lawn. Was that girl—could she be—Sandra Keith?

A horrible lump rose up in my throat, and my heart began to pound intolerably. I was running then, hurrying through the window behind Peter and Dad. I heard Mother say, "Letty, you have no business down there. Let Peter and Dad do what they can..."

But I did not stop.

I heard Peter nervously phoning the police and a hospital. Then Peter, Dad and I hurried down the hotel corridor and out of the door off B-Wing. Near the rock garden on the wide sloping lawn, we stood watch over that pitiful little figure until the police and ambulance came. The deceased was not Sandra....

I heard the interne tell Sergeant Hornblower that she had died instantly. I didn't know all night who the girl was, and most of what I learned about her the next day I gleaned from the newspapers.

She was Marcella Kingsley, 19-year-old stenographer at the Charlton -Arms hotel and daughter of a Middle-Western farmer. A police theory that Miss Kingsley was shoved off the roof by a former suitor with whom she had recently quarreled was weakened by word from relatives in Iowa. The father said his daughter was a "serious girl who did not run around with boys" and "had no enemies" as far as he knew. Neither fingerprint nor fingernail tests had offered the police any workable clues on the murder theory. It seemed most probable that Miss Kingsley had committed suicide, for the findings of the autopsy proved that the beautiful young stenographer had incipient cancer.

Released after questioning were ..and there had followed a long list of the employees of The Charlton-Arms: bellhops, gardeners, elevator boys—one of whom had carried Miss Kingsley to the roof but had carried no one else up—desk clerks, stenographers and residents.

I for one believed that Marcella Kingsley had not committed suicide but had been pushed off the roof—by someone. I thought, too, she had gone up there to keep a rendezvous with some man. No girl who is planning suicide, who is so starkly miserable over her physical condition that she wants to blot her life, is going to get a new hair-do, make up her face with violet eye-shadows on her eyes, heavy black mascara on her thick pale lashes, bright carmine on her lips and a delicate rouge on her cheeks. Neither is she going to see that each fingernail is a perfection of carmine to match her mouth.

Marcella Kingsley, I had noticed the moment Peter and I arrived on the scene, had been dressed in what was unquestionably her Sunday best: black satin, black velvet coat with hood, rhinestone clips, bracelets and anklet, Rhinestones sparkled with the initials of MK on her black velvet purse. And wouldn't a girl had laid down her purse before she flung herself to death?

So I figured it was a glittering young thing worshipping diamonds but compromising on glass, who had gone to keep her rendezvous with a man and had met death instead. However, all this regalia for the battle between the sexes seemed to have gone over the heads of the police, but not over my technique-conscious one. That there was any connection between Marcella Kingsley's death and Pamela's, however, did not occur to me then. In fact not nearly soon enough to prevent another horrible murder!

I spent a long hour that Tuesday morning in my bed at Sandra's nibbling away at the breakfast a maid had brought to me, trying to be very quiet so I wouldn't disturb Sandra in the bed next to my own. After having read everything in the papers about the late Marcella Kingsley, I turned to the columns and columns about Pamela Keith, including my own seven hundred more or less gory words.

Pamela was still on the front page, and my news boss, Clem Barkley, writing under his own by-line, said that three maids at the Keith house, two colored housemen and a chauffeur had been absolved in the slaying of the Washington society woman. According to Sergeant Roger Hornblower, only Charlotte Cunningham would be held at the First Precinct Station "until certain aspects of the case were cleared up."

Charlotte was the pretty blonde maid who always wore lavender taffeta uniforms and fragile lace caps and aprons, and had been with Pamela for nearly a year. I remember Pam had told me once that Charlotte was man-crazy.

"I'm going to fire her," Pam had said, "if it's the last thing I do. She's my parlor maid, you know, and whenever I have a tea .... a small one...and men are present, she's so obviously on the make. If it wasn't so difficult to get another maid I would fire her instantly, but all such help are working in the Government now... the capable ones I mean... and there never was a lot o white servants around this town."

Charlotte Cunningham had the face of a Botticelli angel, and I couldn't possibly imagine her murdering Pamela. But Pam might have fired her, or threatened to do so to her, or caught her in some reprehensible act with one of her own guests. There was no telling....

Finally I took out my pencil and pad and wrote a list of suspects: The Eustaces, Courtney, the Countess, Luke Cramer, Gladys Newcomb, Earle Pines, Victor Corliss, Sandra Keith, Peter Gibson and Reginald. Which one was guilty?

Yes, it was quite a list and, of course, I had my pet suspects. That some of these listed people couldn't, and wouldn't, have done that grim thing, was obvious. Sandra, for instance. Also Earle Pines, Luke Cramer, Fanella Castigena— they were simply "out" as far as I was concerned.

But later that morning, Earle Pines (whom I'd relegated to a Class Z suspect) soared upward to Class A, which indicated that I really should not eliminate any of these people.

For I went carefully through Earle Pines' small house in Chevy Chase around noon, after telephoning and receiving no answer. Yet his front door was unlocked when I arrived and entered after knocking. He'd evidently forgotten to snap the front door.

It was a strange house. Narrow and frame with a look of middle-aged contentment. Dying ivy and trumpet creeper sprawled over the jig-saw work on the bare front porch; a board on one of the three shallow steps had rotted away in a great gaping hole. His living room was cluttered with shabby wicker chairs, a rather seductive looking porch swing, tennis shoes, a tennis racket, a guitar and a banjo. I wondered why the dickens Earle Pines hadn't stored this junk out of the way in the basement, and I soon learned why.

The basement had been made into a laboratory: a queer, dark, dingy place, as spooky as a mediaeval haunt of alchemists. There was a Bunsen burner, charts marked with black and red ink, test tubes, pipettes and, on top of what had once been laundry tubs, some wooden cages screened with rough slats. Behind those slats about sixty pairs of sharp, shining eyes peered out at me, curiously.

Rats! A veritable Pied Piper's collection of rats! I felt my skin crawling....Crossing to the cages I saw that in the bottom one all the rats were skidding around gayly, busy at nothing but worked up to a feverish pitch of restlessness. In the second tier, the rats were as sluggish as if they'd never come within sniffing distance of liver pills; and in the top cage were two rats sitting very still, their bright eyes fixed on me, and a third was flat on his back, feet stuck rigidly up in the air—dead! Besides writing about fish and mammals, it seemed that Earle Pines messed around with rodents, I had no idea of course what sort of bio-chemistry he was doing, nor why he had chosen rats for his martyrs:

Pines' bedroom still smelled heavily of tobacco and, sniffing, I decided the air was tuched with gin too. It was a depressing room with all the shabbiness of the brass iron bed, domestic rugs and oak furniture apparent in the bright, uncompromising daylight. The clothes hanging in the closet were a startling contrast to that room: rows and rows of tailored suits, two dress suits, two dinner jackets, a long opera cape lined in white satin and another in red; a top hat, a collapsible opera hat and a golf helmet. There was also a cap and gown from some college, a wide assortment of shoes, overcoats, sport jackets, slacks and lounging robes.

The desk in Earle's library revealed another shock. I dug my way through page after page of a manuscript fresh from the typewriter and written in the smirking style of a man who knows it all. The bicarb business was going to flourish when this book landed on the public—if anyone was bold enough to publish it ....Then something significant happened.

By pure accident I bumbled across what I was certain was damaging evidence against Earle Pines in this murder case.

That desk was a very commonplace one of cheap oak with a roll-down top; certainly not the sort of desk you'd snoop around in looking for a secret compartment. I hadn't seen one of those roll-tops since I was a kid, and I rolled that accordion top up and down, up and down, half way up, all the way down, up again....Then all at once, my eyes bulged.

For as I slid the top halfway down a small compartment—hidden behind the wooden back of one of the pigeonholes—shot out from the rear, pushing along in front of it letters, paper-clips and other desk debris. I knew exactly what had happened. In rolling that top up and down, I had hit accidentally on the combination that released the secret compartment.

I pounced on the contents of that compartment, practically a-lather with excitement. And there I found a packet of letters from Pamela, as warm in content as the ones Luke Cramer had penned to Gladys. The date on the last one in Pines' collection was November, 1937, which relegated Pamela's romance with Earle to the past. In another packet, carefully tied with a piece of red cord, I found exactly forty-one envelopes addressed to Earle in Pam's fine, spidery writing, posted in Washington with dates ranging from January, 1938, to August, 1941. Inside of each envelope was a single sheet of perfumed gray paper, absolutely blank which, of course, simply didn't make sense.

Also in the compartment was a small snapshot of Earle and Pamela taken on a beach. I've been to Atlantic City often, and I recognized the hotel background behind those two figures in bathing suits. On the back of the snap was a date: July 29, 1937.

The last and only other thing in the drawer was a bank book showing that one week ago Earle Pines had had exactly $401.25 in his savings account and, on Saturday morning, the day of Pamela's murder, he had deposited $25,000 — which was certainly quite a fiscal feat in one week's time! I wondered how, when, and where he'd picked up that kind of money, but there was nothing in the desk or in the whole house to answer that question for me.

I put all the things back in the compartment, slid the little box back into its secret place and closed the roll-top. Then I looked around the room for other clues, and pounced on a sheet of paper stuck behind the gilded radiator. That proved to be nothing more than a page of quotations from Rochefoucald and beneath each quotation a streamlined translation, the wording brought up to date with the wit and substance untouched. These cribbed "gems" I promptly decided, would probably go into Earle's new book or would be tossed around at someone's dinner party where everyone would think Pines had the head of a Rouchefoucald on his own thick, barrel neck — which, in a sense, would be quite true,

Vic Corliss' apartment in Petworth was my next destination. The small room in a walk-up flat revealed almost nothing: Neatness, poverty. I felt it must have been a continual source of wonder to Vic that he had qualities which attracted rich girls like Sandra Keith quite as poor minnesingers had once attracted princesses. Vic was a student at George Washington, a member of a good fraternity and, judging from the letters I read, he had a mother and father in Omaha who were quite poor but honest, and as ambitious for him as he was for himself. Not in a matrimonial sense, however: they wanted Vic to do something big and fine on his own.

In the pocket of Vic's dinner jacket I found a rhinestone clip which I thought belonged to Sandra. I don't know yet just why I pocketed it, except that I thought it might prove evidence later on. I don't go in for costume jewelry and if I had stopped to think twice then, I would have remembered that Sandra didn't either.

BLOOD, SWEAT and TEARS"

Not so precious as blood nor so poignant as tears, but for all that, the power behind the fight . . . that's the Labour, the Sweat that turns out the weapons of war. It's not heroic, not in the common sense of the word, not by comparison. It's often monotonous with long, hard hours at lathe or drill, blast furnace or blow torch. It's often dirty with oil and grease, soot and smoke. It's frequently dangerous with angry machines, touchy explosives, lightning-edged tools, searing cohesives.

But it's Labour . . . the stuff that since the world began has earned man's daily bread, has built his house, raised his family, guarded his pride and self-respect. Now it does more, this Labour . . . this Sweat. From its hands come fleets of ships . . . flights of planes . . . phalanxes of guns. From mine, from forest it takes the materials . . . in mill and factory it shapes and welds them . . . until to the soldier's hands goes the weapon that fights for Victory and Peace.

For five years Labour has kept up the flow . . . its toil behind the boys that fight, behind the boys that wait and hope in prison camps. For this there are no medals, no fancy ribbons . . . just toil and sweat . . . an honest living made, a just cause worked for.

TREMORS CAUSE MUCH DAMAGE AT CORNWALL
TWO GERMAN CITIES CAPTURED BY ALLIES

Officials Estimate Cost of Repairs May Be $750,000

Shock Felt West to London And North to Capreol

By JACK WILLIAMS
(CP Staff Writer)

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 5 — (CP) — Damage in a series of earth tremors which rocked this St. Lawrence River city early today is estimated by civic officials at between $600,000 and $750,000. Two schools — the collegiate institute and vocational school and the public school — were so seriously damaged that inspectors ruled the buildings unsafe and the school opening scheduled for today was postponed indefinitely. It may take two or three weeks to make repairs.

No Casualties

There were no serious casualties in the series of earthquakes. The first, believed to have centred in this area, came at 12.40 a. m. and others followed at intervals until 7 a.m.

"We estimate the damage will run between $600,000 and $750,000," Mayor Aaron Morovitz told The Canadian Press after he conferred with the city's leading contractors. He said he planned to appeal to Federal authorities for assistance in obtaining bricklayers and bricks for repair work.

"There are only three or four bricklayers available here and not more than a few thousand bricks," he said. "We have about 3,000 homes and contractors tell us the damage will average out at $200 to $250 a home. There are hundreds of chimneys down and with cold weather possible any time it is important that repairs be made without delay."

No Damage to Industry

Industrial plants in the Cornwall area reported no serious damage but many are operating with reduced staffs because workers are busy sweeping up debris about their homes.

A section of the main street was blocked off when a large bulge appeared in the face of the three-storey brick Orange Lodge block.

Chimneys toppled from hundreds of homes here in the 12.40 a. m. tremor. Sections of brick broke loose from a number of buildings and windows were broken in downtown stores.

Forced to Vacate Homes

Several families were forced to vacate their homes because of damage and a number spent the rest of the night on their verandahs or lawns, fearful lest their homes collapse in later tremors.

Only reported injury was at the mill of Courtaulds, Ltd., when Ernest Humphreys, an employee, suffered bruises when he was struck on the head by falling plaster.

The first tremor lasted about a minute, residents estimated. At 4:30 a. m. there was a slight tremor and a more noticeable one followed 20 minutes later. Several slight rumblings were felt between six and seven a. m.

Damage to Church

Extensive damage was caused to St. Columbus Church where a large chandelier crashed at the foot of the alter and vast areas of plaster fell from the ceiling. The big stone tower was shaken and powdered debris was scattered about the front of the building. The arms were broken from the figure of Christ on a crucifix in the church grounds and stones at the base of the crucifix were shifted.

At the collegiate institute a strip of brick more than 100 feet in length and three or four feet deep broke away from the top of the 2-storey building.

Slight damage was caused to Trinity Anglican Church, the Nazareth Orphanage, the post office and court house. In the municipal building the clerk's vault was cracked.

1,000 Chimneys Collapse

At daylight, residents, many of them still in their night clothes, made hurried inspections of their buildings. It was estimated that at least 1,000 chimneys had collapsed. In one instance a chimney landed intact on a lawn.

Police were concentrated in the downtown district to guard stores where stocks were exposed by broken windows. The damage appeared particularly heavy in grocery stores where large quantities of merchandise were damaged, jars and bottles being broken. No looting was reported.

(By The Canadian Press)

The town of Cornwall on the banks of the St. Lawrence is the chief sufferer in the most severe earthquake since November, 1935, which shook Quebec and Ontario and parts of the United States early today.

So far there are no reports of deaths, but buildings were heavily damaged at Cornwall. While the shocks at 12:40 a.m. E.D.T. struck as far west as London, Ont., and north to Capreol, 20 miles north of Sudbury, the epicentre was not far from Cornwall, and the manufacturing town 40 miles south of Ottawa experienced two other tremors at 4:29 and 4:50 a.m. The last one was said to be "severe."

The shocks at 12:40 a.m. were felt from the Quebec City district westward. At most centres buildings shook, windows shattered and dishes crashed off shelves. But at Cornwall buildings were heavily damaged. At least one person was injured there as the violent tremors split the sides of buildings and cracked the fronts of others, wrecked ceilings and sent big signs tumbling to the ground.

Felt at Quebec.

The shock was felt at Quebec City, while at Montreal tall office buildings swayed as the earth trembled Strong tremors shook downtown buildings at Ottawa and rattled dishes and windows in many homes throughout the capital. A newcomer to the Overseas Diplomatic Corps at Ottawa asked The Canadian Press whether earthquakes in Canada were particularly violent—and should he evacuate his home.

Buildings quivered in Toronto and the shocks were felt clearly by persons on the streets as well as those inside. A transformer station at George and Duke streets was knocked out with the first shock and all downtown buildings were plunged in darkness. Lights were restored in less than a quarter of an hour but the populace was thoroughly aroused.

Gathered in Streets.

As at many other places sleepy Toronto citizens tumbled out of bed and gathered on the streets, watching chimneys topple and rushing to telephones to flood police, fire stations and newspaper offices with thousands of anxious queries.

It was the same story at Hamilton, London and Niagara Falls. The quake set off many burglar alarms in various districts, adding to the confusion.

Residents of Cornwall described the quake as being more than a minute in duration, accompanied by a rumbling sound. Many hundreds of Cornwall citizens fled into the streets in night attire. A number of them fainted and physicians were

Russia Declares War on Bulgaria

London, Sept. 5 —(CP)— Russia declared war on Bulgaria, the Moscow radio announced tonight.

A Foreign Office statement announced that the Soviet Union broke relations and declared war against Bulgaria. The Balkan country has been at war with the United States and Britain, but not with Russia.

Earlier in the day an official statement issued by Tass news agency sharply rebuked the new Bulgarian Government for insisting on maintaining strict neutrality and accused Bulgaria of harboring German forces.

Earthquake Which Shook Cornwall Was Accompanied by Awful Roar Says Constable

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(CP Staff Writer)

Cornwall, Sept. 5 — (CP) — The earthquake which shook this industrial city early today was accompanied by a roar which sounded as though "all hell had opened up and let loose," Constable Eddie Firn, who was pounding his business district beat when the first tremors were felt, said in an interview.

"First there was a noise which sounded as though a big wind storm was coming up and then the pavement began heaving and sinking under my feet," Firn said. "There was an awful roar which sounded as though all hell had opened up and let loose."

Was "Scared Stiff"

"I was scared stiff and I did not know which way to turn. I was standing in the middle of the road and I went to go one way and a lamp shade toppled from a light post and broke in front of me. I turned to go the other way and a high plate glass window flew out at me.

"The people began to pour out of their homes. One man ran out to me and said, 'Come quick, my wife has fainted.' I told him to go back and throw a glass of water in her face. He went back but returned a short time later and said his wife had not come to. I told him to go back and throw a pail of water in her face. He came back a short while later and said that worked all right.

"Women were fainting all over the place. Some of them were crying hysterically. Children were crying and screaming too. By the time the people reached the street most of the damage was done, and there were no casualties."

Firn agreed that had the quake occurred earlier many persons might have been hurt by the tumbling bricks from the numerous chimneys which were shaken down. Firn said his own home was pretty badly damaged. A clothes closet was thrown across the bed of his young daughter but the girl was not sleeping in the room at the time.

Freak Happenings.

Reports of freak happenings were numerous. Jim Baker, telegraph editor of the Standard-Freeholder, said a medicine chest in his home was thrown open, all the contents shaken out and then the door closed again.

In the yard of St. Columbans' Roman Catholic Cnurch, the arms were shaken off a crucifix but the body of the Christ was left standing in its original position. Inside, the church plaster was strewn all over the place. The altar looked as though it had been damaged by vandals. Candles were scattered and broken and large pieces of plaster covered all parts of the altar.

The chimney on C. E. Roberts' home on Fifth street, was shaken from the roof and landed upright on his lawn. It stood brick upon brick as it had on the roof. In the business district the quake seemed to travel in swaths. Some store windows were broken and others were not. In some stores cans, bottles and boxes were thrown to the floor. In others nothing was out of place.

Many people remained out of doors after the first tremors were felt as they feared that other tremors might send their homes toppling in on them. Hundreds roamed the streets in night attire or sat on their verandahs.

Hospitals reported that there was no panic among patients. Some were nervous but quickly recovered. Power was off in the hospitals for about ten minutes, but this caused no major inconvenience.

Meteor Falls At Havelock

Havelock, Sept. 5. (CP)— What is believed to be part of a meteor fell and exploded here on Sunday night. Fragments were found but there was no trace of the usual mass of meteoric iron.

Residents of Havelock were startled by loud noise and saw bright yellow ball of fire with a red corona approaching the ground. There was a great explosion as the ball neared the ground and fragments set fire to the grass.

Memorial Service Held at Dieppe

Dieppe, Sept, 5-(CP)-The 2nd Canadian division held memorial services in a Canadian cemetery here Sunday for its men killed in the Dieppe raid of Aug. 19, 1942, and commemorated its return to this port with a march - past through the town.

Lt.-Gen. Crerar, 1st Canadian army commander, the divisional commander, and other high-ranking officers attended the services and all population of this channel coast town turned out to see the Canadians march through the town.

Two services — Protestant and Roman Catholic—were held in the cemetery, where the French people of Dieppe buried the Canadian dead after the raid. It is south of the town on a slope just off the main highway. German minefields sown in fields bordering the cemetery are markd with signs: "Achtung! Minen."

Gap of 700 Miles Divides Allied Armies on West From Red Forces

By JOHN KINCHE
(Reuter Military Commentator)

London, Sept. 5 — (CP-Reuter)— A gap of 700 miles now divides the Allied armies on the west German border from the Red armies in Poland. Dead in the centre is Berlin.

The German army of the west (including that retreating up the Rhone valley) is not in a position to make a stand. It has neither the men, the equipment nor the time to man the Seigfried Line in a manner required by modern mobile warfare. To look for possible German "stands" — or positions for such "stands" — is to be out-of-date. No army can "stand" against a modern armored blitz once it has broken through the front.

There is no river and no range of hills in western Germany which the Wehrmacht can man to halt the Allied advance on this expanding front of 250 miles.

Even if they collect the requisite troops for counter-attack, even if they gain the requisite time to mount it, the big question for the German military leaders will still remain: where do the Allies intend to make their main effort?

The Allies are approaching two vulnerable positions on the Rhine. One in the north, at the confluence of the Rhine with the Ruhr and Lippe, opens the road to northwest German ports, Bremen, Wilhelmshaven, and Hamburg; the other farther south along the main is the highway through which Germany has been invaded from the year nine B. C. onwards. It offers the invader the choice of either following the main east and into the centre of the Reich, or of turning northwards towards the Weser and cutting off western Germany from the rest.

In other words, even if the Germans manage to get their troops together (which is unlikely), and even if they manage to snatch the time for this (which is also unlikely), they would still have to divide their forces.

Under such conditions the counter-offensive even from the heart of Germany would stand little chance of success.

CANADIAN TROOPS MAKE SIX-MILE GAIN AT RIMINI

Forces Supported by British Warships Standing Offshore

IN PO VALLEY

By GEORGE TUCKER
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, Sept. 5 —(AP)— Canadian troops of the British 8th Army supported by British warships standing offshore, drove last night to within six miles of Rimini but Allied Headquarters declared today they were meeting increased resistance as they edged closer to the eastern terminus of the important Po valley highway.

The Nazis reacted vigorously to the bridgehead across the Conca river, which the Canadians established after a slashing two-prong drive during the last three days. Bitter fighting raged along the ridge running south from Abissina to Misano.

The Germans hurled heavy tanks and fresh infantry contingents against the Canadians in a determined effort to retake Misano, which they lost Sept. 3, but after a bloody fight the Canadians swept the area clear of the enemy.

Untold Enemy Dead.

When the fighting abated eight Nazi armored cars, six Mark IV tanks and three Hornets littered the battlefield with untold enemy dead.

30 JAP SHIPS SUNK, 107 PLANES DOWNED IN 5 DAYS

American Warships Shelled Islands Within 615 Miles of Tokyo

ISLANDS BLASTED

Pearl Harbor, Sept. 5 (AP).—In a thunderous prelude to the next big Pacific push, 30 Japanese ships and 107 planes have been knocked out in a five-day period during which American warships shelled within 615 miles of Tokyo and bombers steadily battered the invasion-menaced Philippines.

Communiques yesterday and today reported these blows, spread along more than 4,000 miles of Japan's inner defence ring of islands.

The Bonin and Volcano islands were blasted by air and sea.

Emphasizing the mammoth size of the Pacific fleet, while one task force was operating south of Tokyo in such strength that the Japanese Navy declined to challenge it, another task force pounded Wake Island 1,645 miles to the east.

Mindanao, in the southern Philippines, was dealt its third straight big air attack even as other sizeable blows engulfed such outer defence bastions as Celebes, Halmahera and Palau.

From Paramushiro in the northern Kuriles to Netherlands Timor, the fiery devastation was sown at a

THREE-TARGET ATTACK BY 750 HEAVY BOMBERS

Stuttgart, Karlsruhe And Ludwigshafen In Rhineland Hard Hit

ENGINE WORKS BLASTED

London, Sept. 5 —(CP)— American heavy bombers today smashed at the Rhineland transport and industrial centres of Stuttgart, Karlsruhe and Ludwigshafen, all in the path of advancing Allied armies of the west.

Berlin said other American fleets from Italy were striking in Hungary, supporting Russian armies moving through the Transylvanian Alps.

Perhaps the most significant of the three-target attack by nearly 750 United States heavy bombers from Britain was the attack on the railyards and repair shops at Karlsruhe just across the French-German border in the Rhineland. R.A.F. Mosquitos dropped many two-ton blockbusters on Karlsruhe last night without loss.

Because of its location and the huge transport facilities, Karlsruhe is a logical focal point for supplies and reinforcements which Hitler probably is marshalling for the battle of Germany. One report placed the United States 3rd Army within 40 miles of Karlsruhe.

500 Fighter Escort.

Up to 500 fighters escorted the bombers and Berlin said air battles ensued.

The Daimler-Benz plane engine works and a motor transport plant were bombed visually in clear weather at Stuttgart, Germany's 14th city.

Karlsruhe rail targets also could be seen from aloft.

At the big chemical works of Ludwigshafen on the Rhine, the fliers encountered heavy clouds and dropped explosives by instrument on objectives not specifically described.

The Russians also were hitting Germany from the east. At midnight, Moscow announced attacks on East Prussian airdromes, the sinking of a 6,000-ton supply ship in the Baltic Sea, and the sinking of one and the damaging of two high-speed barges in the Gulf of Finland—part of the craft taking three German divisions from the southern part of surrendered Finland. The Russians destroyed 13 planes.

80 GESTAPO AGENTS KILLED

Bern, Sept. 5. (CP)—Journal de Geneve reported yesterday that 80 German gestapo agents were executed Saturday in the Haute Savoie region in reprisal for the German massacre of 80 partisans in Lyon. An officer of the F.F.I. in the region was said to have ordered the execution.

Saarbucken And Aachen Fall Says Swiss Report

British Troops Drive Deep Into Holland; Near Calais

London, Sept. 5. (CP)—British troops were believed thrusting deeper into The Netherlands today and solidifying their hold on Belgium while behind the British spearheads operating in Belgium and The Netherlands Canadian 1st Army Forces fought their way to within three miles of Boulogne on the rocket coast of France.

Other British forces were closing in on Calais and Dunkerque to wipe out the last hold of the Germans on the Channel ports.

Official silence still cloaked the whereabouts of American forces which were reported across the German border.

Allied Supreme headquarters had no confirmation of reports that the German frontier had been crossed.

The fast-moving United States 3rd Army presumably had been on the go for three days under a complete security black-out.

Unconfirmed reports received at the Swiss-French frontier however, said Allied forces had captured Aachen, Germany, three miles across the frontier and 25 miles northeast of the Belgian City of Liege, and Saarbrucken, Germany, two miles across the frontier and 70 miles east of Verdun.

Allied Supreme headquarters explained the blackout on information was in force to keep the Germans baffled over the direction and speed of the American advance.

But there was some information about the swift British advance, which took these forces across Belgium in 48 hours. Louvain, 18 miles east of Brussels, was captured before the Germans had time to dynamite bridges. At Antwerp, the city's great industries and all-important port facilities were found virtually intact.

The Allies, however, will not be able to use this great front-line port until they clear the Germans from Flushing and other fortress points commanding the Schelde Estuary.

Far to the west, meanwhile, heavy fighting was reported in the siege of Brest on the Brittany peninsula, where a die-hard German garrison still was holding out.

A dispatch from the French frontier said it was reliably reported American tanks had reached the outskirts of the French border city of Strasbourg on the Rhine 70 miles east of Nancy, and that fighting was in progress on German soil around Saarbrucken. Other unofficial reports said the Americans had crossed the German frontier at three places on a 100-mile front.

Spotty Opposition.

Canadian and Polish armor of the 1st Canadian Army is driving through the Pas de Calais area against spotty opposition, Reuter war correspondent Charles Lynch said today. He said evidence is piling up that German officers are deserting their men and leaving them to roam helpless and drunken at the mercy of the oncoming Allies.

Behind these advances German forces estimated all the way from 50,000 to 100,000 men were caught in a cauldron along the channel coast—a Dunkerque in reverse. The Germans had stiffened in a thin arc around the last Nazi-held channel ports.

Headquarters announced that in the area of Mons, Belgium, where the U. S. 1st Army has been operating, a large pocket of Germans has been wiped out, 9,000 prisoners have been taken and 40 tanks and 1,500 motor vehicles captured or destroyed.

Nearing Aachen.

The Siegfried line was under actual or impending assault at both ends. The reports, one of them confirmed, of the three American crossings of the German frontier located the operations at Aachen, 70 miles east of Brussels; Perl at the junction of the German-French-Luxembourg border, and a point somewhere on the northeast frontier of Luxembourg.

In a London broadcast Pierre Duppong, President and Prime Minister of Luxembourg welcomed Allied troops into the Duchy. He said the Germans were fleeing across Luxembourg toward the Reich.

In Belgium there was no official news of any American push closer to Aachen than the area of Charleroi, 75 miles to the southwest. A mop-up was in progress around Beaumont and Florennes, 15 miles south of Charleroi.

YANKS DELIVER—Page 12

Days of Waiting Frightfully Long Says Message

London, Sept. 5 (CP).—Premier Pierre Dupong of Luxembourg said in a broadcast today that Allied troops "have arrived at last" on the soil of the Duchy and told his people to get out flags and don their best garb to greet them.

He did not specify at what point the entry was made, but addressed this message to the field armies:

"Welcome to you on Luxembourg soil and thank you a thousand times for everything you have done for Luxembourg. With your blood you are liberating our country from harm. The days and months we were longing for you were frightfully long. Today you have arrived at last."

WANT STANDARD IMPROVED

Toronto, Sept. 5-(CP)-A demand that the Ontario school for the deaf at Belleville "improve its standard through the use of the combined sign and oral system of education" was made in a resolution passed at the closing session yesterday of the convention of the Ontario association of the deaf.

Capture of Boulogne by Canadian Forces Expected at Any Moment

With the 1st Canadian Army in France, Sept. 5(CP-Reuters)—Boulogne is expected to fall to troops of the 1st Canadian army at any moment.

The entire Pas de Calais area has been virtually isolated by the British sweep into Belgium and Holland and the drive up the coast by troops of the 1st Canadian Army. The bag of prisoners is away up in the thousands.

At the western end of the Canadian army's coastal sector, Le Havre still holds out, although besieged by British troops under command of Lt.-Gen. Crerar. An ultimatum sent to the German garrison of the port has been rejected.

Once over the Somme at Abbeville, the Canadians and Poles made rapid progress into the Pas de Calais, where they overran many more valuable robot-bomb launching sites.

The advance has been so rapid and it is so difficult to maintain continuous communicaton with forward troops that there is no official estimate yet of the number of bomb-sites captured, but the total must be reaching three figures.

The Somme was the toughest obstacle to the Canadian army's move east from the Seine.

With the Canadians in sight of Boulogne it appears that Etaples and Le Touquet at the mouth of the Canche river have been by-passed, and will be mopped up later.

The sweep made by the British 2nd Army through Belgium to Brussels and Antwerp, while Gen. Crerar's Canadian-Polish forces are going right along the rocket coast, appears to have caught a considerable force of Germans, and the only way out for them is across the Schilde between Antwerp and the sea, unless they try to smash their way through the 2nd Army.

This German force is milling about in confusion. It includes the odds and ends of the smashed German 7th Army and the routed 15th.

Earthquake Which Shook Eastern Part of Continent Distinctly Felt Here

The city shivered shortly after twelve-thirty a.m. today as a severe earthquake shook Cornwall, Central Ontario, and north eastern part of the United States. Distinct tremors were felt by residents at that time and many arose from bed in anticipation of further disturbances.

The "shaking" was quite noticeable and in some parts of the city sleepers were awakened as beds quivered beneath them. The quake was particularly severe around Cornwall and Ottawa where damage to buildings was caused by the quake.

The tremors here came without warning. They took the form of short sharp movements at first then slowed down to a series of shakes. The disturbance is said to have lasted nearly a minute.

The "shakes" were particularly noticeable on the East Hill although the opposite side of the city also reports the midnight disturbances.

While residents who were awake, awaited anything further, lights of the city flickered for a few seconds then resumed normalcy.

It is reported that other disturbances occurred at 4.30 and 5.15 a.m. in other places, but none was felt here.

The disturbance was generally throughout the district. The Bamford family, Prince Edward County farmers, stated "We heard a rumbling, then the house shook as though a gale was blowing it. The noise died away and all was quiet."

Police Constable William Evans on duty at the police station reported, "The desk started to shake and the keys started to move away."

Dishes moved on tables in other parts of the city, while a Rednersville marketer stated that a screen door slammed shut, and reopened, causing him to get up in search of someone who wasn't there.

Jim Fox, Hillier, stated that the barking of his dog awakened him from a deep sleep. Shortly afterwards he felt the house tremble as though a giant hand were shaking it.

Tremendous Crowd Enjoys Many Feature Attractions At Trenton RCAF Field Day

Estimated at anywhere between fifteen and twenty thousand, a crowd of district residents ranging in age from babies to a smattering of grandfathers and grandmothers jammed their way into Trenton Air Station on Monday afternoon as personnel of the training school staged their tenth annual field day.

Parking area for automobiles overflowed the regular parking area well among officers' residential area, while crowds jammed the sports field during the athletic events and on the midway when that emporium of amusement opening at three-thirty, was reminiscent of Labor Day at the Toronto Exhibition.

All in all it was a really successfull day with the various events and attractions coming off with clocklike precision, and never a dull moment from the start of the parade and marchpast, until the conclusion of the aerial display which ended the afternoon's program. During the evening the adult midway was a hive of activity, while approximately two thousand crammed their way into the dance which was held in the station sports hangar.

Parade Was Outstanding.

Interesting both from a creative and ornamental standpoint was the colorful as well as amusing parade which marked the beginning of the afternoon's proceedings sharp at the opening hour of one-thirty. Headed by the Trenton R.C.A.F. band and a duo of nattily garbed drum majorettes, the parade included all participants of the sporting events and other athletic attractions while a column of floats ranging from the ridiculous to the sublime, drew loud applause from the packed crowd. Practically every department on the station was represented by the many floats seen in the marchpast, their ultimate appearance saying much for the creational ability of their sponsors.

Following the marchpast Group Captain A. D. Bell-Irving, commanding officer of the station, was heard over the loud speaker system as he officially welcomed the record crowd to the station field day.

Keen competition was seen in all the sporting events as station championships were decided. Included were the usual running and relay races for both men and W.D.'s as well as the high jump. Maintenance Wing was the victor in the tug of war after two hearty pulls, defeating 11 Area Repair Section. At soccer, a team from Batawa proved themselves to be tops when they defeated the station team by a 4-0 score. At lacrosse, two station teams battled it out, with the Spitfires topping the Dowlings by a 3-0 score. Swimming events were also well contested and were viewed by a large crowd of spectators.

Midway Special Attraction.

It was the midway attractions which interested the kiddies, however, and in anticipation of the free treats and other entertainment they were to get, crowded the gates of the midway area long before the opening at three-thirty. When the gates were finally opened the midway area was almost instantly filled and kiddies had a grand time as they pushed and shoved themselves into the various places of entertainment. Included were free pony rides, Punch and Judy show Pat Gibson Hollywood Western star who demonstrated the canine abilities of "Chum" his educated collie. Trick ropinig was also seen while cowboy songs lent a realistic air of the West.

Darktown Follies, consisting of dancing and singing acts by principals from the Cotton Club in New York, attracted the adults while the usual midway attractions and other games of chance did the usual brisk business once the midway got underway.

Special Care for Lost Kiddies.

As is inevitably the case when kiddies get mixed in jammed crowds, the midway was not without its lost and found children and in true exhibition style a special tent was provided for these unfortunates until claimed by their parents. Over the amplifiers of a sound truck intermittently came the announcement of a small boy or girl having lost parents, and with a description of the child being given all was soon brought to rights.

Throughout the afternoon special guides took small following crowds on a tour of the station and inspected airmen's quarters and other points of interest.

But it was the aerial display during the latter part of the afternoon which delighted all small boys and many of the grown-ups. Groups of single motored Harvard trainers and twin motored Cessnas roared over sports field in different formations, while individual Hudson and Lockheed transports sailed across the afternoon sky to give spectators an idea of modern speedy transportation.

Fine Aerial Display.

Climaxing the aerial display was the appearance of the famed Mitchell bomber, claimed to be the most heavily armored aircraft in the world, and two Hawker Hurricanes which dived and rolled over the field in an exhibition of acrobatics. Bombing by Harvards at the water's edge brought an end to the aerial exhibition.

Winners in the various sporting events were: Men's events— high jump—AC2 Brawley, WO. Blais, and AC1 Cookeley; 100 yd dash—LAC Hearle; LAC Allaway and LAC Hamilton; 220 dash—Sgt. Sowden, PO. McIntosh and Sgt. Moores; 440 dash,— AC2 Brawley, LAC Hamilton and LAC. Stevenson. Central Flying School won the relay race with Maintenance Wing being victors in the tug of war.

In the Women's events, LAW. Ronayne, LAW. Pfaffe and LAW. Houlihan were winners in the 75 yard dash, while LAW. Moulton, LAW. Pungnet and LAW. McIntosh were winners in the high jump. Composite Training School girls won the relay race.

In men's softball Maintenance Wing took an early lead over Equipment Wing in the first game of the station inter-department finals, while the girls settled their station championship for the year when the Pay and Accounts departments downed the Hospital girls by a 18-7 score.

Foxboro Resident Injured When Three Cars Crash

Mrs. James McRoberts of Foxboro, sustained facial lacerations, bruises to the legs and shock during a three-car, rear-end motor crash east of the Trenton R.C.A.F. main station in Monday's heavy traffic congestion along Highway No. 2. She was taken to the Belleville General Hospital where Dr. F. R. Ross was in attendance. Traffic Officer Chas. Siple reported after investigating the accident. Mrs. McRoberts was a passenger in an automobile driven by her husband.

According to eye witnesses Wm. Scrymgeour, 31 Bettes Street, was driving his car westerly in the heavy traffic and suddenly slowed down to keep in the line of traffic. Behind was Ross Roblin, R.R. No. 1 Belleville, who also slowed his car when the traffic slowed up. Mr McRoberts was the third vehicle implicated in the three-car accident and is said to have collided with the Roblin car, this in turn bounded forward into the rear of Mr. Scrymgeour's vehicle. Most of the property damage resulted to Mr. Roblin's vehicle, that was damaged considerably about the front and rear, being the buffer vehicle in the middle of the crash. Charges are pending, police related today.

OFFICIALS

In the north end of the city where the general hospital is located power was cut off for about an hour but the hospital used emergency equipment and reported no difficulty in caring for patients.

Walls Bulge.

A double brick house on Adolphus street, occupied by V. F. Silmeer and A. E. Quinn, was one of the most seriously damaged residential properties. The walls bulged and great spaces of surface brick fell away. A car parked in the driveway beside the house was damaged by falling brick. The seven members of the two families all ran to the street and had to find shelter with neighbors for the rest of the night.

The house is considered a total loss. Floors in the bedroom were pulled away from the wall in places.

Damage appeared to be grouped with several houses in a row being damaged and then a group escaping. Older buildings were particularly hard hit. The most seriously damaged section was the downtown area along Pott street, main thoroughfare of the city. Street lights were shattered, signs were knocked out of place and window displays fell in heaps. In the early morning debris from chimneys and cornices were scattered on downtown sidewalks but was quickly cleared away.

No Fires Reported.

Police said that if the tremors had come in the daytime when traffic was heavy, there would have been serious casualties in the downtown area.

No fires were reported and the fire department moved its truck out on the street to avoid danger of it being trapped if the firehall collapsed.

At the Cornwall Pants and Prince Clothing Co. plant the tremors caused a break in the sprinkler system and 20,000 gallons of water drained from an emergency tank. The water went down a sewer without causing any serious flooding.

Trenton and District

Sgt. John Cote Wounded in France

Trenton, Sept. 5—Mrs. J. E. Cote, Dufferin Ave., has received word that her son Sgt. John Cote was wounded in action in France on August 16th. In a letter home he said he was standing by his motorcycle and had just removed his glasses to clean the dust from them when a shell exploded nearby and he received fragments in his leg and chest also burns on his neck. He was immediately removed to hospital in England and is reported progressing favorably.

Sergt. Cote feels that while he has been extremely fortunate during his five years overseas, nevertheless he has missed considerable action in which he would liked to have taken part. For instance when in Italy it was his misfortune to be transferred back to England for an instructor's course just previous to his regiment entering the city of Rome. Now he feels that if he is confined long to hospital he will miss a great deal of the thrill of catching up with the Hun.

He enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment previous to the outbreak of war for special training. Early last year he was awarded the Efficiency Decoration. While in England recently taking an instructor's course before leaving for France he was transferred to the Algonquin Regiment.

A brother Sergt. Jud Cote is serving with the R.C.A.F. as an air gunner.

POLICE BLOTTER

For instance about the time dishes were rattling in the family sideboard causing the usual run of householders much concern about 12.30 Tuesday morning as the result of an earthquake, police were called to a Pinnacle St. address where the residents complained their neighbor was keeping them awake by singing. Investigations proved to police the neighbor had a singing jag on and was giving vent to his feelings by exercising his voice in the back yard. Police soon put a halt to the warblings and warned the man to keep his midnight serenading confined to his home.

Other family jousts were investigated and mutually settled at 75 College St., 19 Johnson St., and 280 Front St., as police assumed a Labor Day mutual aid society atmosphere. At 26 Boswell St. a "peeping Tom" was reported annoying the residents, but the trespassing party was no where to be seen when police arrived.

cost of seven planes. No warship was reported damaged.

Five cargo ships and a tanker were sunk, a cargo ship and three submarine chasers probably sunk and three sub-chasers were damaged in the Bonin and Volcano groups.

CANADIAN TROOPS

As the 8th Army strove to crush the Nazis in the Rimini area British warships ran boldly in along shore and pumped more than 800 shells into enemy defence positions.

The challenge was accepted by a German battery, which returned the fire of the warships until it was silenced by their shells.

Front dispatches said there were signs of reorganization and improvement in the German forces on the eastern bank of the front, which were reinforced by troops brought from the sector east of Florence, where a vital battle also is in progress.

5-Mile Gain for 5th

West of Florence the 5th army scored gains of almost five miles, reaching the Serchio river and the outskirts of Lucca, a provincial capital of 82,000 and a junction of six important roads.

Full occupation of Pisano in the central sector also gave the Americans possessions of key terrain east of Pisa and south of Lucca.

North and East of Florence, British forces encountered growing resistance, especially heavy artillery fire. They made new gains however.

Bridghead Deepened

The Canadian drive to deepen the bridgehead gained more than a mile, while British troops advanced after hard fighting to within half a mile of Corlando.

The M.A.A.F. sent 1,800 planes—heavy, medium, light and fighter-bombers into the onslaught against communications of Northern Italy yesterday.

Few usable highways and railways remained after the attack as supply or retreat routes for the Germans in the Gothic line. Mediums alone knocked out 16 of 18 bridges attacked.

The Brenner Pass rail line, which already is cut was bombed at four points by heavy bombers to prevent Nazi engineers from restoring it. Heavy bombers attacked German submarines in Genoa harbor.

SHOCK FELT

called out. The walls of buildings were caved in, and heavy concrete blocks were tumbled off some structures into the streets below.

Toronto and Western Ontario only a few hours previously had undergone a severe rain and lightning storm which caused an estimated loss of $150,000 damage to the tobacco crop in Norfolk County and various property damage through the London area.

The 1935 quake was similar in character, being most severe in Eastern Canada and the northeastern United States, causing property damage but no deaths. That disturbance, which had repercussions as far west as Alberta, had its origin in the Doucet area 180 miles north of Ottawa. A fissure 250 feet long and 40 feet deep appeared in the earth beside LAC Menjobagues near Doucet and railway lines were twisted and torn.

A minor earthquake in roughly the same area was on March 9, 1943, which seismologists said was caused by another slip of the Old Temiskaming Fault in the St. Lawrence Valley—one that has been quite active in recent years.

Another minor quake shook Toronto the day before Christmas in 1940, and tremors then were reported from Montrea, Ottawa and Owen Sound.

DEATHS

Resting at the family home until Thursday morning, Sept. 7th., then at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, from where the funeral will take place the same afternoon. Service in the chapel at 2:30 o'clock.

RUSSIANS CROSS NAREW RIVER IN NEW OFFENSIVE

Drive Threatens To Outflank East Prussia And Also Menaces Warsaw

MOP UP ROMANIA

London, Sept. 5—Russian troops have crossed the historic Narew river in their new, full-fledged offensive toward East Prussia, the German radio asserted last today.

At its nearest point just west of Lomza, the Nerew flows within 12 miles of the southern frontier of East Prussia. On the eastern frontier of the German province, Russian armies have been deployed for about three weeks.

Once before early in August, the Germans reported a Russian crossing of the Narew, along the banks of which the Germans defeated armies of the Czar in the last war and forced a Russian withdrawal from Warsaw.

100 Towns Captured.

The push in the Narew river sector threatens invasion or outflanking of East Prussia and also menaces Warsaw from the north. The Russian offensive started Sunday. Moscow reported 100 towns captured in the sector yesterday.

The Germans said the Russians had brought up new tank and infantry divisions. The exact point of crossing was not specified.

A Soviet communique said the Russians had captured 100 populated places southwest of Lomza, German stronghold 20 miles south of the East Prussian frontier, in the new onslaughts.

The drive, between the Bug and Narew rivers, bagged Choromany, 15 miles southwest of Lomza and nine miles from the Nazis' Narew river bastion of Ostroleka, but it still was too early to assess the full importance of the rush.

(Associated Press War Correspondent Joseph Morton, flying up the Danube river from Bucharest, declared Russian columns were "well west of Craiova," which is 110 miles west of Bucharest and within 50 mile of Yugoslavia.)

60,000 Germans Captured.

The joined armies of Gen. Rodion Y. Malinvosky and Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin captured 60,000 Germans near Calarsi, about 10 miles from the northern Bulgarian frontier. The Soviet communique said these troops had been sent from Bulgaria as the Red Army was approaching Bucharest."

(German broadcasts claimed Russian troops have set up "bridgeheads" on Bulgarian territory. There was no confirmation from Moscow).

Zella Kicks Windshield Out Of Police Car

Zella's in the hoosegow again.

Zella is that vociferous Bancroft lass who frequently gets herself into unpredictable trouble when she comes to Belleville and indulges in that time-honored practice of imbibing too freely of "wobble water". Her name is Zella Cooney and today she appeared in court charged with intoxication and also of causing wilful damage to public property.

Apparently when Zella has taken too much "giggle juice" she takes a marked dislike to the boys in blue of the Belleville Police Department. At any rate it would appear so after what occurred on Sunday afternoon, when Zella was appreheded on Pinnacle Street.

Complaints from the lower portion of Pinnacle Street, were received relating as to an alleged intoxicated woman in that sector. Police drove to the scene and found Zella, but not too steady on her feet. It was by force she had to be placed in the police cruiser. And after all Zella wasn't so badly off that she didn't realize what was going on.

Turns to Football Tactics.

Once placed in the car Zella turned to football tactics and started kicking. Her punting aim was true and sure, as she booted a perfect field goal from the 49-yard line ending up with kicking the windshield out of the front of the police cruiser with her heel. That's why Zella is facing a charge of causing destruction to public property.

In Tuesday's police court Zella readily admitted both charges, when arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd. As a matter of fact, when introducing the intoxication charge Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan entered it as a third offence. On the liquor charge Miss Cooney was given from four to six months in the Mercer Reformatory at Toronto.

"How come when two people are in a fight the police only brought me in"? interrupted Zella. 'One of your type was all the constable could handle", remarked Crown Attorney Donnan.

Wanted Another Chance.

"You are a nice enough girl when sober, but when you are drinking you just can't seem to keep out pf trouble. After all you haven't paid for the damage to the plumbing you caused in the cell block here last fall," concluded His Worship, who imposed a two months' jail term on the charge of wilful destruction of property, which is to run concurrent with the liquor count.

Japs Abandon City of Sittaung

Kandy, Ceylon, Sept. 5. (CP)—Japanese forces retreating into Western Burma have abandoned Sittaung, one of the Chindwin Valley bases from which they launched their ill-fated invasion of India, and the village has been occupied without opposition by British troops, headquarters announced today.

Many Japanese bodies and considerable equipment were found in the village, which is situated on the west bank of the Chindwin about 20 miles inside the Burma frontier.

Armistice Terms For Bulgaria Being Held Up

Washington, Sept. 5 (AP).—Allied armistice terms for Bulgaria are being held up, it was learned today, pending proof from the Bulgarian envoys in Cairo that they can speak for the new government.

Although the terms are said to be considerably more severe than those about to be signed in Moscow with Romania, officials here have little doubt Bulgaria will drop out of the Axis line-up without a whimper as soon as technicalities are cleared up.

The Bulgarian terms do not require that Bulgaria declare war on Germany, but are believed to demand right of passage for Allied troops and disarmament of the Bulgarian army as soon as Nazi forces there are under control.

Right To Maintain Army.

Romania, which went to war with Germany before concluding any agreement with the Allies, is receiving the right to maintain her army at least for the duration of the war.

Romania has also been given fairly concrete hope that she will regain Transylvania, transferred to Hungary by the Nazis.

While so far as is known, Bulgaria has not been promised Dobruja, a province taken from Romania and given her by Hitler, it is considered likely here she will retain that area because of historical and geographical reasons. The question is one for the peace conference, authoritative sources said, and if Bulgaria's actions from now on appear to warrant special punishment, it may be decided against her.

Washington officials who would be directly concerned say that so far they have received no information of concrete Hungarian peace offers. They doubt that the Hungarians will be able to break loose from the Nazis until Germany collapses or the Red Army closes in.

$750,000 Damage To Tobacco Crop In Norfolk County

London, Ont., Sept. 5 — (CP)—A severe rain and hail storm accompanied by lightning cut a swath of damage through western Ontario yesterday, with the loss to the tobacco crop in Norfolk county estimated as high as $750,000.

Tobacco company officials at Simcoe gave the estimate of $750,000 damage, declaring that between 2,000 and 3,000 acres of tobacco had been completely wiped out. The majority of tobacco growers carried hail insurance.

On many farms in Norfolk the hailstones were large enough to smash glass in greenhouses. The leaves were stripped from tobacco stalks over a wide area of Norfolk county, particularly in Windham township south and west of Simcoe. Rain fell so heavily in Simcoe that some streets were flooded from curb to curb.

Prisoners of War Thankful For Parcels Received

Taken prisoner of war in November, 1943, Warrant Officer R. B. Doughty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doughty, Madoc, is greatly appreciative of parcels forwarded him, according to a letter received by his parents recently. The reaction of WO. Doughtly and that of his comrades upon receipt of the parcels is aptly worded in the letter which appears below.

Dear Folks:

Since my last letter to you I have had a windfall of parcels and two letters. The letters were written the 19th and 25th of February. I can't remember how many parcels I have had since my last, but altogether I now have seven parcels, four of which were cigarettes, 4,000 in all, one a pair of fine blankets, a clothing and food parcel, and one of books and games. All have arrived in excellent condition and every article is useful beyond words, and being put to use. Space does not permit me to enumerate the contents but all are fine. My best thanks to you all for your thoughtfulness also the thanks of the rest of the crew who have had a fair share of the spoils. Except for Bill who received a clothing and cigarette parcel today they have had none as yet. It seems like a lot of cigarettes but there are many uses for them here besides helping some of the boys out who are short. From your letters I gather you are fairly well. Sorry you had the "flu." We are all fine here and enjoying good weather. Hope you are well and keeping the chin up. Cheerio. Ross.

19 FATALITIES REPORTED

There were 19 fatalities in eastern Canada over the Labor Day weekend, last long holiday weekend of the summer season. Seven of the deaths were from drowings and 11 as the result of various other accidents. Fourteen were in Ontario and four in Quebec.

ROCKETS ASSIST TAKE-OFFS

Rocket power is successfully helping heavily laden planes into the air, it is announced at Wright Field, Ohio, after four years of intensive experiments. Originally designed and developepd as a means of lifting heavy loads into the air from short front-line runways, the rocket take-off units are doing their job. However these units may never see tactical use, as engineers have found their use to be extremely limited. Experiments emphasizing sustained rocket flight, dream of pseudo-scientific fiction writers, continue despite problems involving fuel, weight and range. The above photo shows a B-25 medium bomber—not afire—but with flames and smoke issuing from a fixed take-off unit under test where rocket-assisted take-offs have been tested since 1940.

Germans Turned Flamethrowers On Prisoners Herded in Cell

One torture chamber is at Issy les Moulineaux, 10 minutes' drive from the centre of Paris and inside the Air Ministry grounds which the Germans took over during their occupation.

Civilians tell you that Frenchmen were taken here by the truckload and that truckloads of plain wooden coffins were carted away. The grounds now are under strict guard and you require a pass to get by the gendarmes and youths of the French resistance movement on sentry duty.

Torture is said to have been carried out in a rifle range on the grounds. In the low concrete building housing the range you came upon evidence that makes you wonder if you can believe your eyes. It is not the dozen coffins piled here and there outside the building nor the three bullet-riddled posts at the end of the range.

Flame-Throwers Used.

The side wall of the narrow range are covered with hand prints. These walls are covered with grey asbestos composition which easily takes the impression of a hand pressed against it. Near the steel door leading into the range all the asbestos has been clawed away.

The F.F.I. guards who take you through say that flame-throwers were turned on the unfortunates whose handprints are on the walls. They point to some small handprints that look as though they were made by children.

Behind the sliding steel doors at one end of the range is a furnace with long pipes that point to the chamber. The guards say this furnace was not part of the original range nor was it used for throwing flame at the Gestapo's prisoners.

It was for introducing a baking heat into the room where the prisoners were herded. The actual flame throwers are said to have been portable. The wall that separates the furnace room from the torture room and its four square ports and steel walls are blackened by smoke.

Evidence of Shooting.

Members of the French resistance movement taken prisoner are said to have been among those who passed through the chamber.

At the extreme end of the range three bullet-torn posts still stand and three or four sawed off by bullets lie in the corners. A dusty rosary hangs from one of them and a woman's comb is stuck into it. On another is a baby's dress. The posts are blood-stained.

Halfway down the range are wood platforms where bays of quicklime are supposed to have been stacked. The quicklime supposedly was used to destroy the identity of the bodies.

By a quick visit to the range you can't nearly arrive at its true or full history. The guards who accompany you on a tour have merely been told themselves the story they repeat to you, and don't seem able to understand the brutal inspiration that would cause any one to set up an establishment such as this.

Veterans of this and other wars break into tears at the sight of the handprints on the walls of this chamber of horrors.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

St. Thomas, Sept. 5 (CP)—Edward R. Vining, part owner of the motor boat Olga, which capsized off Port Stanley June 4, carrying 17 persons to death, was committed for trial on a charge of manslaughter when he appeared in court here today.

On a charge of contravening oil control regulations Vining was fined $50 or a month in jail.

ARC DE TRIOMPHE SCENE OF BATTLE

Dangerous Driving Charge Preferred Against Motorist

A headon collision between two automobiles on Yeomans St. resulted in considerable property damage, but no person sustained serious injuries, police learned after investigations late Saturday night. Reports of a serious accident took Constables Rathwell and Evans to the scene where two motor cars were found with the left front wheels so badly damaged the cars were unable to move under their own power.

Subsequent investigations revealed, that an automobile driven by Theron Sager, 75 Dundas St., and owned by James Elliott, 193 West Moira St., had collided with a parked car owned by Percy Lough, Mountain View. Eye witnesses told police Sager was proceeding south on Yeomans St. when the motor car he was driving collided with the left side of the parked vehicle, shearing off the left front wheel, fender and damaging the headlights of Mr. Lough's parked car. The front wheel of the vehicle driven by Sager was doubled beneath the chassis of the car. Extensive under-carriage damage also resulted to both vehicles, police revealed.

Today in city police court Sager pleaded guilty to a charge of dangerous driving and was assessed $41.75, which included costs amounting to $16.75. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan informed the court that a second charge of joy riding would not be dealt with. Magistrate Lloyd asserted that speed was undoubtedly the principal factor leading to the accident.

Rumor Germany Capitulates Denied By British Sources

London,,Sept. 5. (CP)—A rumor that Germany had capitulated—carried by the Brussels radio in the form of a denial—caused a flurry in Britain today and provoked an official denial from Allied supreme invasion headquarters that the enemy had capitulated.

The wispy little rumor, quickly branded by the Press Association as untrue and "likely to be followed during the next few days and weeks by many similar, and equally inaccurate rumors", set telephones and pub cash registers ringing in this victory-eager capital. Some enthusiasts were toasting the end of the war; the more cautious were checking with newspaper offices.

The Brussels "surrender rumor" spawned a great crop of similar phonies in London, such as these: that the BBC had told listeners to stand by for world-shaking news; that parliament had been called into session for 6 p.m.; that the King was to broadcast an important announcement any minute; that Germany was having a revolution, and so on. None was true, but the telephones kept ringing.

POLICE COURT

Belleville post Labor Day police court, held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd saw a lengthy list of cases presented by Deputy Chief Harman, clerk of the court. The majority of the cases were for minor offences, such as infractions of the traffic by-laws, intoxication and suchlike, the majority of which had found the accused persons entering pleas of guilty and paying minimum fines prior to the opening of court.

Unable to Attend.

When Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan called the name of James R. Purvis, Belleville, to face charges of assault and also of using insulting language the accused person failed to respond to his name. Upon learning Purvis had been properly summoned into court Mr. Donnan suggested it was an uadulterated incident of "total disregard for the court". However, the matter was laid over for two weeks after Sgt. Ellis informed the court, that Purvis had notified the police station he would be unable to attend today.

Cases Laid Over.

At the request of R. D. Arnott, K.C., a charge of driving a car with defective brakes, preferred against William Powers, was enlarged a week, while a charge of being found in possession of loose gasoline coupons, preferred against Sherman Brady, Stirling, was laid over until Friday.

Mrs. Agnes Howell, 40 Parker St., failed to answer to her name when a charge of failing to procure a dog licence was read against her. Orvill Boomhour of the same address, admitted neglect in the procuring of a dog licence and paid the minimum fine. Boomhour told the court the other dog at Mrs. Howell's residence did not belong at that address and the former charge was immediaetly withdrawn.

MORE ROBOTS HIT LONDON

London, Sept. 5-(CP)-Britain's four-day respite from flying bomb attacks ended abruptly today when the Germans sent another shower of robots over London and southern England shortly before daybreak. Both casualties and damage resulted, a brief announcement said.

British Naval Planes Hit German Battleship

16 Other Enemy Vessels Damaged in Series of Raids in North Waters

PREVIOUSLY CRIPPLED

London, Sept. 5 (CP)—British naval planes scored hits on the great 35,000-ton German battleship Tirpitz and damaged at least 16 other enemy vessels in a series of in northern waters, the admiralty in northern watres, the admiralty announced tonight.

The Tirpitz, previously crippled in a Norwegian Fjord by British midget submarines and fleet aerial attacks, has recently been reported repaired and making test runs.

The attacking planes damaged six enemy radio stations, hangars and other installations along the Norwegian coast in the Hammerfest area north of the Arctic Circle near North Cape. They shot down nine German planes and damaged a number of others.

Operate From Carriers.

The planes operated from carriers under command of the Home Fleet Commander-in-Chief Admiral Sir Henry Moore. The Tirpitz was in a Fjord, where she had previously been damaged grievously.

Hammerfest is along the route which the Germans in northern Finland would have to use for a sea evacuation now that Finland has surrendered.

The admiralty communique said large and medium bombs crashed into the Tirpitz but that smoke screens prevented an accurate assessment od damages.

"During the course of attacks on enemy shipping, an anti-aircraft vessel was seen to blow up and a destroyer and tanker were set on fire," the communique said. "Damage was inflicted on at least 16 other enemy vessels which included a U-boat, a U-boat depot ship, two armed trawlers and a large supply ship."

BURRS

Farmer Escapes Injury When Tractor Plunges Down Embankment

Burrs — Mr. Wellington Howell of Centre was severely shaken up when thrown from his tractor. It was in the barn of Mr. Harold Young and in starting it up Mr. Howell in some way, shifted the gear ahead instead of in reverse. The tractor shot ahead, going through the doors of a thirteen-foot embankment barn. He struck his head and was thrown clear of the tractor but was not too seriously injured. The tractor was badly damaged.

Barn Burned.

The fine new barn of Mr. A. Lloyd, Hillier, was burned when a fire started in the mow where straw was being blown during threshing operations. The separator was removed from the barn before the fire reached it.

Child Injured.

While visiting at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Claud Maxwell, Bowermans' Donna Parks met with a painful accident. She accompanied her uncle to a gravel pit where he was working and in playing about came too near the shovel which her uncle was using and was struck in the forehead by it. It was a nasty gash that required several stitches to close. She is the five-year-old daughter of Mr and Mrs. Donald Parks.

Narrow Escape From Injury.

Whole Blood and Plasma

A development of more than passing interest is the beginning of daily shipments of whole blood for wounded American soldiers in Europe. It is provided by the New York Red Cross, and will be used in the military hospitals in cases needing whole-blood transfusions and will supplement the use of plasma administered at the front.

Recent developments in the preservation and transportation of whole blood make it possible to ship this blood long distances and in short time by planes. Medical authorities state that in instances of patients suffering from traumatic shock unaccompanied by excessive bleeding, plasma transfusions are the only ones needed. In others, red blood cells, which are removed in the processing of plasma, are needed also. These are primarily cases in which the patient has lost a large quantity of blood. In such cases whole blood is given to supplement the use of plasma. However, since whole blood is highly perishable compared with plasma (which keeps indefinitely) and requires rather cumbersome refrigeration, whole blood transfusions are necessarily limited to the rear areas.

In the past, the whole blood used by the armed forces has been obtained from able-bodied men at military bases who were near enough to hospitals to provide blood when needed. The only exceptions to this practice, which dates back to the First World War and is followed by many nations, are certain instances where whole blood has been procured from civilians in combat zones, as in England.

We would like to remind anyone that the above development is only for use in New York where the proper facilities are at hand and is not meant to take the place of taking blood donations for plasma purposes as has been done in the city for the past couple of years. The prompt administration of plasma is possibly the foremost lifesaver of the war and is largely responsible for saving the lives of over ninety out of every hundred wounded soldiers.

It is well to remember that a pint of blood to save the life of a soldier or sailor is the most important contribution any Canadian at home can make.

It Could Happen Here

The automobile purrs quietly along the street . . . Ahead a young man pedals his bicycle, slowly weaving to and fro as he loafs along . . . He pays no attention to traffic behind him . . . The motorist speeds his machine to pass him . . . Suddenly there is a crash . . . a scream . . . a body hurtles through the air to fall on the pavement . . . Lies still . . . Ahead, a white-faced motorist quickly brings his car to a stop . . . He gazes in horror at bicycle wreckage strewn over the pavement . . . He turns his head from the prone figure on the pavement . . . A crowd gathers . . . police sirens shrill . . . "He suddenly turned in front of me," the motorist mumbles through a twisted handkerchief . . .

That did not happen here. But it could. The exigencies of war have caused the number of bicycles to multiply a dozen-fold. Young men, young women, middle aged people and children are among those who have adopted this form of transportation. And with its adoption has arrived a new menace to life and limb.

This situation has grown mostly through the devil-may-care attitude of some of the younger people who ride bicycles, with no particular place to go. They dawdle along, riding at a pace that necessitates considerable juggling and weaving of the machine in order to maintain balance. They assume the attitude that they are monarchs of all they survey; the highway is theirs to do as they will, and let no one stand in their way. It is an actual fact that in some cases these riders have deliberately turned their machines in the path of oncoming motors, and loafed along in front safe in their assumption that the drive won't hit them.

It is to be hoped that no serious accident will occurr before these careless youths come to their senses and realize that their safety rests to a great extent upon their behavior when using the highways or city streets. The majority of motorists are responsible people who are aware of the rules of the road. But if no co-operation is forthcoming from these bike-riding smart alecs, then the onus of accident responsibility should not be placed entirely on their shoulders.

Parents would be well advised to warn bicycle-riding offspring of the danger that lurks in the careless manipulation of their machines. Riders should remember that motor cars have an equal right to travel on highways. And a further word of warning—a bicycle puts up a poor argument when coming in violent contact with a motor car or truck.

Bayeux Tapestry

(British Information Service)

The reported finding of the Bayeux tapestry in the Louvre brings to mind the history of this remarkable piece of artistry.

This early example of the "comic strip" method represents in minute detail the invasion of Britain by William the Conqueror in 1066. The tapestry is woven on linen cloth 230 feet long and 18 inches wide. Eight colors have been used to depict the main events in 58 scenes.

It is certainly contemporary work, thus providing invaluable evidence of the customs and dress of the eleventh century, and enabling us to reconstruct the past more vividly than in any verbal record. Harold's visit conveying King Edward the Confessor's message to William. Harold's adventures. His return to England. Funeral of Edward in Westminster Abbey. William's preparations for the invasion and the landing in England. A banquet. The battle of Hastings. All these and many more are among the subjects on which Matilda, William the Conqueror's wife, or some other weaver, has expended her skill.

The historical and artistic value of the tapestry seems to have escaped public notice in the centuries which followed. Its present renown dates from 1803 when Napoleon Bonaparte had it exhibited in Paris to arouse enthusiasm for the invasion of England which he was then planning.

March of Time

(Ottawa Journal)

The war is ending before our eyes. Germany's power is being ground down as every day passes. Little more than a month ago General de Gaulle was in Montreal. He confided with quiet assurance that he expected to be in Paris in August, a statement that seemed over-optimistic in mid-July. But he proceeded to show with mathematical precision why Paris would fall in August—men, planes, tanks and guns. He admitted no possibility of doubt.

Today his judgment is vindicated, not alone on his estimate of an isolated event, but by his unshakeable faith in the destiny of his country. It is to the handful of such men of faith and unswerving devotion to the cause of democracy and humanity that the world stands in debt today. The news of victories that comes rolling in from the western battlefields is compounded of their vision and their courage.

LOST OPPORTUNITIES

Good judgment whispered: Save it all,
Tomorrow it may be
From dawn to dusk the rain may fall,
And larger want you'll see.

That gift your heart would like to make,
Forget it, and be wise!
Beyond what's done for friendship's sake
The need of old age lies.

But now, the friend my gift had cheered
Beyond my reach has passed;
So much the future dark I feared,
I held my coins too fast.

And there they are, piled safe and high,
And clear the weather stays.
Too late! Not all their power can buy
The lost, good yesterdays!

Pyle Finds Everybody Well-dressed In Paris But Prices Are Zooming

By ERNIE PYLE

In France (by wireless)—We left Paris after a few days and went again with the armies in the field. In Paris we had slept in beds and walked on carpeted floors for the first time in three months.

It was a beautiful experience, and yet for some perverse reason a great inner feeling of calm and relief came over us when we once again set up our cots in a tent, with apple trees for our draperies and only the green grass for a rug.

Hank Gorrell of the United Press was with me, and he said:

"This is ironic, that we should have to go back with the armies to get some peace."

The gaiety and charm and big cityness of Paris somehow had got a little on our nerves after so much of the opposite. I guess it indicates that all of us will have to make our return to normal life gradually and in small doses.

• •

Paris unquestionably is a lovely city. It seems to me to have been little hurt by the war. You can still buy almost anything imaginable if you have money. Everybody is well-dressed. But prices are terrific, and already they have started zooming higher.

Those of us who expect to be coming home before long have made shopping tours and stocked up with gifts. And with the exception of perfume, which is dirt cheap, we pay about three times what we would at home for the same thing.

I'm sorry the restaurants couldn't open before we left. For although I'm not much of a gourmet I do value the sense of taste, and we've eaten enough meals in private homes and small-town restaurants over here to realize that it's all true about the French culinary genius.

They simply have a knack for making any old thing taste wonderful, just as the British have a knack for making everything taste horrible.

• •

The other night we were talking about the beautiful women of Paris—and who doesn't?

One fellow said the women here were the most beautiful in the world.

But I said no, that wasn't true. You see women in America and England who are just as beautiful as any in Paris. But it seems that here the percentage of good-looking women is higher than in other countries.

And another fellow said no, that wasn't it either. He thought the ratio was approximately the same in America and England and France. But in Paris a bigger percentage have the gift of getting themselves up to look devastating.

And I guess that's it.

We thought there were a lot of people on the streets those first two days. But you should have seen Paris a few days later, when the whole populace began to come out. By midafternoon it is almost impossible to drive in the streets because of the bicycles. They take up the entire street, as far as you can see. The sidewalks are packed. It's like Christmas shopping time at home.

Within three days Paris was transformed from a city crackling and roaring with brief warfare into a city entirely at peace. Within three days Paris was open for business as usual, and its attitude toward the war reminded me of Cairo after its threat of danger had gone.

• •

As usual, those Americans most deserving of seeing Paris will be the last ones to see it, if they ever do. By that I mean the fighting soldiers.

Only one infantry regiment and one reconnaissance outfit of Americans actually came into Paris, and they passed out through the city quickly and went on with their war.

The first ones in the city to stay were such nonfighters as the psychological-warfare and civil-affairs people, public-relations men and correspondents.

I heard more than one rear-echelon soldier say he felt a little ashamed to be getting all the grateful cheers and kisses for the liberation of Paris when the guys who broke the German army and opened the way for Paris to be free were still out there fighting without benefit of kisses or applause.

YEAST AND PEANUT BUTTER

Dried brewer's yeast (not yeast used in baking) ordinarily comes in powder form. It is far richer in vitamins than the lieve yeast used for leavening, and it does not cause fermentation when taken internally, as live yeast does.

Dried yeast, the fermentative action of which has been killed by heat, is richer in most of the known components or factors of the vitamin B complex, particularly B, (thiamin), B2 (G or riboflavin) and nicotine acid (niacin, anti-pellagra factor) than any natural food.

In sections of the south where pellagra has been prevalent the health authorities have encouraged the sale of dried yeast powder in bulk by groceries and other stores so that people could buy it and consume fair quantities of it every day to prevent or cure early or mild pellagra.

As Dr. Jas. S. McLester points out, in his book Nutrition and Diet in Health and Disease (Saunders, '39), yeast, if it is to be effective, must be taken in what may be regarded as enormous quantities. "We have found it of advantage to give 180 to 270 Gm. (one-half pound, more or less) of powdered brewers' yeast daily in the case of severely ill pellagrins. This is best tolerated when given in iced milk or eggnog in doses of about 20 Gm. (rounded tablespoonful) each."

Fresh liquid brewer's yeast is perfectly good for leavening dough if it is procured from the brewery at least twice a week and kept refrigerated until it is to be used. Applied comfortably warm, as a poultice—gauze pads copiously saturated with the fresh liquid yeast, changed twice daily, it is an excellent remedy for old indolent varicose ulcers on the leg; it stimulates the healing process and cleans up the ulcer. The applications should be continued constantly for a week or more—until the surface has a pink, velvety, smooth, shiny appearance on a level, but not higher than, the surrounding normal skin. At each change of poultice or dressing bathe the ulcer gently by allowing comfortably warm salt solution to run over it for a few minutes—heaping teaspoonful common table salt in quart of water.

It is not difficult to take small amounts of dried powdered yeast straight every day. When it comes to taking several ounces of it every day, various expedients to vary the taste or the monotony may be employed. Taking it stirred in ice cold milk, in egg nog, in tomato juice are welcome variations. The dried yeast powder may be taken sprinkled over cereals or added to bouillon or other soups, or mixed with catsup in a cocktail. One palatable way is to mix one-fourth pound of dried powdered yeast thoroughly with a pound of peanut butter—this is stable, palatable, low in water content, highly nutritious, especially if the peanut butter contains some crunchy bits of the peanut.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Dangers of Sulfa Drugs

Recently you referred to the dangers in taking sulfa drugs. I have been taking sulfa (something or other), as prescribed by a physician for several months.

(J. G.)

Answer—Little danger if you are constantly under your physician's observation. People taking sulfa drugs should not drive cars or keep at any work involving responsibility. They should not sign contracts or make any serious decisions involving their affairs. Sulfa drugs sometimes seriously impair the faculties for a while. One taking a sulfa drug should remain quiet, if not in bed, for a week after the drug has been discontinued.

They Never Get Me Down

Keep up the good work. You probably feel discouraged at times. Don't let them get you down. For every carper who complains I'll wager there are a thousand readers who have a warm spot in their hearts for Ol' Doc Brady—who, I observed when I visited your bowling green one day last winter, is kidding us about being old. (L. H. A.)

Answer—They never get me down just clutching wildly at the ropes occasionally. Come to think of it, the bowling green contributes much toward keeping me in there fighting.

Hay Fever

They seem to be stressing vitamin C for hay fever this year. I have been taking 100 mg. ascorbic acid (pure vitamin C) tablets since the first of June—I feel it is not doing the trick. (Mrs. T. L. G.)

GEOGRAPHIC CENTRES

Where is the geographic centre of the United States?

There is no known method by which the exact geographic centre of a given territory can be located. According to the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, the approximate geographic centre of the United States proper is in the eastern part of Smith County, Kansas, at latitude 9 degrees, 50 minutes, and longitude 98 degrees, 35 minutes.

The geographic centre of an area may be defined, in a general way, as that point on which the surface of the area would balance if it were a plane of uniform thickness, or, in other words, the centre of gravity of the surface.

Anybody can find the geographic centre, roughly, if he will take a good outline map of the United States proper and balance it on the point of a needle. This point should be in the northern part of Kansas.

There are several reasons why this, or any other method, will not give an exact result. All maps, no matter how carefully prepared, are somewhat distorted. The United States is very irregular in outline. Besides, it is impossible to get away from the fact that any land area is part of a spherical surface.

The North American datum, which was established by the Coast and Geodetic Survey for triangulation purposes, is often confused with the geographic centre of the United States. This point is at Ogden, Riley County, Kansas, at 39 degrees, 13 minutes and 30.686 seconds west latitude, and 96 degrees, 32 minutes and 30.506 seconds north longitude.

The geographic centre of North America, as determined by the U. S. Geological Survey, is a point a few miles west of Devils Lake in Pierce County, North Dakota.

Hitler's Foreign Legion

DR. STEFAN LITAUER
(BBC Press Service.)

London, (By Mail)—Reports from Normandy revealed the astonishing fact that among the many prisoners taken were not only German but quite a number of Poles, Czechs, Croats, Russians, and even some Turks and Japs. If we add to this French, Dutch, Belgian, Norwegian and Spanish units fighting with the Germans alongside Hungarians, Rumanians and Finns on the Russian front, we get a rather disturbing and distorted picture of the forces whom Hitler has marshalled against the United Nations. It is a problem which deserves examination, and this is what I intend to do today. After all, it is we who claim to represent a world in arms against Hitler; it is we who claim to be supported in this struggle by all freedom-loving nations whose cause we are supposed to defend. How then do we view this phenomenon of Hitler's Foreign Legion, whom Goebbel's propoganda tries to picture as the true Europe-in-arms against us? Who are they, and how did they happen to become Hitler's Foreign Legion?

These foreign elements in the German Army are by no means hemogenous neither in race nor in their allegiance. There are infatuated fanatics alongside soldiers of fortune and unhappy human chattle.

Let us examine first the fanatics, the infatuated reckless youth infected with the disease grafted by Hitler and spread afterwards by his disciples in foreign lands, Quisling in Norway, Mussert in Holland, Dogrelle in Belgium, Doriot in France, to mention only the more known. Others, whom we don't know by their names, have grown during five years of war in the hermetically isolated Europe sown with seeds of Nazi depravation.

Those knights-errants of a forlorn hope have been chosen by Hitler's henchman-in-chief, Himmler, to be included not into the German Army proper but into the special ranks of the fighting members of the National Socialist Party, the notorious Waffen-SS, Hitler's political army.

And so the SS Panzer Division Viking includes an Estonian battalion and some Flemish volunteers. The SS Panzer Grenadier Division Nordland includes various Norwegian and Danish units. The SS Mountain Division Kroatien is formed mainly from Moslem and Catholic subjects of Croatia. There is an entire SS Netherland Division formed of Dutch Mussert followers an SS Lettische Division formed from Latvians, and an SS Galizien Divisions formed from Ukrainians.

The foreign volunteer after his acceptance and recruitment was given either German nationality or equal rights with members of the German Wehrmacht. The whole movement of organizing Foreign Legions was started under the cover of "Fight against Bolshevism" three years ago to strengthen Germany's man-power in her war against Russia. Only "token" contingents of this type existed at the beginning of the Russian campaign but it was the winter of 1942-43 which saw the recruitment in full swing. Top speed recruiting for these SS Legions was then going on in the Baltic countries, in Denmark, Holland, Belgium, France, Norway, and Croatia. The number of foreigners in the Waffen-SS in the summer of 1943 represented 20 to 25 per cent of the total of about 500,000. It is doubtful whether this political army raised under the slogan of "Fight against Bolshevism" could be as usefully employed on Germany's Western Front. However, the political tuition of the foreign legionaries is based on the notorious distortions of German propaganda, which represents the Allied Second Front as Churchill's and Roosevelt's enslavement by Stalin.

The soldiers of fortune, the real mercenaries of Hitler's armies, are mostly provided by prisoners of war taken on the Russian front. They were first sent to a camp where they had to submit to the most inhumanly cruel treatment. Hungry, dirty, clad in rags, decimated by epidemics, or simply massacred by their German guardians, they became real scum of the earth. Their only desire was to be released from this inferno. The Germans changed their method then. The bewildered prisoners, driven to utmost despair, were promised everything—food, clothing, entertainment, drinks, women—but for a prize; they would have to become soldiers again, they would attain the honour of serving alongside the German Army, and share in the victories of Hitler's forces. The initial German plan was to form a large Russian Army 200,000 men strong under the Russian quisling General Vlassov to launch a fratricidal war among the Russians, and undermine the moral and political unity of the peoples of the Soviet Union. But this plan had soon to be given up. Although driven to despair, even these prisoners refused to take up arms against their brothers and betray their country. And so the Germans decided to change their plans: out of these prisoners of war they formed a large mercenary army for different purposes. Many Russians, for example were working in Pioneer battalions, but have been pushed into front line, fighting in Normandy. But most of the mercenaries are Cossacks or of Asiatic origin. In Italy, the retreat of the Mackensen Army before the victorious advance of General Clark's Fifth Army was covered by rearguard action carried out by the German 162nd Turkmenian Division, composed entirely of nationals of the Asiatic tribes inhabiting the vast territories of the Soviet Union. Here again Hitler has readily given up his pet Aryan race idea and is fraternising with non-Aryan Asiatics in need of help. In the Balkans, Russian Cossacks from the Don and the Kuban rivers and from the Kirgisian Steppes, fighting under the German General von Pannwitz, are used for punitive expeditions against the Tito supporting population. In France, the Germans have recently used Cossacks for punitive action in Bellegrade, a small town on the Swiss frontier, which was temporarily in the hands of the Maquis. But the main feature of these troops is their mercenary character, and as typical mercenaries they are reliable as long as they consider to be on the winning side. Chased into retreat, deprived of loot, they throw away their arms and simply give themselves up.

The last and the most numerous category are those unhappy human beings brought by sheer force into the German Army. Most of them are Poles, about 300,000 or more. The recruitment of the Poles is a sad story of a nation's tragedy which discloses all the perversity of mind and cynical disregard for human rights, so typical of the present-day Germans. After they overran Poland in September 1939, the Germans then divided the country into two separate parts: one-consisting of most of Central Poland and some of her Eastern territories, the other, comprising Poland's Western provinces and the adjoining sections of Central Poland with Poland's great centre of the textile industry, Lodz. The first part was put under a special German administration and named the General Government, the second was simply proclaimed to be German territory, and was incorporated into the German Reich. Eight million Poles suddenly found themselves overnight belonging to Germany under the law, body and soul.

At first the Germans simply tried to exterminate the Polish population. They started a large-scale deportation of Poles from the Western provinces into Central Poland. Mass evictions of Poles assumed gigantic proportions. By the end of 1940, after over one year of occupation, the Germans removed from Western Poland over 1 1-2 million people. This forcible eviction of Poles from their native soil was the most flagrant violation of all international agreements concerning the administration of territories occupied during a war. But the Germans did not stop at that. When their scheme to give the places and the property of the Poles to German settlers failed, and when Himmler realized that the task of exterminating Poles from their native soil on which they lived for centuries, surpassed even the capacity of the Gestapo, new schemes were devised. In March, 1941, the German authorities introduced in Western Poland the so-called Deutsche Volksliste which was an identity check-up to establish who can be regarded as loyal to Germany. The consequences of not being inscribed on the Deutsche Volksliste were persecution, concentration camps, lower food rations, and forced labor. To save the existence of their families and especially of their young sons, some of the Poles got inscribed as belonging to the Deutsche Volksliste. Poles with German names or with German ancestors were forced to register. Registration on the Deutsche Volksliste was followed by the calling up of men of military age for German army service.

And so another flagrant violation of international agreements concerning the laws of war has been committed by the Germans,—Poles were forced into the German Army.

A similar procedure was applied to the Germans by the Czechs in the Sudetenland, and to the French in Alsace-Lorraine. Altogether half a million Poles, Czechs and French became the victims of compulsory recruitment for the Wehrmacht.

But the results of this international transgression will be disastrous for the Germans. In 1918 it was the Czechs in the Austrian Army who first contributed to the disintegration of the German-Austrian Forces. This time this important role will fall to the Poles. Immediately following the landing of the Allied Forces in Normandy the Polish Government in London has issued an appeal to all Poles in the German Army not to shoot at their Allies, to lay down their arms, and to go over to our side. This appeal has not been in vain. The other day one of my friends who acted as War Correspondent in Normandy told me a characteristic incident. On one sector of the front, early in the morning, when the artillery barrage subdued, a group of 26 German soldiers led by an N.C.O. who was waving a white handkerchief approached the Allied line. They were all Poles.

"We were 35 Poles in our battalion, so nine more have still to come", said the N.C.O. Three hours later the nine arrived.

This little episode is a sign of the things to come, soon the foreign element in the German Army will prove to be the weak spot of the German Forces. Hitler's Foreign Legion will turn against him and add to his misfortunes.

TWO CASES TREATED

'Anybody Can Drive a Tractor'

An editorial not too long ago implied that because Mrs. City could drive her husband's automobile she would be extremely valuable out on the farm, where she could operate the tractor, John Gould writes in The Christian Science Monitor. I make a point of believing everything I read in The Monitor, hoping that my devotion will be reciprocated, or it would disturb me to be doubted, but I felt this established relationship between automobile and tractor deserved closer study before being spread abroad as a consumated fact. I have just had an opportunity to do some research, and it seems advisable to report that it ain't no sich a thing.

The basic premise errs in assuming that a motor contrivance is essentially like any other motor contrivance. An automobile achieves its ultimate utility when someone gets in and goes somewhere. As a machine, it supersedes the buggy, bicycle, and fortunately the barouche. It is a vehicle.

Tractor is Not a Vehicle.

A tractor, however, is in no sense of the word a vehicle, and only the intellectually dim would ever consider getting on one for touring. My own feeling is that the farmer's greatest single need is someone to drive his tractor for him, and I am always glad to find a volunteer. After an hour or so of driving, I find the two seats concerned are no longer congenial and it is much more fun to find something that can be done afoot.

Off and on, we have various people around here who spell me. They know how to drive automobiles, and they climb to the seat with a confident air. They have taken driving tests, and they are duly licenced under the statutes made and provided. They push down on the clutch release, deftly arrange the gears, and away they go about the dooryard waving to everyone and enjoying themselves a great deal.

Implement Makes Difference.

The confidence, however, drips at the corners as soon as some implement is attached to the drawbar and the tractor is converted from a runabout to a power plant. The power plant, now, is responsive to clutch and throttle only in so far as the operator knows how to plow, harrow, cultivate, mow, spray potatoes, or back a four-wheel rack under the barn for a load of straw. Backing a rack under a barn is not in the motor vehicle registry tests, and there is no apparent manipulative connection between that and parking in the shopping district.

Having read that editorial, and tried to believe it, I was consequently hopeful about my hired man. My hired man, this summer, looks extremely well in shorts and halter, and her marks at William Cullen Bryant High School suggested more than the average. It seemed likely that a high school graduate would tackle a tractor with some glee.

Tractor's Speed is Three M.P.H.

"Of course I can drive it," she said, "I can run a motorcycle."

Beyond demonstrating that the editorial writer didn't think of everything, I regarded this remark as interesting but naive, particularly since our tractor is automatically governed, and in low (or beginner's) gear it develops only three miles an hour. That shaves a motorcycle down fairly thin.

"I will teach you to drive the tractor," I said.

So we hooked into the mowing machine and struck around a piece of timothy clover. I drove the tractor and my hired man, winsomely attired in a fetching sun suit of seersucker and dimity, perched willy-nilly on the mowing machine and tugged bravely at the gag lever. This seemed wholly extraneous to her, but my technique had a point: I figured driving the tractor was incidental to cutting hay, and the place to learn mowing is on the mower. As soon as she found out how a mowing machine works, I reasoned, she would be more likely to make the tractor perform accordingly. Besides, I didn't relish the thought of riding the mower myself in the wake of someone whose ability stems from running a motorcycle.

Becomes Proficient on Mower.

My instruction, of course, was successful. My hired man yelled a good deal and the neighbors came and looked over the stone wall, but after two or three times around she was hoisting away the cutter-bar like an old hand at it, and she took great interest in careful and periodic oiling of the pitman. Oiling the pitman is the principal thing to mowing, and I now felt she was ready to sit up front and learn to drive. Her surprise was great when she realized that, now, there wasn't much to learn about driving. At dinner, when she ate three pork chops and a lot of other stuff and had two pieces of pie, she spoke about it and implied that any nincompoop can drive a tractor, but she—wonderful to relate—could cut hay.

That's the idea I have had all the time, but I hesitated to mention it until I saw the field trials.

Hudson Bay Railroad Feeds Arctic Bases

(New York Times)

The announcement that the United States has five air bases in sub-Arctic Canada merely confirms the rumors of the last two years of the extent of our flying over these northern and desolate routes as a quick method of getting airplanes to England. But it is especially interesting to those who have visited this part of Canada—and not many people used to go there—to read that one of the bases is at Fort Churchill on the west side of Hudson Bay.

An air base has finally justified the building of the railroad from The Pas to Churchill, a road built with incredible difficulty over the swamps and rivers of that lonely land. It was built to provide an outlet for grain from Western Canada to Churchill, where it was loaded on ships that took it in the short ice-free months through Hudson Strait to England. Henry Hudson first made the passage of the strait, and he was set adrift after mutiny by his men on the east side of the bay that also bears his name.

Over the wavering tracks of the Hudson Bay railroad only a few grain trips travelled during the year, and in the winter a train ran only once a week, two or three days being required for the trip each way. The wind whistled through cracks in the wooden cars, and at temperatures of 40 or 50 below zero the trip was an adventure. The train stopped at night and the crew went to sleep in the bunk car, leaving one man on watch in the locomotive.

The speed was nothing to brag about, for even in winter, when the muskeg was frozen, the roadbed was apt to dip suddenly. For a long time out of The Pas the train ran through tamarack, gaunt trees that grew ever more tortured and scarce as one went north, and then finally petered out altogether beyond the timberline in the flat, dead country known as "the land of little sticks," for the trees that started there never got more than a foot or two high. And finally it came to Churchill, where there were no trees at all, and where in winter there was nothing but an expanse of snow and the ice that stretched over Hudson Bay.

And it is there that the United States has built an air base, in one of the emptiest places on earth. But the little railroad built on faith and in defiance of nature by a tough little Scotch engineer, is now hauling high octane gasoline and supplies. The toot of the locomotive's whistle must have a new note of pride and authority with which to frighten the ptarmigan and the occasional moose. More power to it.

Toll of Farm Tractors

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

According to a recent report issued by the Kansas State Board of Health, and commented upon by Canadian newspapers, the greatest single cause of fatal farm accidents in 1943 was farm machinery, and the machine taking the greatest toll of lives was the tractor.

Tractors were the means by which 27 Kansas farmers met their death last year. Twelve farmers died when their tractors overturned. One of these men was not accustomed to driving. Two farmers were fatally crushed when trying to drive tractors up a steep slope. One man's tractor overturned when being driven across a ditch; another, when being driven out of a ditch. When driven too near the edge of a ditch, an embankment or a creek bank, seven more tractors overturned, and each time the driver was killed.

Ten farmers died after falling from their tractors. Five died as the result of the fall itself. Five were run over by other machinery as a result of their fall. One of these farmers was run over by a disc, two were fatally injured by a one-way plough, and two by a mowing machine.

One man's foot slipped from the drawbar and he fell into the power-take-off. Another's clothing caught in the whirling gears and he was drawn into the machinery. In all, three farmers died when caught in the power-take-off of their tractors despite the fact that power-take-off shields are available.

Another farmer died when caught between tractor and trailer after the clutch facing broke and the clutch would not release. Still another was run over when cranking his tractor while it was in gear.

Agricultural engineers say that most, if not all, of these accidents were preventable. The best prevention, they say, is constant vigilance—and the determination not to take a chance.

Wolves Become Sheep

An incident during the early days of the war, while we in the embassy were still interned in Tokyo, illustrates that the Japanese people are somewhat like sheep, easily led under the impact of new circumstances, says Joseph C. Grew in The National Geographic Magazine.

The Japanese military police occasionally arranged demonstrations in front of our embassy. On the day of the fall of Singapore, while Tokyo was celebrating with processions and brass bands, the police gathered several hundred Japanese from the streets, the shops and the homes, and brought them to the square in front of our office to demonstrate.

They pressed close to the bars of the embassy fence behind which we were caged, waving Japanese flags and howling like a pack of angry wolves. "Down with the United States!" they shouted. It was a really terrifying sight.

At the height of the demonstration, a member of my staff, who was standing on a balcony overlooking the mob, pulled out his pocket handkerchief and cheerfully waved it at the demonstrators. The Japanese were astonished at this unexpected gesture. Their jaws fell open and for a moment they ceased their howling. But the member of my staff kept right on, blithely waving his handkerchief.

And then, wonder of wonders, those Japanese laughed and pulled out their handkerchiefs and waved back in most friendly spirit!

The police, of course, were furious; they dashed around trying to stop the unexpected form their carefully regimented demonstration had taken. But nothing could be done, and that whole pack of erstwhile snarling wolves went off up the street, still heartily laughing.

WEDDINGS

WATTS—SPENCER

A very quiet wedding took place in United Church, Cannifton, on Sept. 2, 1944, when Sybil Noraine Spencer, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Spencer of Foxboro, Ont., became the bride of Roy Ernest Watts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Watts, Lonsdale. Rev. Trumpour officiated.

For the ceremony, the bride chose a street length blue sheer frock, with shoulder length veil to match with corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Edith Hutchison, sister of the bridegroom acted as bridesmaid. She chose a blue sheer with accessories to match. The happy couple will visit Niagara Falls and other parts and on their return will reside in Corbyville, Ont.

COX—HILLIER

Trenton.—Baskets of pastel gladioli formed the background for a pretty wedding in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Saturday, Sept. 2nd at three p.m., when Winnifred Mary Alice, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hillier, West Street, was united in marriage to Corporal Edward Frederick Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Cox, Kane, Alberta, Rev. R. C. MacLean, B.A., minister of St. Andrew's officiating.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was charming in her wedding gown of ivory sheer over satin, the square neckline, long pointed sleeves and shirred bodice trimmed with seed pearls which were more than a hundreds years old. A Queen Anne headdress in matching satin, pearl trimmed, held her full length veil and she carried a shower bouquet of red roses.

Wren Frances Cox, sister of the groom, of Halifax, acted as maid of honor, while the bridesmaids were the bride's four cousins, the Misses Eileen Sartell and Marjorie Reed of Toronto, Dorothy Hillier of Cobourg, and Hazel Hillier of Belleville. They were gowned in taffeta in shades of pink, rose, mauve and yellow, made along similar lines to that of the bride, and wore tiny shirred ribbon hats. They carried identical bouquets of pastel asters. Tiny Rose Marie Hillier, sister of the bride, and Mary Lou Martell, a cousin, of Batawa, acted as flower girls and were dressed alike in pale blue sheer with headdress of flowers and carried nosegays of sweetpeas .Corporal Norman Sawine of the R.C.A.F., was best man and the ushers were Corporals Jerry Robertson, Robert Riddell, Clyde Cunninham and Murray Tilley.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. C. V. Wilkins, organist of St. Andrew's, and during the signing of the Register Miss Agnes Jones and Corporal Bernice Conrad sang "O Promise Me".

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents with upwards of a hundred guests present. The bride's mother received wearing mauve sheer with black accessories and corsage of roses. She was assisted by the bride's two grandmothers, Mrs. E. Patrick, of Toronto, and Mrs. G. Hillier of Trenton.

Later the bridal couple left for Toronto, Niagara and United States points and upon their return will reside in Trenton, where the groom is serving with the R.C.A.F.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Ella Patrick of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. J. Sartelle and family of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Reed and family of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hillier and family of Cobourg, and Mr. and Mrs. John Hillier and family of Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Elliott Honored by Friends

On Saturday evening, Sept. 2, a very pleasant event took place when between fifty and sixty friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Elliott of West Huntingdon, to honor them on the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

Rev. Kenneth Stewart acted as chairman for a very interesting program of solos, readings and duets.

Mrs. Thomas Elliott read an appropriate address and Mrs. George Sine made the presentation of a lovely thirty-four piece set of silverware in a walnut case.

Although completely taken by surprise the bride and groom of twenty-five years both very fittingly replied after which all joined in singing "For they are Jolly Good Fellows".

Everyone enjoyed a delicious lunch consisting of sandwiches, cake, ice cream and a lovely three-tiered wedding cake presented by Mr. and Mrs. George Sine and Mr. and Mrs. Amos Carson. About midnight all departed to their homes wishing Mr. and Mrs. Elliott many more years of happy wedded life.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

An Only Daughter's Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. Our only daughter is to be married soon, at an afternoon church wedding. Although we are in moderate circumstances, we want to have everything as lovely as possible. Her white satin gown is to be simple, and it was not expensive, and we are keeping all other expenses down as minimum as possible. But one thing I would particularly like to have my daughter have is a complete set of candid camera shots, as many as possible of the church wedding and of the reception. Do you think this is a foolish expense, since our budget is so moderate? Our thought is that this type of wedding can happen only once in a girl's life, no matter what the future may bring.

2. Besides the maid of honor, there are to be two bridesmaids, both brunettes. What would you think of having one wear powder blue, and the other dusty rose?

3. My husband is a lieutenant commander. Should the first line of the announcements read "Lt. Comm. and Mrs.—" or "Lt. Comm. John Smith Brown and Mrs. Brown"?

4. In case it is not possible for my husband to be here to give the bride in marriage, would it be proper for her oldest brother to do this, or should it be an uncle?

M. G.

1. If I were you I would cut the other wedding expenses to the very bone, and by all means plan to have the candid camera pictures taken of the wedding and reception. These memory pictures are a wonderful joy, and later assembled in an album are a precious possession. Please have them.

2. It is better taste to have the two bridesmaids dressed exactly alike...and for brunettes I suggest the dusty pink, very wedding-y, very becoming.

3. The first line of the announcements should read (and with no abbreviations, except "Mrs."):

Lieutenant Commander and Mrs. John Smith Brown.

4. Have the bride's oldest brother give her in marriage if your husband cannot be at home for her wedding.

To Acknowledge an Introduction

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

When a person introduces himself or herself to me..perhaps recalling a former meeting, or reminding me that I know a relative of theirs...I always feel awkward as to how to answer. What's the proper thing to say?

Wondering

An excellent basic recipe for what-to-do is: smile graciously and welcomingly, offer your hand, and make a quick, friendly return comment on what the self-introducer says. For example, if a friend of your mother's comes up to you and says, "Mrs. Brown, I'm Jean Webster. Mother is a member of your Red Cross committee, and she's said such charming things about you that I've been eager to meet you too." The natural thing for you to do would be to greet her graciously, shake hands with her, and say something like this, "How very nice of you to speak to me... and I'm happy to know you. Yes, your mother is a fine worker on our committee, and I've enjoyed our friendship so very much. Please give her my greetings." Or to the person who recalls a former meeting...."Yes, indeed I do remember meeting you at Grace Carter's tea last year. What a delightful party it was, wasn't it?" (The last comment is a sufficiently "safe" one to cover any possible memory-lapse, and to start a conversation of mutual interest.)

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

They're Pretty Young to Marry, But It Seems The Only Sensible Solution

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 19 years old and have been in the army for nine months. When I was home on my last furlough I found that my girl friend, whom I took out frequently, had run away from home. She is now 16. I have told her I loved her and I really do.

Here's my problem. I told her to go back home, but she doesn't want to. Her mother is dead and her father works occasionally and is drunk most of the time. We've decided to write for your decision in this matter, and she's willing to do what you say. She has no friends where she is now.

Should she go home or stay where she is? She says she loves me. Also, do you think there should be any objection to our ages if we want to marry?

Private A. B.

That's a grave responsibility you two youngsters have put to me—whether at 16 and 19 you two should marry. Well, I can't find it in my heart to tell this girl to go back to a father who "works occasionally and is drunk most of the time," as you tell me in your letter.

I wish you had told me with whom this girl is staying. Is it a private home and have the people any personal interest in her? If she is utterly alone in the world, except for the drunken father, I think it would be well if you did marry. After all, our grandmothers married at 16 and were model wives and mothers. And here's the best of luck to you.

She Believed False Accusations Against John Who's Now Engaged to Another Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Six years ago I met and fell in love with John. I was 16 and now I'm 22 and still in love with him. He was 20 at the time I first met him, good looking and everybody liked him. He was in love with me and I was the envy of all the other girls.

At the same time I was going with John there was another girl whom he was seeing occasionally, but she was not the sort of girl that "nice" boys would associate with. This girl had a child and claimed it was John's. This broke us up, and we didn't see each other for several years, but now I learn that the child was not his and he's engaged to another girl.

I still love John very much and would like him to know that I'm sorry for believing such a lie about him. Do you think he would forgive me? Is there anything I can do in a situation of this kind?

S. H.

If you haven't seen John for several years, it strikes me as late in the day to make up with him and perhaps break his engagement to a girl he's expecting to marry. But if you want him to know that you no longer believe the false accusations against him, you could write him a friendly letter to that effect and wish him happiness in his proposed marriage.

You must realize that an attempted reconciliation with things as they are and hoping to go back where you left off, before you broke with him, would be pretty difficult after all these years.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 25 years, have been married for five years. I have a little boy of three, and live with my husband's family while he is away. He is a lieutenant in the army and is now a prisoner-of-war in Germany.

I don't get along very well with my in-laws, and the other day we had a quarrel because they're always trying to interfere in my business and trying to tell me how to rear my child. It has now come to a point where they slap me.

Do you think I should tell my husband and my own parents about the way I'm being treated, as I've never told it to anyone? Don't you think I should go home and live with my own parents until my husband returns? I need your advice desperately.

"Peggy"

Thank goodness, you've got parents to whom you can go, and I suggest returning to them as soon as possible. The effect on a child of three, of seeing his mother cuffed and slapped, is destructive of his morale.

Please don't write to your husband, who is a prisoner-of-war in Germany about these things. Back of the barbed wire he has enough to make him unhappy, without thinking of such conditions at home. And now that jobs are so easy, perhaps you can get a good one while your mother could take care of your little son.

Former Girl Friend Qualifies As Mischief Maker

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was engaged to a girl for three years. She chucked me for someone who apparently was better able to give her luxuries than I could. Then I married a nice home-loving girl and we've been very happy. My former girl friend who is still unmarried has started writing to me, and she manages to put various insinuations about my wife in her letters. These are not accusations that would involve her in legal trouble, but stuff like "absence from you seems to make her heart grow fonder of other fellows."

My wife is the domestic type and is devoted to our baby. My own family speaks of her devotion to me and our little son. This girl's letters are especially irritating. They've gone long past the bounds of etiquette. Short of employing a lawyer, what can I do to stop them?

G. I. Joe (And plenty mad).

Have you ever thought of returning this young lady's letters unopened? That seems to be a much better way of than entering into a controversy with her on the subject of your wife. The whole mischief-making scheme impresses me as an attempt to break up your home.

A GOOD CHOICE for the girl who likes a fur coat for evening as well as daytime wear is a chinchilla-dyed South American rabbit that is a splendid imitation of the costly fur. Fashioned with let-out skins and made with broad shoulders and turn-back cuffs, it is a handsome and not expensive coat. But it doesn't wear too well!

NOT DOWNED by restrictions and lack of leather, bag designers are doing better than ever. Faille is used for a nice big bag, one side shaped as an envelope, the other side with a pouch pocket attached to the outside for change or cigarettes. Handle of simulated tortoise shell beads, a rigid handle that may be dropped for underarm carrying.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Dyeing and Bleaching The Hair

When it comes to matters pertaining to beauty women are smarter than they used to be. Lots smarter. Heaps smarter. And they never were as dumb as some men told them they were. In the old days, we mean. Nowadays we don't take any back talk from the growly sex, especially if it concerns modern methods for making ourselves pleasing to the eye.

For one thing; you seldom see badly-dyed hair any more. A woman no longer rushes madly to the drug store, grabs a bottle of any old dye, pours troubles on her head. She knows better. She realizes that dyeing and bleaching is a fine art.

There are just as many dyed and bleached heads as there ever were, but they do not proclaim themselves as counterfeit color. Large establishments, where one buys pulchritude in its various forms, employ experts of long experience whose special work it is to minister color of the tresses that nature selected for her. He or she will tell you of the time when henna was a madness. Every other woman was experimenting; heads were as varied in hue as the flowers in an old fashioned garden—red, brickish, orange, sometimes purple. It was a fine kettle of beauty fish.

If grey hair makes a woman unhappy, there is no reason why she should bear with it. But the frosted mop must be treated by an expert. The job will be done to a turn, nobody but the family will suspect that the color is synthetic. The upkeep is considerable, however, and unless there is always a nice balance in the beauty budget, the project should not be started. The first treatment is expensive, and that's only a small part of the outlay. As the grey hair pushes out from the scalp to the tune of one inch every two months, there must be frequent touch-ups. One becomes a slave to one's head. And, if one decides to go grey again, there is that trying interval of transition when one is neither dyed nor natural.

Blondes are more given to bleaching than brunettes are to dyeing. Nature does not give a guarantee that Goldie Locks will stay golden; the halo tarnishes with the years. At thirty the blonde may be a drab-head, even carry tresses that are light brown. Sad, but true.

Bleaching is accomplished by application of so-called white henna which is a joke, as no henna is white. The pack is made by combining magnesium carbonate and peroxide in proper portions, permitting it to remain on the hair a certain time and no longer. No, we are not going to give you the proportions or tell you how to go ahead with the treatment. The pack cannot be self administered. That couldn't be done even if a woman had eyes in the back of her head.

MAYBE we are going to see an era of "more hat," but the calot is likely to stay on because of its neat look. Black stitched velvet makes a nice little calot trimmed with wired loops of black satin ribbon and a veil bordered with tiny satin dots.

NO MATTER whether one has a golden tan or a lily-white complexion, lustrous black satin points up the skin. This fabric is used for a smart dress with deep V neckline, extended shoulders, tied self belt and a dramatic peg-top skirt. Summer-into-autumn frock.

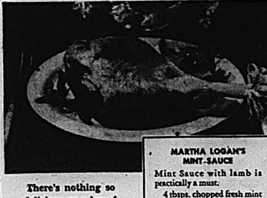
NOW FOR LAMB



MARTHA LOGAN'S
MINT-SAUCE

Mint Sauce with lamb is practically a must:

4 tbsps. chopped fresh mint
2 tbsps. sugar
1 cup vinegar

Place the ingredients together in sauce boat or bowl two or three hours before serving. Allow to steep. If dried mint is used, allow to stand in hot water to cover before adding vinegar and sugar.

There's nothing so delicious as a leg of lamb, and now's the time to serve it!

Now that lamb's in season we can enjoy this tender, juicy roast often and with a clear conscience.

Remember that the delicate flavour of lamb is best preserved by slow roasting in a 325 degree oven. Do not cover. Allow 35 minutes per pound for the small roasts (under 5 lbs.) and 30 minutes per pound for larger ones.

Serve with fresh green peas, parsley new potatoes and, of course, mint sauce, and you'll have a dinner fit for a king!

And for a second appearance what can be more delectable than cold roast lamb with a tossed green salad and cold mint sauce. Serve a hot soup to begin the meal.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By The Canadian Press

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Sept. 5 (CP)—Canadian night-fighter squadrons, providing air support to the Allied operations in France, up to Aug. 5 had shot down at least 56 1-2 German planes since D-day.

These squadrons, flying intruder patrols deep into the heart of France, and defensive patrols covering land and sea operations, accounted for this total, as well as creating havoc amongst Nazi road transports, supply columns, barges and railways.

The Nighthawk Squadron, until recently led by Wing Cmdr. J. W. Reid of Sydney, N.S., is the leading Canadian night-fighter unit, with 20 German planes destroyed to its credit early in August.

Flying Mosquitos, the Nighthawks have shot down almost their entire bag over Normandy on dawn-to-dusk patrols—two of their total were destroyed on intruder operations over German airfields in France.

The new commander of the Nighthawk Squadron is Wing Cmdr. Massey Beveridge, D. F. C., Montreal. The Cougar Squadron has 17 enemy planes destroyed and the third scoring Canadian squadron is the famed City of Edmonton unit.

The versatility of Canadian night fighters is borne out by the record of the R.C.A.F. Lynx Squadron. Primarily a night-fighter unit, it has taken to day patrols since D-Day, picking for targets, road transports, barges and railways, and when they're available, German aircraft. Their invasion score stands at three planes destroyed but their true impact in the Second Battle of France is told in their day-light operations. In one day, for instance, aircraft from the Lynx Squadron destroyed eight enemy trains, damaged 16 trains, sunk three barges and blew up a transport on the road.

One of the most popular of recent promotions and appointments in Canadian Spitfire squadrons serving in Normandy was the rise of 26-year-old Dean H. Dover of Toronto, (24 Cardella Ave.) to the rank of squadron leader and his being named to command a squadron in the wing led by Wing Cmdr. Dal Russel, D.F.C., and Bar, Westmount, Que. Dover is one of the veteran Spitfire pilots on current operations, being midway through his second tour.

After destroying 14 German aircraft within a week, Sqdn. Ldr. Charlie Trainer's Spitfire Squadron trained its guns on Nazi transport during a morning patrol and shot up 17 vehicles plus four infantrymen pedalling bicycles.

In doing so, the Charlottetown Squadron leader's outfit pushed to well over 600 the total of German transport disabled variously by fliers of Wing Cmdr. Dal Russel's Canadian wing since D-Day.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. Capital Closeups

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Sept. 5 (CP)—Canada's flag—the red ensign with the Dominion's coat of arms—has become known among the nations but the maple leaf design probably will be the banner under which trade will march to the corners of the world.

Officials say there is general agreement that the maple leaf means Canada when it appears on a truck, a tin of salmon or any other product in distant places. One suggestion is that all export goods leaving Canada should bear the maple leaf in addition to the trade mark and label of the manufacturer.

Goods sent out under the mutual-aid program bear markings showing they are from Canada and the same may be done with supplies provided for the United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration.

The maple leaf on a plow provided under mutual aid for U. N. R. R. A. will, if the plow is a good one, remind even an operator who cannot read that he should buy equipment bearing the same emblem when he can begin purchasing his own supplies after the war.

Unless there is some simple universal emblem for Canada and the goods she supplies officials think that any advertising which might be obtained from the contribution to world reconstruction will be of little value.

Gossip: Members of parliament back in their homes after seven months in session at Ottawa are making no promises of staying there for the remaining months of this year. The official opinion is that the House resumes in January, but the unofficial opinion of several members is that they will be on Parliament Hill before then.

A common argument is that the war probably will end suddenly and that a special session will be necessary. Opposition members say that Prime Minister Mackenzie King may call parliament together and then dissolve it for a general election as soon as the victory bugles sound.

A new suggestion is that parliament will be assembled to deal with a government motion to introduce the proportional representation system of voting in federal elections, to be in operation before the next general vote, expected in the spring at the latest.

Safety: The watchful agriculture department says that smokers should throw away their cigarette and wash their hands before working at their tomato plants. Plant pathologists have found that the use of tobacco by gardeners may be responsible for infecting the plants with Mosaic. The danger of spreading this disease is greatest when smokers use natural leaf tobacco or roll their own.

CASE DISMISSED

Sydney, Australia (CP)— When an elderly woman complained in court that her landlady had threatened to throw her over the balcony, the magistrate said: "Your landlady is a chronic invalid and could not throw anyone over a balcony, and if she had made such a threat you are so deaf you would not have heard her. Case dismissed."

Modern Tom Thumb Like Large Doll

Prince Rupert Midget is 29 Incses Tall and Weighs Just Over 11 Pounds

By KATHLEEN REX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Vancouver (CP)—A grey-eyed eight-year-old boy from Prince Rupert, B.C., may become known as the smallest midget in the world.

Dickie Sorensen, who came to Vancouver on a visit and reaped more newspaper publicity than any Hollywood pin-up girl, is unperturbed by his popularity. He isn't the least bit shy of strangers and accepts the fact that he may be the tiniest person on earth.

Young Dick will meet you with a shrewd grin on his Puckish face, then scrambling up to sit beside you he'll talk about his 11-year-old sister and baby brother back home. Perhaps he'll even show you the pictures he likes to draw and color.

I gave him an ordinary pencil—he found it a little clumsy to handle as it was exactly the length of his forearm.

Like other eight-year-old boys, this blond mite of a lad is fond of dogs and horses but dislikes girls—especially those around his own age who insist on calling him "Baby" and putting him in their doll buggies. You see Dick only weighs 11 1-2 pounds and is exactly 29 inches tall—the same size as those round-eyed dolls that grace department store toylands at Christmas time.

Wears Baby Shoes

The son of Norwegian parents of normal stature, Dick's hands are smaller than those of his five-months-old brother who weighs 21 pounds. Even his size-two baby shoes are too big for him. Weighing only two and a half pounds at birth, Dick has neither grown nor gained weight in the last three years.

Chief worry of Mrs. Sorensen, Dick's mother, is the youngster's education. "The authorities won't let him go to the Prince Rupert public school because of his size," she said. "And we can't afford to get him a private tutor."

However tiny Dick isn't fretting about school. Although he likes drawing, reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic never have appealed to him.

He won't listen when his sister reads him stories, Mrs. Sorensen said. Instead he begins telling her stories. Dick has a vivid imagination and loves to make up all kinds of small-boy adventure yarns.

This young Tom Thumb doesn't mind living in a huge world peopled with giants. He knows his limitations and isn't afraid of anything or anyone. And as soon as he gets back to Prince Rupert his mother and father have promised to buy him a pony because Dick wants to learn how to ride.

To Keep Paris Hub of Fashion

By MARGARET BUTLER

London, Sept. 5 (CP)—Parisian fashion houses have continued creating their new styles undeterred by the ever-increasing shortage and inferiority of materials. A Frenchman who recently left France is the authority for the statement.

In the post-war period Paris will again be synonymous with fashions he said, adding that the Germans made tremendous efforts to drive the centre of fashion from Paris toward Berlin but this met strong resistance on the part of Parisian designers and manufacturers who had done their best to maintain pre-war standards.

Especially in Paris has there been a very great effort to put on a bold face and assert the importance of Paris as the centre of fashion.

The women of Paris have made a point of always looking well dressed. As a gesture of defiance they kept up the elegance and chic for which they have been world famous for so long, even though they have had to use paper and rayon instead of the rich materials of pre-war days.

Rayon is their staple material. Paper is used for ornaments. Leather has almost disappeared. Shoes have wooden soles and paper uppers. Stocks are low but the standard of display remains high — most windows have borders of black paper to decrease their size, and in Trois Quartiers, where hundreds of rolls of cloth were formerly shown, only two or three are now displayed.

Some goods have become more plentiful recently in direct relationship to the Allied victories. French traders evidently hope the manufacturers will release hidden stocks as complete victory draws nearer, my informant said.

Tommy Spends Leave Searching for Wife

London, Aug. 5 (CP)—The most romantic scenario writer couldn't have improved on the real life story of Cpl. Walter Prestige and his wife, Dorrie.

The corporal was in France when he received word from his Brighton home that his wife, "fed up" after a dispute with her employers, was going away. Prestidge investigated and found she had already "disappeared," leaving their six-year-old son behind her.

The army gave Prestidge special leave to return to England to find her and for 14 days he tramped the streets of Brighton, London and Portsmouth in a vain search. Then, a few hours before his leave expired, he entered a London restaurant, raised his head to order a cup of tea from the waitress and found the girl standing before him was his "Dorrie."

WESTCLOXFORCED TO TEN INNINGS BEFORE WINNING

Belleville Girls Not Disgraced in Losing to Peterborough in Two Straight

SCORE IS 17-11

Belleville's entry into the Provincial Women's Softball Union ploydowns passed out of competition here on Saturday but it wasn't before the local lassies hadn't made it more than interesting for the winning Peterboro' Westclox.

Actually the Belleville gals had the game all but sewed up in the proverbial bag and forced the issue into ten innings before losing 17 -11. And while all of this heavy hitting was going on the locals had shelled Joyce Withers from the Westclox mound, while Millie Foster went the entire route for the homesters. However, it was Vi McLean's last inning Merriwell three-run-producing home run, with two out, that knotted the count and "Tommy" Bullock's Peterboro' relief hurling, that turned the tide of Victory into defeat for Belleville.

Forcing the play, the Belleville girls moved to the fore on three occasions, gathering in a trio of runs before the Westclox so much as scored. All even in the fourth the locals batted back to make it seven-all in the sixth and in the eighth shelled Joyce Withers from the Peterboro hilltop to score four runs on one hit. With two out in the top half of the ninth it looked like a Belleville victory, but Vi McLean, the visitors' centre fielder, blasted a home run with two aboard to tie the score. The Westclox then went on to score six in their half of the tenth and cinch the game.

Helen Garrow hit a triple to score two in the first as Helen Smith duplicated this feat in the sixth for Belleville's only two extra base hits. Anderson, McLean and Hawthorne hit home runs for the visitors.

Early in the game Belleville completed two fast double plays. Isobel "Tommy" Bullock, the Peterboro' relief pitcher, struck out eight in the last three frames, fetting six of the last seven to face her. Millie Foster went the entire ten innings for the home team, it being the first time Miss Foster had been called upon to pitch over seven innings since she joined the local ladies softball league.

The second honors and the Ackerman Cup went to another Belleville rink consisting of Ernie Vanner, skip, John Shaw, vice and Bert Backus lead with a score of plus 30. Still another win went to a Belleville rink when the local team of Harry Bryant, skip, Davie Davison, vice and Ab. Wonnacott, lead, took the three game high honors with a plus 28 score.

The only outside win went to the Toronto Howard Park team of James Ford, skip, Dean Ford vice, Charlie Hyde, lead, in the two game high series with a score of plus ten. Here even a Belleville man was pressed into service, Mr. Hyde being a member of the local club. The Belleville team of Elgin Ford, skip, J. B. Black, vice and Alf. Symons, lead, captured the one game high prize with a score of seven.

The annual Labor Day men's trebles terminates the larger tournaments scheduled by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club for 1944.

FOSTER WD. KIDS LOSE TO ST. MIKES

Baseball Bat Donated by J. L. Irwin Given to the winners

Jack Doyle's St. Mike's kids took the measure of Bob Blaind's Foster Ward lads in a junior baseball game played at the Alemite field over the weekend. To the winning St. Mike's team went a new baseball bat donated by Mr. J. L. Irwin of this city, who is interested in the sponsorship of baseball among the teen aged boys of the community. St. Mike's won by a 15 to 10 score in a free-hitting struggle.

There wasn't much to choose from in the first few innings as both teams scored five times in their respective halves of the initial frame. The Foster Ward nine got two to St. Mike's one in the second, but the Doyle-led nine out-scored the Ward lads five to three in the third, as the losers were blanked for the rest of the route when St. Mike's scored in all but the fifth.

E. Bush scored a run for Foster Ward, as did Doyle, while Hewson tallied twice followed in this accomplishment by Rance Bush. McCabe, Cross and Temple scored single runs for the losers also. Donovan and Fitzpatrick each scored three runs for St. Mikes' Jerry Moher and J. Hogan crossed home twice, while, Wardaugh, Cullin Kelleher and Boyle scored singletons. The Foster Ward kids left no less than seven runners stranded on the runways in the last five innings.

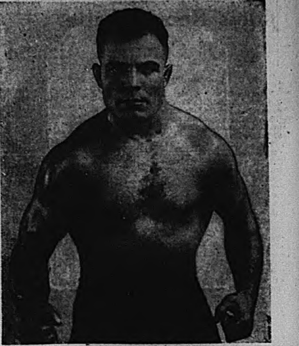
HEADS RUFFIAN RIOTERS



John "Fingers" Katan, the Palermo Panther, is only one of a group of rough-house ruffian grapplers to invade the Hume Arena here on Wednesday in what promises to be the highlight of all Promoter Frank Tunney's campaigning of wrestling in Belleville. "They might tear down the ring, but it will be interesting to see what will happen with this gang of ruffians all in the same building," remarked Tunney with a chuckle. He's tossing Katan in against "Irish Jerry" Monahan for the main affair with Bob Wagner taking on the undefeated Frank Sexton in the semi-final and Nanje Singh, the Mad Hindu, meeting Pierre DeGlane to start things off in a hilarious manner. There they are — all villains of the muscle-bending art — Monahan, Katan, Wagner and Singh. The question arises what chances have Sexton and the kindly DeGlane with that quartette of villains around? The advance sale is on at Cook's news stand now — phone 74.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

An old lady kept a parrot which was always swearing. She could put up with this till Saturday, but on Sunday, she kept a cover over the cage to prevent the parrot from swearing on Sunday. On Monday morning she would remove the cage covering. However, one Monday afternoon, she saw her minister coming toward the house, so she again placed the cover over the cage. As the reverend gentleman was about to step into the parlor, the parrot rebelliously remarked: "This has been a damn short week."

Confused Groom — I was told to, buy either a casserole or a camisole. I can't remember which.

Salesman—That's easy. Is the chicken dead or alive?

A Close One.

Belleville's entry into the Provincial Women's Softball Union passed out of the picture here Saturday when the locals faltered in the ninth and lost out in extra inning to the Peterborough Westclox. However, the Belleville lassies didn't move out of the picture before they had tossed a mighty scare into the ranks of the more experienced Westclox. Actually the whole story centred around the last three frames. Tied at 7-all Belleville went out and scored four runs in the bottom half of the eighth. Came the top half of the ninth it looked rather glum for the Westclox, especially when Millie Foster and company retired the first two Peterborough batters. With two hands and four runs down in the ninth the Westclox staged a mighty rally to tie the score. Aggie Anderson, the visitors' centre fielder, getting a three-run producing circuit smash to knot the count, as the locals were within one strike of taking that one. Of course the Petes weren't to be denied from then in and scored six runs in the tenth to win 17 to 11.

Incidentally in Isobel "Tommy" Bullock the Westclox boast of a strong versatile player. Miss Bullock started the game as a catcher of accepted parts and when Joyce Withers developed a nervous streak "Tommy" shed the receiver's paraphernalia and took over the Westclox pitching duties to strike out eight in the last three frames.

However, much credit must be given to Belleville's own Millie Foster for her fine pitching chore. Millie had never before this season pitched over seven innings, so by going the route against Peterborough it was just like pitching a game and one half. The locals fielded smartly and Helen Garrow picked up two hits, one a double.

The Belleville-Peterborough women's provincial playdown was arranged solely as an experiment and if nothing else the local girls should have learned something about base running and snappy throwing. Joyce Withers, the Westclox starting pitcher is but 15 years of age, which is another item to mark down in the local girls softball setup. "Get 'em young."

Remember When.

Bobby Pearce defeated Bill Miller of Philadelphia for the world's professional singles sculling championship at Toronto ten years ago today. The Australian-born sculler, now in the Canadian Navy, increased his lead with practically every dip of his oars to win going away.

Is He Worried?

Walt Gerow sent out an S.O.S. for a battery of carpenters early today. "If Promoter Tunney is bringing that gang of ruffians into the Hume arena Wednesday night we will have to reinforce the ring and maybe the entire building. Why Tunney has no respect for our premises whatsoever," bemoaned Walt as he ordered workmen to strengthen the Hume arena ring for the battle of villains. "Just imagine bringing in a quartette of men like Nanjo Singh, Bob Wagner, Jerry Monahan and John Katan the same night. They'll ruin our arena," lamented Mr. Gerow, who may have something on the ball regarding that statement. However, if there are enough paying customers the damage can easily be paid for.

Around the Town.

Secretary Eddie Schrieder announced the semi-final play-off dates for the Belleville Ladies' Softball League, which commences this evening with Universal meeting SWACO in a best-in-three series ....This round continues on Thursday and Friday, if a third game is necessary....The winner meets Reliance for the league title and the Frontenac trophy....In the men's softball series Point Anne and SACO "Marines" continue at the Fair Grounds tonight when a win for the Cementmen will give them the title....Incidentally the Ox Point boys would like to win a pennant this year for their mentor, Bubby Gaulin who is seriously ill in the hospital..It would be a nice gesture to cheer Bubby up, as his health is far from robust....The two junior ball teams went at it again Sunday with St. Mike's taking the long end of a 15 to 10 score over the Foster Ward nine....No doubt these popular Sunday ball games will continue through September at least. But what about next year—will the kids get any adult supervision?....Belleville lawn bowlers came into their own to win all of the principal prizes at their trebles turney yesterday.

Clarence Clapp skipped his trio to win the top honors of the day, Dawson Boyd and "Mac" McLean being the lead and vice....Ernie Vanner's team took second honors and Harry Bryant's third....Dean Ford, who shortstopped for Belleville a decade ago and was on the winning Corbin Gold Cup team from Toronto on Civic Holiday returned to town with the Howard Park team to take the two games high honors....However, this team had to press our own Charlie Hyde into service, to place local players on all winning trios....The men's trebles wound up a successful invitation schedule for the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club.

Baseball Takes Back Seat To Horse Racing

New York, Sept. 5-(AP)-Baseball took a back seat to the sport of Kings yesterday in the matter of pulling fans through the Labor Day turnstiles.

While eight Major league double-headers were attracting 144,932 paying customers into the grandstands and bleachers, 10 running tracks proved magnets for 271,878 fans. And those rabid racegoers laid it on the betting line to the tune of $11,556,394--an average of $42 per customer.

Canada's Navy ... guardian of a vital chain

JUST as the steady flow of Canadian and American-made war matériel to Britain was indispensable to the successful invasion of the continent, so final Victory depends on the maintenance of this stream of supplies from America to Europe, from factory to firing line.

The protection of these convoys is the specialized job of Canada's Navy. History will record the magnificent manner in which it has been performed

Indeed, in protecting convoy after convoy, Canada has forged another essential link between these two great comrades-in-arms, John Bull and Uncle Sam. And when tomorrow brings us Victory and Peace, surely Canada, of all nations, is best situated to further the continuation of goodwill between the British Commonwealth and the United States which is so necessary for a lasting World Peace.

In our hearts is the same concept of freedom!

CANADIANS, Americans and Englishmen share the same concept of freedom... share, too, one of the [illegible] defenders of freedom. He was [illegible], a famous English statesman, Secretary of State to King James I.

In 1622 Calvert founded a colony in Newfoundland and, later, a colony in Maryland. Thus, over 300 years ago Calvert forged a link which has strengthened throughout the years...joining together the British Commonwealth and the United States.

In the new settlements the principle of self-government was inaugurated and religious toleration was fully enforced. Thus, in the early 1600's, a Calvert established in the New World many of the freedoms we are fighting for today.

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Akoolap Oxpert belongs to the ancient and dishonorable order of Ydintcha. Charter members of that society can become high mucky-mucks in the Ushooda club.

A Ydintcha always pounces on a partner wanting to know why he didn't do something or other. A Ushooda goes further. He fiercely tells a partner what he should have done.

A Ydintcha or a Ushooda usually makes a misleading bid. Partner misunderstands it and responds with something that turns out wrong. That's when the partner gets roasted on both sides.

An opening bid of two in a suit shows nine or more tricks and is forcing to game. Even if partner has nothing, he must help keep the bidding alive until a game is reached.

An opening bid of two no-trump shows seven or eight high cards. It does not force partner to bid. If partner has no trick, he may pass. Because eight tricks will not make a game.

However, if partner has one high card, the pair will have nine no-trump tricks; enough for a game in no-trump. So, with one high card, partner should respond with a bid of some kind.

That tells you what to do in answer to an opening bid of two no-trump. Respond with a pass if you have no high card; respond with a bid of some kind if you have one high card or more.

Suppose partner opens with two no-trump and you have this hand:

♣ 9 6 5 4

You are not forced to bid unless partner opens with two in a suit. Your hand does not contain a high card (a queen or better).

What is your response? Pass.

If partner takes nine tricks, he snaps at you: "Ydintcha bid," or "Ushooda said three." Smile sweetly and mumble: "You must have had a better bid than two-no-trump." And then duck.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Christmas Holiday"

Any question which may have been entertained regarding the ability of the lovely songstress to successfully invade the sphere of pure drama is now dispelled. Her new Universal picture, "Christmas Holiday" now at the McCarthy theatre, proves beyond doubt that Miss Durbin can effortlessly hold her own in any company of dramatic artists. Her performance in her first sheerly dramatic role is flawless.

The picture, adapted from W. Somerset Maugham's novel of the same title tells a story within a story and presents Deanna in a dual characterization, a worldly cafe entertainer, and a charming bride whose world collapses about her when her husband of six months commits murder.

The film introduces Deanna singing a torch song in a tawdry New Orleans cafe, and reveals her earlier years in flash-backs as she relates the story of her life to a young army lieutenant.

Songs in the picture are held to a minimum. There are only two, Irving Berlin's "Always"—which the star sings twice—and an original by Frank Loesser "Spring Will be a Little Late This Year." However, these numbers are made outstanding by the fact that Deanna sings them in a torch style never before employed by her.

Gene Kelly, who co-stars with Miss Durbin, gives one of his finest performances as her husband. Kelly is completely charming and yet thoroughly convincing as a killer moved more by weakness than malice.

Richard Whorf as a newspaper reporter, Dean Harens as the young lieutenant, Gladys George as the cafe proprietress and Gale Sondergaard as Kelly's mother, all come forward with outstanding performances in exacting roles. The latest Universal World News, a merry melody cartoon, and Sweet Jam featuring Jan Garber and his orchestra round out an excellent program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Harvest Melody"
(First Belleville Showing)

Maybe you've never thought that lunchtime follies in the fields would make farm work more attractive to city people but PRC studios have not only thought of it—they've used the idea for a lively, rollicking musical film, "Harvest Melody" in which Rosemary Lane and Johnny Downs win new honors. The film is now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

The story concerns a Hollywood star, played by the lovely Lane, whose contract is not renewed. When her press agent advises her to entertain the workers on our food front, she sees his idea as a space-grabbing stunt.

Sam Newfield wielded the megaphone for PRC, Walter Colmes produced, musical direction is by Jay Cherniss and music and lyrics are by Benny Davis and Harry Akst. Among the hit tunes are "Let's Drive Out to a Drive-in", "Tenderly", "Put it in Reverse" and "Harvest Melody".

"Oklahoma Kid"

The Canadian Universal News completes the big bill.

AT THE BELLE

"Dr. Wassell" in color

The long-awaited Paramount picture, "The Story of Dr. Wassell", produced by Cecil B. Demille, opened Saturday at the Belle Theatre to hurrahs from an enthusiastic audience which acclaimed it as an outstanding screen success without reservations.

In technicolor, "The Story of Dr. Wassell" describes the heroic efforts of an Arkansas doctor who successfully shepherds nine wounded sailors from the jungles of Java to safety at an Australian hospital. This feat, taken from the true life, was extolled by President Roosevelt on one of his radio addresses. Starred in the role of Commander Corydon M. Wassell is Gary Cooper and his tender portrayal of the courageous and skillful doctor is a performance likely to be an unforgettable one in the minds of movie-goers.

In the opening scenes, Dr. Wassell's life as a country practitioner in Arkansas is first described. A picture of a pretty nurse on a poster, however, prompts him to offer his services a sa medical missionary in China. There he receives his Navy orders telling him to report to Java, but not before he discovered the pretty nurse in the person of Laraine Day. Upon his arrival, Dr. Wassell administers to the wounded soldiers of the U.S.S. Marblehead.

Faced with almost unsurmountable obstacles, the now Commander Wassell finds that the Japs are threatening the territory where the Dutch hospital is located. Since it is imperative that the patients evacuate before arrival of the enemy, all the "walking wounded" are placed aboard ship but ten cannot be removed. It is here that Commander Wassell displays his fortitude for he remains with these sailors through thick and thin.

One of the wounded, Hoppy, is cared for by Tremartini, a native girl whose devotion to her charge brings some of the more touching moments in this splendid film. With the aid of Bettina, the Dutch nurse so excellently portrayed by Signe Hasso and the help of Lieutenant Dirk Van Daal (Carl Esmond), Commander Wassell finally shepherds his little band to Australia on the last boat to Java. Through the tortuous route to the pier, Jap gunfire and bombs and machine guns rake the helpless craft. Success finally crowns Commander Wassell's efforts for the film closes with the pinning of the Navy Cross upon the brave doctor's chest.

The action through the entire film is fraught with emotion, romance and thrills. The three love affairs are particularly bright spots as Signe Hasso and Carl Esmond shine as one team, Dennis O'Keefe and Carol Thurston as another, and, of course, Laraine Day and Gary Cooper as the main romance.

Bring Back The Yesterdays

(Kingston Whig-Standard)

While going through a recent issue of The London Times, we noticed a small item reproduced from The Times of 1844, of the same date. We don't know the man who culls such items for The Times, but we do know something about his character. Either he's a decided masochist who likes to torture himself, or he's an infernal sadist who likes to torture all the readers of The Times. For his items told solely of a plenitude of food which must have tickled unendurably the salivary glands of his readers in rationed Britain. Just one glance at the article, and we began to wonder why luncheon seemed so far away.

On an August Wednesday one hundred years ago, the Bull Hotel and Tavern on Holborn-hill reminded Londoners that a fine haunch of venison was dressed for the coffee-room every Thursday. It would be on the table at 4 o'clock, for the charge of 2s. 6d. In case venison lacked appeal for some, there was turtle soup, "very superb" and always ready, a basin of which might be had for the same price, with the added attraction of a glass of "splendid fine punch." We would be willing to risk a small wager that the Bull did a flourishing trade in turtle soup—that "splendid fine punch" must have been a strong inducement.

Miraculous to relate, however, mine host of the Bull was strictly a piker compared to one Geo. Warriner, the guiding hand at the George and Vulture Tavern at Cornhill. The George and Vulture announced its intention to go continental and charge 2s. for a dinner of five dishes out of a choice of 200. Not only that, Geo. Warriner had engaged the late chef de cousine of Les Trois Freres Provenceaux to ensure the success of the attempt. Geo. didn't make any mention of splendid fine punch, but presumably an additional sixpence would have taken care of that part of the dinner.

Sometimes we wonder about this business of progress. Holborn-hill has gone, and so have the two-shilling meals served there, along with the splendid fine punch. Right now, we're much better off in Canada for browsing and sluicing than the folks in Britain but we would still enjoy the experience of sitting down to our choice of five dishes from two hundred for fifty cents. We could even look with pleasure and considerable appetite on the less Lucullan menu of the Bull, and toy with a basin of turtle—and the splendid fine punch—while keeping thoughtful watch on the inroads being made into the fine haunch of dressed venison.

Newsreels will be easier on the ears shortly. The sound recording level will become the same as that of entertainment films. Perhaps newsreel makers have learned that shouting doesn't make the thing being shouted about seem important—and if it's really important, it doesn't need theatrics . . . "Flesh and Fantasy," if you remember, was made up of four distinct episodes. There were five originally but one was dropped when the film proved to be overlong. It was the story of a blind girl and featured Gloria Jean, Alan Marshall and Tom Craven. It was so good that Universal will make a full-length feature out of it, adding Martha O'Driscoll to the cast . . . Film patrons are sick of those Sinatra swooners who squeal and whine. In San Francisco the other day, during the showing of Sinatra's "Step Lively," the audience scorched the kids verbally.

Hollywood has a property man named Irving Sindler who tries to get his name before the cameras in every picture he works on. He often gets it on store windows. Recently it appeared on a tombstone. In "The Wonder Man," Danny Kaye's next, all the canned goods in the kitchen scene bear the label, "Sindler & Son". . . . Raymond Massey, discharged from the Canadian army not so long ago, returns to films in "God is My Co-Pilot." It's his first in two years . . . Even telephone numbers, used in a crime scene, can become the basis of a lawsuit if they happen to match that of private citizens. So Billy Wilder, while directing the Fred MacMurray-Barbara Stanwyck starrer, "Double Indemnity," made use of his own number. But the word got around and now curious callers keep the phone busy.

Arthur Treacher, the screen's best-known butler, has been honorary president of Butlers, Inc. since 1938—that is, the butlers' union. Years ago he was a Broadway juvenile musical star but once he became a butler in films other roles ended. He's the victim of type casting and would give anything for another type of role . . . Bing Crosby made $311,111 for his film work last year . . . Kisses and emotional close-ups are banned from Japanese movies as immoral. Perhaps the Japs' warped mentality comes from repressing honest feelings, which change form and come out in cruelty, violence and lust . . . Mavis Murray, ex-Vancouver cub reporter who got a job as a messenger girl at Paramount, was "discovered" and chosen for a role in "I Love a Soldier," in which Paulette Goddard and Sunny Tufts star. Now Miss Murray has been signed to a contract.

British films are receiving much greater circulation in Canada this year, the quality having improved considerably on the whole. "San Demetrio—London" is a crackerjack of a thriller. It stars Robert Beatty of Hamilton and is but one of a number of features made in the Old Country that exceed most Hollywood efforts . . . Carrie Jacobs Bond, 82-year-old writer of "I Love You Truly" and "The End of a Perfect Day," was honored in Hollywood recently. Her songs have sold 7,000,000 copies . . . Groucho Marx was bitten by a dog the other day and when the police wanted to shoot it he stopped them by buying it. Now it's chained up in his back yard and he's afraid to go out there . . . Finnish Mission Leaves for Moscow To Negotiate Peace

London, Sept. 5-(CP)- A Finnish mission will depart for Moscow tomorrow, the Berlin radio said today, to negotiate peace terms under the armistice which ended hostilities on the Finnish-Russian front yesterday.

Premier Hantii Hackzell and foreign minister C.J.A. Enckell are expected to head the mission, which will consist of about 10 members, Berlin declared.

The broadcast made no reference to the disposition of German troops stationed in Finland. Dispatches from Stockholm last night quoted Finnish sources there as saying Nazi forces scattered throughout the southern part of the country were expected to begin withdrawing today.

This scource estimated there probably were three German divisions in southern Finland, despite from that area.

The situation in northern Finland remained obscure, although there were reports in Sweden that the Germans were withdrawing via northern Norway.

Under the terms of the armistice, Finland gave Germany until Sept. 15 to evacuate all her forces. Those remaining in Finland after that date will be disarmed and interned, the Helsinki government said.

By SYD THOMAS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Sept. 4 —(CP)— An interesting sidelight on the workings of the photo finish camera at the race tracks came up for discussion by the Vancouver Sun's turf expert.

Noting that in perhaps nine cases out of 10 the camera gives the decision to the outside horse, he pondered the question and came up with a logical conclusion.

It's usually the outside horse that is forcing the pace in a neck-and-neck finish, since it's the beast that has come from behind to overhaul the leading inside horse in the stretch drive. Consequently, the animal is putting just a little extra surge in its stride as it crosses the line, and though to the naked eye the horses appear even, the camera is speedy enough to catch the final jump that puts the winner across the finish line.

In cases where the inside horse gets the camera decision, it usually turns out that the insider for a change was travelling faster, perhaps because the challenger had shot his bolt and was starting to drop back.

That's the theory anyway, and it will provide a topic for argument some dull afternoon at the track after you've lost your shirt.

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER 11

The Congressman and his wife were just moving into the great red brick house on Massachusetts Avenue that sits squarely in the center of the Marvin Eustace's spacious grounds. One corner of that estate joins Pamela's property. Lacking a vote in the Government, the District of Columbia finds itself ruled by a group of lawmakers on the Hill, among them this tall, thin Representative from a western state who with his wife had rented the Eustace's house for two months and who now opened the door to me.

I told the Congressman that Mrs. Marvin Eustace would like a final inventory of the things in the house, and so with a pad and pencil in readiness I stalked around listing antiques and things — but really looking for some clue to Pamela's murder.

"My wife didn't want to take this house after that — uh — tragedy nearby," the Congressman said, trailing me thoughtfully. "She says this place gives her the creeps now. We can look out of a back window upstairs and see the very spot where that woman—died. It's rather gruesome, but you know what the housing situation is here now."

"I know," I said, and jotted down a Chinese vase.

"I wonder who did kill Mrs. Keith," the Congressman remarked quietly. "I wonder if it could have been that tall, dark young man.".

My heart jerked. "What — tall dark man?" I asked, for the only tall, dark young man I could think of these days was Peter Gibson.

"The one I saw at The Mayflower the other afternoon," the Congressman said when I asked what tall, dark young man he'd wondered about in connection with the Pamela Keith case.

There was a long pause. "I don't think he did," he said finally. "I just sort of wondered about it. Maybe I shouldn't have mentioned it at all. It was such a little thing, really...."

"Oh, please go on," I urged and I was holding my breath.

"Well, it was like this. My wife and I dropped in for a cocktail." He cleared his throat and looked unhappy. "I mean," he corrected quickly, "my wife had orange juice and I had a fruit punch. Non-alcoholic. We go to the lounge at The Mayflower because we're fond of the music there, and we like to dance a bit now and then."

I wanted to scream that I didn't give a rap whether he drank liquor or goat's milk and that I wasn't going to turn informer so he wouldn't be elected next term—and to please get on with his story. But I waited patiently, silently, my heart thumping. Maybe the Congressman did have something important on tap; maybe....

"Our table was next to this tall, dark man's," he went on, "and my wife is crazy about Nelson Eddy. Often sits through his shows twice."

The veteran orator evidently thought he was talking on the floor of the House, bumbling around and 'round....

"Was the man Nelson Eddy?" I prompted.

"Oh, no. Of course not. But my wife said that the tall, dark man would have been the image of Nelson Eddy if his hair had been fair. That's why I noticed him. He was with a fine looking woman, too and they seemed to be having a very jolly time together. Yes, a fine looking woman..." He paused, thinking back on that fine looking woman and I waited, certain he was going to use his hands in modeling the girl's charms the way Dad does. Also, I wondered if this was the same afternoon Dad had seen Luke Cramer at The Mayflower with a fine looking woman. For if Luke Cramer had fair hair he would indeed look like Nelson Eddy.

"Yes, yes," I said. "Go on."

"Well, Mrs. Keith came in then," the lawmaker proceeded. "I recognized her instantly. She was a very much photographed young woman, you know. The three of them sat together for a while—Mrs. Keith, the tall, dark man, and the good-looking woman. I could tell that something had gone wrong somewhere. The good-looking woman left presently and I overheard Mrs. Keith and the man quarreling. Not all of the words, mind you, for I wasn't really listening. But I knew they were quarreling.

"I did hear the man tell Mrs. Keith that Verdis or Eunice or Avis—some name like that—had dropped in, had seen him and had come over to his table and he couldn't very well have walked out on her without being unspeakably rude. Mrs. Keith was very unreasonable about the whole thing, I thought. The man was a long time placating her, but finally everything was smoothed out and, when my wife and I left, they were dancing. They made a very handsome couple, laughing and chatting as they whirled about the floor. But the other woman was a fine figure of a woman. A fine figure, indeed."

"Who was she?" I asked."

"I don't know," he said, and there was something in his voice which told me he wished the heck he did.

At that point the Congressman's wife came charging through the front door, piled to the eyes with packages. She was a female counterpart of Sergeant Roger Hornblower—an overbearing hulk of a woman. Before, I'd thought the Congressman was a good-sized man, but beside his wife he dwarfed perceptibly. In fact, he grew so small and insignificant that there seemed to be no one in the room but the woman and myself.

"Well?" she queried, and the tone packed a walloping question. In short .... What are you and my husband up to, you red-headed hussy?

I explained myself and, after an inventory tour of the third and second floors which drew a blank, I left.

Turning right on Lawn Avenue, I went up the walk that leads to the hotel grounds, sat down on a bench near the empty cavern of the swimming pool, and tried to think .... Had Luke Cramer killed Pamela because he was still in love with Gladys? Had the fine looking woman been Gladys? But certainly Luke wouldn't have arranged to meet Gladys at The Mayflower when he was expecting Pamela? Or had he been expecting Pamela? Was it Pamela's money alone that had led Luke away from Gladys? I thought not, for while Gladys isn't as rich as Pam I understood she was well fixed financially. So far as I could see, there was no reason for Luke switching horses in the middle of the stream so to speak except a mad, overwhelming desire to do so. It is perfectly true, too, that Gladys can mow down the men but she simply can't hold them—as witness Richard Keith divorcing Gladys so he could marry Pam. Nevertheless, I wasn't going to let this new line of thought slip by unprobed.

Soon I got up and walked restlessly around the hotel grounds. But walking didn't do much good. Once more I decided I wasn't enough of a spinster to be a really slick amateur sleuth....But I couldn't get that Gladys Newcomb and Luke Cramer business out of my head.

So, at five o'clock when tea was over at the Keith house, I cornered Reginald in the butler's pantry and asked him about Luke's telephone call from Philadelphia. Had it been Luke calling? Had he heard Luke's voice, or merely the operator saying that Philadelphia was calling Mrs. Keith. Reginald said he had heard both: first, the operator, then Mr. Cramer.

Mr. Cramer, Reginald said, had requested him not to disturb Mrs. Keith if she were still at dinner, that he'd call back later or tomorrow. But he, Reginald, had known that Mrs. Keith would want to speak with Mr. Cramer, no matter what she was doing—it was a fixed rule of the house—so he had gone into the dining-room to get her.

I decided this was as good a time as any to ask Reginald about that second telephone call. For somehow I believed that that second call had come from the murderer. It added up. Someone had telephoned Pamela just before ten o'clock; shortly afterwards Pam had stepped out through the solarium door—to her death! The person calling, he or she, had evidently asked Pam to step outside, giving some urgent reason....

"I had never heard the man's voice before, Miss Randolph," Reginald said. "Certainly not over the telephone. Yet there was something familiar about it. That familiarity worries me, like a tune running through your head and you can't remember what song it is or where you heard it."

Suddenly something in my brain clicked! Two of the telephones in the Keith house are on the same line, with extensions in the various rooms and the satin-tufted telephone booths. It would have been no trick at all for one of the guests, after dinner, to slip away for a few seconds, to a telephone, pick up the instrument and request the operator to please ring back the number from which they were calling so the bell could be checked. The operator would ring back, Reginald would answer and the man—or woman disguising her voice as a man's — would ask for Pam and, getting her, would request her to slip out on the grounds for a moment... But who? Which one of all these people?

My brain charged on. Maybe that wasn't the way it had been at all. Maybe Vic Corliss, stopping by the hotel to steady his nerves with a drink, had used one of the lobby telephones....Maybe Peter Gibson had called from his room at the hotel.... Maybe the telephone hadn't even rung and that was Reginald's way of getting Pamela alone for a minute, asking to see her out on the grounds for some reason known only to the killer....

I was getting no place at all. And I was sure that the police weren't either. Sergeant Hornblower, having called every suspect in the case to the Keith house, closeted me in the library with him. I asked him right off the bat how was he doing He told me that adding, subtracting, eliminating and taking into account that great factor LUCK, he was coming along nicely.

Looking at the great tombstones of teeth, I said, almost maliciously, "But you're really no nearer solving the mystery are you, Sergeant?"

"Oh, I've picked up a thing or two, Miss Randolph," he said, and those black eyes tried to bore a couple of holes straight through me. "Nothing much to be sure, but they may lead to results. It's the casual things one picks up, the casual things that people tell me, the casual things that people do when they don't think they're being watched, that leads to results."

Like time, I thought, murder evidence simply accumulates.

"For instance, Miss Randolph, I picked up THIS!"

And there was a great ham of a hand under my nose and on the huge hand lay a bit of black net from my torn dress.

I sat there perfectly rigid, my neck stuck forward, my eyes bulging..Sergeant Hornblower was now regarding the green onyx ashtray on the desk, but he wasn't fooling me. I had discovered it was a natural gift with him to observe in the minutest detail something from a queer angle, and I know that, although those black eyes were fixed on the ashtray, he was taking in my reaction to that bit of net.

And I looked guilty! I felt guilty! My teeth clacked together, but I managed somehow to say: "I didn't kill Pam Keith, Sergeant Hornblower. I didn't. I swear I didn't. I told you about tearing my dress."

"You told me about your scuffle with the prowler on the grounds of the estate before the murder. You told me that took place in back of the house. This bit of black net was clinging to a spruce on the scene of the murder!"

My mouth fell open.

"I must have torn my dress when —I—I found the body, Sergeant," I gasped, and remembered too late I had changed into my fuchsia satin.

Sergeant Hornblower promptly informed me of the fuchsia, and when I really remembered what had happened—how I had stumbled on the way to Sandra's debut and had torn my black net right on the scene where the murder was to take place—and told him so, he didn't believe me.

I can't blame him. It did sound pretty thin.

"Hadn't you better tell me the truth now, Miss Randolph. The whole truth," he said, and there was very little patience in his voice. "You were seen at a few minutes after ten running wildly through the lobby of the hotel to your apartment. I want to know what you were running from."

memory of that—dead body, Miss

"Were you running from the Randolph? The woman—you had brutally—murdered!"

"Oh, No. No!" I shrieked. "I've told you the truth. I stumbled and tore my dress on the way to the debut. That was about five-thirty. A long time before the murder. It was the man who attacked me around ten o'clock who frightened me so. When I—I got away from him, I ran as quickly as I could to the hotel. I didn't feel safe until I was — in my own apartment! I swear that's the truth. I didn't kill Pamela." And there I was crossing my heart, hoping to die, etc., etc.

He sat staring at me, a long searching appraisal. Then he said, "You've been a very busy young woman the last few days, Miss Randolph."

He didn't answer, but I thought I knew what he meant....Remembering my who-dunnits, I was certain I had been followed — tailed. And I was certain, as Doctor Wayne Courtney had advised, I should keep my nose out of this murder investigation. I was indeed Sergeant Roger Hornblower's pet suspect, and he was going to pin this crime on me in short order and close the books.

"Why," he finally asked, "did you find it necessary to visit the homes of several persons connected with this murder, Miss Randolph? Why?"

I wondered how close the police detectives had been, and if they had known I didn't just visit those homes but broke into some of them! For a moment I couldn't say a word. My eyes bulged a little more, and I wondered if Eddie Cantor's eyes hurt all the time as much as mine did then.

"Why?" Hornblower's stern voice impaled me on its sharp, blade-like demand. "Why did you do such snooping?"

"Why-y? Because—because I was trying to—to help you."

"Or rather, because you were trying to find some bit of evidence, something vital to your own safety? What were you looking for, Miss Randolph?"

The Experts Say

By The Canadian Press

Ottawa, Sept. 5—(CP)—PEPPY PICKLES: Here's how to ensure crisp, tangy cucumbers or gherkins, which make a grand addition to a meal:

See that cucumbers for pickling are fresh, and watch the brine. If the pickles turn out limp and soft it's either because the brine was too weak, because the cucumbers were not kept covered with it, or because an inferior quality of vinegar was used.

If the brine is too strong the pickles will shrivel. Standard brine allows one-half cup salt to one quart boiling water, cooled to room temperature before pouring over the cucumbers and left for six to eight weeks to deepen the color and translucency and develop tender crispness.

DIET TIP: Proteins are essential for rebuilding tissue and for good blood, and there's a danger that they may be skimped now that garden-fresh fruits and vegetables are so tempting, say the nutrition experts here.

Make sure that the protein side of the daily diet is not neglected. The experts say that two ounces of a good protein food like meat, fish, eggs or cheese is a daily "must."

STOCK UP: The munitions department says that increasing transportation difficulties make it essential for those who burn wood in their homes to buy their next winter's supply as soon as possible. Because of the transport situation and labor shortages it will be difficult to maintain wood deliveries in the latter part of the year. Timber Controller A. H. Williamson urges the public to lay in an adequate supply of wood fuel immediately.

JUST HINTS: Everybody likes pictures on walls, so here's a way to prevent plaster from cracking — put a small piece of adhesive tape over the spot where you intend to put picture hooks. Driving the nail through the tape will stop plaster cracks.

MAKE OVER Draperies, bedspreads, couch throws and printed cotton wall hangings can be made into slip covers, dressing-table skirt and cushion covers.

Polish Govt. In London Confers With Eden

By JAMES F. KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London, Sept. 5 (AP)—Poland's London government, shaking in a new crisis precipitated by Gen. Kazimierz Sosnkowski's denunciation of Allied failure to relieve Warsaw, called a special cabinet meeting today. Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk conferred with Foreign Secretary Eden just before the ministers met.

A spokesman said the meeting was concerned primarily with the plight of Warsaw. It was expected, however, that the cabinet would consider advancing the date for the proposed reorganization of Poland's military direction and replacing Gen. Sosnkowski, the Polish commander-in-chief, with a civilian board. The general is in disfavor in Soviet Russia.

Mr. Eden probably was emphatic in telling Mr. Mikolajczyk of the dangers of such statements as that of the general to British efforts to re-establish relations between Poland and Russia.

It was understood that the commander-in-chief made his attack without consulting the government. He asserted that the Allies "abandoned" the Patriot army of Gen. Kor during their month-long fight against the Germans in Warsaw.

Finds Vimy Ridge Memorial Only Slightly Damaged

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

Vimy Ridge, France Sept. 5. (CP Cable) — Minute examination of Canada's Vimy Memorial yesterday revealed one slight bit of damage. The hand on the outstretched arm of the figure on top of the right-hand pillar, looking at the Memorial from the front slope, has been knocked off.

The fact that the hand is missing is not noticed unless pointed out and this damage does not mar the beauty of the Memorial. The figure is at the very top of the monument and it is necessary to use field glasses to ascertain definitely that the hand is missing. The damage presumably was caused during the 1940 fighting.

We walked to the Memorial and read its simple inscription in English and French: "To the valor of their countrymen in the Great War and in memory of their 60,000 dead this monument is raised by the people of Canada".

We read the names of battles from Ypres to Cambrai listed on either side of the Memorial and then the inscription along the base of the north side telling how the Canadian Corps on April 9, 1917, stormed and captured the ridge.

As we stood there another Canadian force was crossing the Somme River.

But on Vimy Ridge there was a cathedral-like quiet. The new front mercifully passed by Vimy. The new war hadn't wrought its destruction on this hill of valor. The slopes around the monument were trim and neat. They were kept this way by the French people. The only evidence of war was the scarred earth where a Bren gun carrier swung off the road and turned by the side of the monument. Some British Tommies passing by had stopped to look at Canada's magnificent memorial to her dead of another war.

In front of the heroic feet of the monumental figure of Canada brooding over her war dead I picked up a shoulder flash of a famous British regiment. A soldier had dropped it there as he went over the ridge towards Lens.

Weather hasn't soiled the white stone. The inscriptions and the names of Canada's dead carved in the base are sharp and clear.

Mountie Tells How Counterfeiting Ring Was Broken

Windsor, Sept. 5 —(CP)— While authorities have been investigating reports of a counterfeiting ring working in Buffalo, N.Y., which is engaged in printing Canadian ration coupons, Staff Sgt. A. W. Anderson, in charge of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police detachment here, today revealed how the R.C.M.P. had dealt with a similar ring in Detroit. The counterfeiters working in Detroit were stopped when the R.C.M.P. invoked Foreign Exchange Control Board regulations.

Staff Sgt. Anderson said that one year ago they learned of plans to print counterfeit Canadian gasoline ration stamps in Detroit. Since United States' law governing counterfeiting did not apply to Canadian ration coupons, the parties involved could not be taken into custody.

With the help of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the R.C.M.P. kept close watch on the Detroit establishment where the coupons were being made and collected a great deal of evidence concerning the nature of the plans.

Investigations showed that a Canadian from Windsor was involved. This man had been taking money to Detroit to buy paper and make arrangements for the printing of the coupons. On the basis of that evidence he was charged under Foreign Exchange regulations.

18-MILE ADVANCE REGISTERED IN SOUTHERN FRANCE

Drive Northward Up Saone Valley in Pursuit of Germans

2,400 PRISONERS

By GEORGE BRIA
(AP Staff Writer)

Rome, Sept. 5 —(AP)— French and American troops driving northward up the Saone valley in pursuit of German forces withdrawing from Southern France scored gains of as much as 18 miles today.

Sweeping past Macon, a wine centre 68 miles by highway north of captured Lyon, French forces reached the vicinity of the village of Le Villars, on the west bank of the Saone near Tournus, by mid-afternoon. Tournus is a road centre 20 miles north of Macon.

American forces also advanced east of Macon on the east side of the Saone.

A new batch of 2,400 prisoners taken by the French in their capture of Villenfranche boosted the total since the landings on the Mediterranean beachheads to more than 65,000.

The French also reached St. Bonnet de Bruyeres, a town west of Macon, while farther east American forces passed through Montrevel.

There was no serious opposition at Montrevel, in contrast to the previous day, when the Germans launched a tank supported counter-attack to screen the retreat of the main enemy force northward on Highway Six toward Chalon and Dijon.

The Nazi counter-attack caused some losses in casualties and prisoners.

Meanwhile it was disclosed that the American 7th Infantry Regiment, which was organized in 1798 and saw first action against the British at Villiere's Plantation in Louisiana in 1814, was participating in the pursuit of the Germans.

TORONTO STOCKS

Lake Shore, Hollinger, Bralorne, Dome and Kerr-Addison all gained fractions. Giant Yellowknife and Frobisher were up 20 to 25 cents and gains of 5 to 10 cents appeared for Wright-Hargreaves, Pickle Crow, Macassa, San Antonio, Preston, Madsen, Pamour, Chesterville, Cochenour Willans and others.

Canadians Find German Officers Desert Troops

With the 1st Canadian Army, Sept. 5.— (CP-Reuters) — Canadian and Polish armor, which streamed across the Somme early yesterday, now is speeding parallel to the coast against very spotty resistance that has completely failed to delay its advance.

Evidence is piling up that German officers have deserted their men and have dashed off for Germany leaving their troops to it.

Hundreds of these deserted troops have been found wandering around the countryside drunk and not caring what happens to them.

These are the pitiful remnants of the armies which once rolled so proudly into France.

It is believed that elements of three German divisions are trapped in the Pas' De Calais.

Broadcasts From Namur.

Free Belgian broadcasts, however, were recorded from Namur, 15 miles northeast of Charleroi and from the Belgian fortress city of Liege, 25 miles from Aachen, suggesting the Nazis might have cleared out or been driven out of those cities.

About 700 German soldiers, attempting to escape from the onrushing Allied armies in France, have crossed the frontier into Switzerland during the last few days and surrendered to Swiss authorities for internment, it was reported from Bern, and frontier reports told of a "lost division" of the German army, encirceled in the Landes Department, whose officers surrendered an estimated 11,000 men to the French forces of the interior after having attempted to hold out until they could surrender to Anglo-American forces.

Last Link Forged.

The last link in the chain encircling the Germans between the Somme and the Scheldt was forged by the British 2nd army column which captured Antwerp after first taking the Belgian capital of Brussels. This column covered 210 miles of French and Belgian territory in the six-day period since it smashed out of the Seine bridgehead.

The capture of Antwerp gave the Allies their first big ocean port to handle the flood of supplies needed to keep the offensive rolling.

Fall of the city, the second largest in Belgium with a population of 273,217, also cut the last rail lines from the Belgian and French channel coasts to Germany.

Premier Pieter Gerbrandy announced that "Allies armies have crossed the Dutch frontier." In a broadcast to his countrymen in the Netherlands, Gerbrandy said:

"The hour of liberation has struck. Soon the moment will come when the Queen will return to your midst to govern in justice and peace."

Nearing Rotterdam.

Aneta, Netherlands News Agency, reported the British had struck five miles beyond the border to Breda, one of the strongpoints which the Germans seized in their airborne blitz of 1940. Breda is 25 miles southeast of Rotterdam.

Gen. Eisenhower called on the Dutch to save from German demolition the docks, factories and railways of Rotterdam.

Headquarters hid the latest operations of the U.S. 1st and 3rd armies from the enemy yesterday and a scarcity of field dispatches showed that these armies were enforcing radio silence. It was becoming hourly more probable, however, that the Americans had driven into the Reich.

A German report said American tanks had driven across the German frontier and reached Aachen, two miles inside the Reich and one of the bastions of the Siegfried line. This report also was carried by the Paris radio. In an apparent reference to the same area the Swiss radio said Allied troops, operating from Central Belgium, were reported to have reached the German frontier.

Capture Perl Inside Border.

Motorized infantry of the U. S. 1st Army may have reached Namur, 55 miles from the frontier of Prussia.

A report from Stockholm said tanks of the U. S. 3rd Army had captured Perl, just inside Germany where the borders of the Reich, Luxembourg and France meet. Perl is 12 miles northeast of Thionville where the Germans previously had located American forces. The two reported penetrations into Germany were 100 miles apart.

On the 3rd Army front headquarters said yesterday the Americans were 12 miles east of Verdun at Etain, and were in the vicinity of Nancy. The 3rd Army also threw another bridgehead across the Meuse at Chalines, 10 miles southeast of Commercy.

Nazis Mowed Down.

Believing there was a 15-mile gap in the American lines south of Mons a large number of Germans attempted to cross in front of a divisional command post and were mowed down. German prisoners were being taken all over the rear areas in one of the biggest roundups since the Allies landed on the beaches of Normandy three months ago. Germans and Americans were battling at close quarters between Mons and Brussels.

In sealing off the French channel coast Canadian and Polish forces took Abbeville, drove 20 miles north to Hesdin and then advanced an additional 10 miles to the northwest and captured the town of Montreuil.

British troops entered the French industrial city of Lille—population 200,000—and were pounding vengefully down the last 25 miles to Dunkerque and the other channel ports of Calais and Boulogne. Another force, sweeping through Armentieres, closed on Ypres, Belgium.

Nazis Reject Ultimatum.

The German garrison of Le Havre, under siege by British units of the 1st Canadian Army, has rejected an ultimatum and is holding out still, Canadian Press Correspondent Ross Munro reported.

The big seaport is presumably being brought under final assault, although it is difficult to estimate how long the siege may take.

Encountering virtually no opposition, the British pushed 18 miles northeast of the Belgian capital of Brussels and took Leuven (Louvain), one of the strong points of the old Belgian defensive triangle of Liege-Leuven-Namur.

British troops also spread out to the west taking Aalst (Alost), halfway to Gent. Mechelen, 15 miles north of Brussels also was captured. It has a population of 62,000 and is the fifth city of Belgium. To the southwest other British units were occupying the French industrial city of Lille.

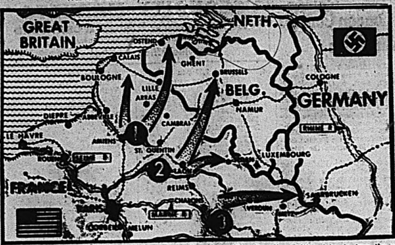
Trapped Germans Wiped Out.

Trapped German forces ranging from a few hundred to a few thousand were being mopped up by the British in the vicinity of Tournai, where Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's 2nd army first struck into Belgium in a northward sweep from its Seine bridgehead which averaged 35 miles a day for six days.

The state of some of the defeated Nazi divisions which had fled a few days ago across the now-sealed escape gap through Belgium was revealed by captured enemy documents. These showed that one German division was reduced to three officers and 90 men, another to 10 officers and 140 men and another to 800 officers and men from a normal strength of 8,000 to 10,000.

These perhaps are extreme examples of the depletion of the German forces, but it has been suggested that the estimates in the London press of 100,000 Nazis hemmed in by the Pas De Calais coastal trap likely was too high.

WEST FRONT VICTORIES SPEED GERMANY'S DOOM



From the robot coast (1) to the assault on the Maginot line fortifications around Sedan (2) and the victory at Verdun (3), spectacular Allied successes continue to mount as the hour for the actual thrust into Germany and Belgium grows closer. The Canadian-British drive to trap the robot coast continues beyond Amiens and may hit north from Rouen directly to Dieppe. From Sedan, U. S. forces are expected to directly challenge Hitler's west wall and drive toward Cologne.

FRENCH FARMER BRINGS NAZIS TO MARKET THIS TIME

This enterprising farmer of Marseilles rides into the city in a horse-drawn wagon, standing guard over two Nazi soldiers whom he captured during the fighting in that section of France.

WOMEN MUST WEEP

A grief-stricken woman weeps bitterly over the grave of one of the 27 Maquis (French guerrilla patriots) who were executed en masse by the Germans at St. Pol de Leon, France. The Maquis staged a premature uprising and attempted to subdue the German garrison. But their gallant attempt failed and swift death followed.

Also Relieved Headaches and Constipation; Nerves Are Relaxed; Appetite Better Since Taking Treatment of Famous Herbal Compound.

Nearly every day you can read in the paper how some one has obtained good results by taking a short treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound. This medicine has brought relief to many hundreds of local men and women and, like so many others, Mr. B. Houseman, 853 Talbot Street, St. Thomas, Ontario, has good reason to be happy about his experience with Syntona.

"For a long time I suffered with sore, aching joints and muscles," said Mr. Houseman. "I had pains in my limbs and backache almost all the time. Many days I felt sore and ached all over. It took all the good out of me. I had a poor appetite and I was also troubled daily with constipation. I would get frequent headaches and my nerves would become so upset I didn't feel like doing anything.

"A few weeks ago, I began taking Syntona and it has already done me so much good that I have recommended it to many of my friends. It relieved the pain and soreness in my joints and muscles so that they scarcely trouble me at all. I am now free from backache and headaches. I never had anything to work so smoothly and thoroughly on my bowels. My appetite has picked up and my nerves are relaxed. I feel so much better in every way that even my work seems easier."

Get yourself a treatment of Syntona today, in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST. See how much better you, too, will be feeling in just a short time.

WORK IN FREIGHT SHEDS

London, Ont., Sept. 2 (CP) — Pushing two-wheeled freight "trucks" is just like pushing a "baby carriage," according to one of the four women who started to work in the Canadian National Railways freight shed here. They all like the work, and though some of them were dubious, most of the men agreed the women were doing "all right."

Kingston, Sept. 5 - (CP) - Sunflowers actually grow in trees in the City of Kingston. A sunflower, about six feet in height is growing in a tree in front of the home of I.P. Burke. It is thought the sunflower seed, which took root in the crotch of the tree was dropped there by some bird.

DON'T start burning fuel until absolutely necessary fire until you absolutely must. The later you begin using it, the longer your fuel will last. And there are many cold months ahead!

Don't Light Your Furnace

USE YOUR FIREPLACE to take the chill off the house—but; when not in use, be sure the fireplace damper is closed, to avoid heat escaping up the chimney.

WEAR WARMER CLOTHING
Sweater, or other warm wrap, morning and evening, will often supply the necessary warmth on chilly days—and save coal.

● You are asked to economize on coal for the sake of Canada's boys and girls in the fighting forces. Coal is a war material—conserve it, and you are doing a share in speeding Victory and Peace.

THERE IS TIME STILL TO MAKE COLD-REPELLING REPAIRS
If your storm windows and doors are not already up, put them on now.
Caulk Window and Door Frames—For small cost you can save fuel by caulking the space between the brickwork and the window or door frames. Many hardware stores rent caulking guns.
Seal Chimney Leaks—Seal or caulk all leaks in the heating system and the smoke pipe connection with the chimney. A little stove cement will do the trick.
Repair Insulation—Insulation on hot water and steam pipes and boiler should be repaired to prevent heat loss in basement.

CANADIANS REACH CHANNEL IN CALAIS AREA

REDS STRIKE TOWARD E. PRUSSIA ON BROAD FRONT

Patrols Within Mile of Boulogne; Yanks Take Namur

No Confirmation of Report British Near Rotterdam

London, Sept. 6 —(CP)— Strong forces of the United States 3rd Army established themselves firmly across the Moselle river today in preparation for an assault on Hitler's west wall while 1st Canadian and British 2nd Army troops thinned hourly the Pas-de-Calais coastal strip where an officially estimated 50,000 Germans are caught.

Five thousand of the enemy are in Boulogne, with 1st Canadian Army patrols only a mile distant, and another 5,000 in Le Havre.

Meanwhile, Gen. Eisenhower declared the battle of Germany was about to begin.

"Battles soon will be fought on German soil," he said in broadcast instructions to foreign workers in Germany on ways to aid Allied troops in combat areas.

He spoke while the Americans were poised for the west wall assault after their armored patrols, reconnoitering the path of the advance, had crossed the German border and then returned to the main elements.

Supreme Headquarters officially described the penetrations of the German frontier as actions perhaps 25 to 30 miles ahead of the main front. The 3rd Army permitted disclosure only today that these had occurred Sunday—the first officially reported army entry into Germany by land since the fall of France.

Still Under Secrecy.

What has happened since Sunday on the 3rd Army front still was under the secrecy of security but it was announced officially that the 3rd Army's breaching of the Moselle, last river barrier short of the Rhine itself, had occurred midway between Metz and Nancy, some 40-odd miles short of the nearest point of the German frontier.

Headquarters said the 3rd Army was across the Moselle in strength. Presumably there was a second bridgehead near Nancy.

What little information did come back to Supreme Headquarters through the screen of silence suggested that stiffened German opposition was being met in the preliminaries to the main battle for the border.

British units of the 1st Canadian Army probed Le Havre while patrols of that army pushed to the Channel on either side of Calais, Ross Munro, Canadian Press War Correspondent, reported.

Allied Supreme Headquarters confirmed that the British 2nd Army was driving somewhere in the Netherlands, but did not indicate where or in what depth. It offered no confirmation of a Paris radio report that the British were advancing within sight of Rotterdam, the great Dutch port 50 miles north of Antwerp.

It also was announced that the U. S. 1st Army has liberated the fortified Belgian city of Namur at the confluence of the Meuse and Sambre rivers. Namur is 32 miles from Liege and 55 miles from Aachen in Germany.

Blackout on Movements.

The announcement concerning the British advance lifted the 24-hour news blackout of this operation to the north, but Headquarters continued into the fourth day the secret of the reported American penetration of Luxembourg and the eastward sweep to the Rhine.

The exact position of the Americans thus hung somewhere in the balance between unconfirmed French frontier reports that U. S. troops had captured Aachen and Saarbrucken in Germany and reached Strasbourg and the disclosures by headquarters only of advances toward those points.

The front dispatch from Associated Press War Correspondent Wes Gallagher of the penetration of American patrols into Germany did not specify exactly the present position of Lt.-Gen. Patton's line but obviously much could have happened since last Sunday.

This dispatch said the Moselle river bridgehead was established in the face of stiff German resistance and tended to confirm earlier front advices that German troops were putting up a more determined stand against American units driving toward the western borders of the Reich.

IMPORTANT RIDGE HELD BY 8TH ARMY NEAR ADRIATIC

Patrols Sent Into Coriano but East Anchor of Line Held by Germans

RESISTANCE WEAKENS

By GEORGE TUCKER
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, Sept. 6 —(AP)— Powerful British 8th Army forces including veteran Canadian infantry have captured an important ridge running from the key town of Coriano to the Adriatic Sea in furious battling south of Rimini, eastern anchor of the Nazis' Gothic line, but Coriano is still in German hands, Allied Headquarters said today.

Allied patrols have penetrated the town, but troops have not been able to enter it in force. The Germans were said to be putting up a fanatical defence on high ground to the left of Coriano.

North of Pisa on the western end of the Italian front Americans of the Allied 5th Army continued to register gains from the Germans at Altopascia and sending patrols deep into the important communications centre of Lucca, a provisional capital with a population of 82,000, 10 miles northeast of Pisa.

British columns ran into growing resistance north of Florence, but scored important gains in the high terrain overlooking the city.

The resistance of the Nazis on the Adriatic showed signs of weakening as the Canadians and other elements of the 8th Army severely mauled fresh tank and infantry reinforcements thrown into their path.

The Germans have been compelled to relieve their much-battered parachute battalion by an ill-assorted collection of men from the Turkoman Division, which was commanded by Maj.-Gen. Otto van Viedmayer, who has apparently been relieved of his command.

The new Canadian drive which started two nights ago has carried to within a half-mile of the Marano river, in the face of considerable opposition from self-propelled and anti-track.

No new gains were reported in the direction of Rimini, although for the last 48 hours British and Canadian troops have been less than six miles from that vital terminus to the vulnerable valley of the Po.

BULGARIA SUES RUSSIA FOR PEACE ON DECLARATION

No Indication That Red Army Troops Had Crossed the Northern Borders of Bulgaria

IN TIGHT SPOT

By JAMES F. KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London, Sept. 6 (AP)—Bulgaria appealed hastily to Moscow for an Armistice today only a few hours after receiving Soviet Russia's declaration of war and bolstered her plea by declaring the government had ordered strong measures against German forces which she accused of attacking Bulgarian army units.

The Armistice appeal, the official Bulgarian radio announced, was delivered to the Soviet legation in Sofia shortly after midnight.

There was no immediate reaction from Moscow and no indication whether Red army troops had already crossed the northern border of Bulgaria, along which they had been poised for several days after a swift advance through Romania.

It appeared, however, from the trend of events that should Bulgaria succeed in making peace with Russia she might find herself at war with Germany.

The Sofia radio said the Bulgarian council of ministers was still in session early today after directing the Armistice appeal, but whether this meant that further steps against Germany were being contemplated was a matter of conjecture.

Firm Measures Taken.

The council meeting was summoned at 3 p.m. yesterday, Sofia said, to "take decisive and firm measures" against German troops who attacked Bulgarian army units engaged in disarming Nazi soldiers fleeing across the border from Romania. The disarming order had been given in conformity with Bulgaria's previous declaration of

Sharp Protest On Drew's Trip

Ottawa, Sept. 6 —(CP)— The Ottawa Citizen said yesterday it was reported that "considerable annoyance" has arisen in cabinet circles over the fact Harold M. Balfour, British Undersecretary for Air, took Premier George Drew of Ontario along with him in his special plane returning to London recently.

"It is understood a sharp protest has been made touching the matter to Lord Beaverbrook, Lord Privy Seal, on the ground that Mr. Balfour's action constituted unwarranted participation in Canadian political affairs since Premier Drew presumably went to Britain to secure more material to carry on his imperialist political campaign here . . ."

Vengeful Nazis Burn French Village And All of the 1,500 Inhabitants

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(AP War Correspondent)

Oradour Sur Glane, France, Sept. 6. (AP)—Oradour is a ghastly village of charred and tottering walls set in the midst of a lovely rolling countryside. It has no inhabitants because 12 weeks ago the Germans burned the village and its population.

Between 1,200 and 1,500 persons, most of them women and children, were locked in the village church, in the school and in houses and perished in flames.

Only 17 escaped and 10 of these now are in mental institutions.

Oradour, 12 miles west of Limoges, was swollen with refugees, especially children. Many mothers from Paris and other cities in danger of being bombed came with their children to pass the Summer. Other families placed their children to board at homes in the village.

No one knows exactly how many persons were in the village on the day of its doom, June 10, but it is known the number was between 1,200 and 1,500.

Here is what happened that day, according to the story agreed upon by all the living and sane eye-witnesses:

Set up Machine Guns.

In the late hours of the afternoon a battalion of the Das Reich Elite Guard division unexpectedly appeared and took positions on all roads leading into the village, blocking them by setting up machine-guns.

Troops then entered the town and ordered all women and children to go into the church, all men into certain specified houses. Some 600 women and children crowded into the church. Some wheeled their babies in perambulators. Other women and children who could not be squeezed into the church were ordered into the school adjacent to it.

The Germans then locked the church and school and the houses into which the men had been herded.

GENERALS FOREGATHER AFTER LIBERATION PARADE

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, centre, Supreme Allied Commander, chats informally with Lt.-Gen. Omar Bradley, commander of the 12th Army group, left, and Air Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, Deputy Supreme Commander, right, in Paris, after the liberation parade through the Arc de Triomphe. U. S. Gen. Bradley has been placed on an equal status with General Montgomery in France.

Ottawa, Sept. 6. (CP)—Ships of the Canadian Navy provided 100 per cent of close escort for all trade convoys from North America to the United Kingdom during the Summer months of this year, Navy Minister Macdonald said today at a Press conference.

Detailing the role of the Canadian Navy in the invasion of Europe, Mr. Macdonald said 109 ships manned by approximately 10,000 officers and men took part.

The ships included 30 large infantry landing craft; 16 Bangor minesweepers; 19 corvettes; 12 frigates; 10 escort destroyers; six large destroyers, and two Canadian infantry landing ships, the Prince Henry and the Prince David.

"The fact that the R.C.N. was able to assume the increased escort responsibility was in itself remarkable in the light of its pre-war strength", said Mr. Macdonald. "But at the same time a very considerable portion of its seagoing personnel and fighting ships was engaged in invasion operations in France".

Canadian ships made up approximately 30 per cent of all support force units in the North Atlantic during the Summer. The support force units do not travel with the convoys but range the sea ready to attack at any point where the enemy may appear.

Navy Has Sunk 15 Subs.

Mr. Macdonald said that since war started the Canadian Navy has sunk 15 submarines and 12 surface ships. It has captured one surface ship and damaged 16 or 17. Forces of which Canadian ships formed a part have sunk 23 surface ships and damaged nine.

Plans for demobilization of the Navy will depend on the end of the war in Europe and conditions in the Pacific, said Mr. Macdonald. The navy is certain to take part in the Pacific war, but some of its present ships may not be suitable for the longer distance operations involved there.

The Navy has an authorized post-war complement of 9,000 officers and men, but Mr. Macdonald said he personally would like to see a post-war permanent navy of about 15,000. The present war strength is more than 90,000 and this will go up to 94,000 by the end of the fiscal year, March 31, 1945.

Recruit 500 Men Monthly.

Starting with this month plans call for recruiting about 500 men and 250 women a month until March. This is slightly lower than the intake prior to September and there might be further curtailment of war developments changed the requirements.

A post-war naval strength of 9,000, said the minister, would permit Canada to man two cruisers, two aircraft carriers and about eight destroyers. Before the war Canada had 15 ships and about 1,700 men in the Navy.

Before the invasion of France, said the minister, the Royal Canadian Navy was asked to release certain types of ships for a pending operation. Si[illegible] Bangor class minesweepers were immediately prepared and sailed to the United Kingdom. Previously it had been agreed that Canada would man for invasion operationss 30 L.C.I. (T)'s landing craft infantry, large and 16 motor torpedo boats.

19 Corvettes Assisted.

Nineteen Canadian corvettes were also sent to the English Channel to assist in escorting invasion convoys. Twelve frigates and 10 escort destroyers of the "river" class, comprising our support forces were used to cover their invasion forces.

Six of Canada's largest and most powerful destroyers took part in pre-invasion and invasion operations. Two of these were of the "fleet" class and four of the "tribal" class. One of the latter, the destroyer Athabaskan, was lost last April, but her place has since been taken by the destroyer Iroquois.

On D-Day and in the weeks which followed, the two large Canadian infantry landing ships, Prince Henry and Prince David carried thousands of Canadian and Allied troops to the invasion areas of France. When the time came for the invasion of southern France, the two ships were sent to the Mediterranean to take part in operations there.

In all, 109 ships, manned by approximately 10,000 officers and men of the Royal Canadian navy took part in the invasion of France. The personnel included a beach commando party, officers and ratings of the Canadian navy whose duty it was to regulate traffic and patrol sectors of the invasion beaches.

"It is to be emphasized," he said, "that Canada's naval contribution to the invasion, far from being a brief effort concentrated in the period around D-Day, has been a continuous one for weeks before the landings in France until the present, and it is still continuing. . . ."

Germans Warned To Cease Fighting

Ottaka, Sept. 6-(CP)-The BBC in a broadcast directed at Germany today warned the Germans that unless they cease fighting within the next few days "it will be too late to save the German Nation from total collapse."

The broadcast, recorded by the CBC listening post here, was made by the editor-in-chief of the BBC's European service and said:

Unless the cease fire order is given in the next few days by those who are still in power to do so, or unless the German soldiers spontaneously stop fighting and the German workers stop working it will be too late to save the German Nation from total collapse."

LARGEST CONVOY EVER TO SAIL SEAS ARRIVES SAFELY

150 Merchant Ships Entirely Escorted by Canadian Navy and R.C.A.F.

Ottawa, Sept. 6 —(CP)— The largest convoy "ever to sail the seas" arrived recently in the United Kingdom entirely under close escort of the Canadian navy and under air cover by the R.C.A.F. and R.A.F., Navy Minister Macdonald said today at a press conference.

The convoy consisted of 150 merchant navy ships carrying more than 1,000,000 tons of cargo.

Arrival of the convoy was confirmed by a congratulatory message from the Admiralty which said its "safe and timely delivery" was a great credit to all those concerned.

Senior officer of the escorting ships was Cmdr. George L. Stephen, Halifax. Ships under his command were Canadian frigates and corvettes, some of them virtually brand new, and others veterans of the harrowing winters of 1941, 1942 and 1943 when the Germans claimed 1,000,000 tons of shipping sunk monthly.

An officer, whose ship was detached to check on pennant numbers of the merchantmen, said it took five hours, travelliing at full speed, to go up and down the convoy lanes.

Canadian Destroyer Haida Plays Large Part in Helping To Sink Sub

London, Sept. 6 —(CP Cable)— H.M.C.S. Haida, veteran destroyer of many a skirmish in European waters, played a large part in helping to sink a German submarine and capture all its crew recently, the Admiralty disclosed today.

The U-boat crew declined to fight after it had been forced to the surface by depth charges from the Canadian vessel and H.M.S. Eskimo, and all its members were captured as the U-boat sank.

An R.A.F. Coastal Command Liberator first sighted the submarine, attacked it with bombs, and then dropped a smoke float to guide the Haida and Eskimo to the position. Depth charges from the two vessels blew the U-boat to the surface and the crew jumped into the sea as quickly as they could pour from the conning tower.

Smashed by fire from the guns of the two Tribal destroyers the submarine was sent to the bottom a few minutes later. There were nine wounded among the survivors picked up by the destroyers' boats.

Depth charges were released repeatedly by the Tribals after contact was made and the Haida picked up the sound of under-water hammering as if the submarine crew were endeavoring to make repairs. Survivors later said they had attempted to tighten several hatches which were leaking badly from the blasting.

Some of the Haida's crew actually were fishing—scooping up herring stunned by depth charges—when word that the U-boat was believed to be "coming up" sent them dashing back to their posts.

Only a few hundred yards off the Haida's starboard the submarine broke the surface. The destroyers opened fire immediately and shells from Oerlikon guns and pom-poms struck the hull and decks of the U-boat.

Forces in Romania Less Than 50 Miles From Yugoslavia

Nazi Radio Says Russians Have Entered Bulgaria

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 6. (AP)— Russian troops pushed across the Narew River north of Warsaw today and struck toward East Prussia on a broad front against the heaviest kind of German opposition, front dispatches said.

At the southern end of the long eastern front, troops which captured Craiova in southwest Romania drove along the Malachian Plains on the approaches of Yugoslavia for a junction with Marshal Tito's Partisan army to cut off all the enemy in Bulgaria, southern Yugoslavia, Greece and the Aegean.

The swift Russian columns in Romania were less than fifty miles from Yugoslavia, less than fifty-five from the Iron Gate where the Danube cuts through the Transylvanian Alps, less than 140 from seething Belgrade and 175 from Hungary proper. There was no Soviet announcement that Red Troops had invaded Bulgaria, upon which Russia declared war last night.

Swarms of Stormovik planes paced the renewed Russian offensive in the Narew area, 312 miles from Berlin—the closest reported approach of any Allied army. On one 24-mile sector, the Germans concentrated four divisions.

Front dispatches from Romania said the Germans were offering considerable resistance in Transylvania mountain passes north and northwest of captured Pitesti.

70-Mile Advance in Day.

Advancing more than 70 miles in a single day in Romania, Soviet armored forces seized a strategic spring-board for an immediate united front with Marshal Tito's Partisans and an invasion of the Hungarian plains.

The occupation of Craiova, largest road and rail centre in western Romania, placed Russian troops less than 150 miles east of Belgrade, 115 miles north of Sofia and 185 miles from the Hungarian border.

Front dispatches said the Germans fled in a wild rout ahead of a Red army column which had almost completely out-flanked the northern frontier of Bulgaria.

Soviet forces were only 110 miles from Nis, the Yugoslav rail junction through which runs Bulgaria's only remaining rail communication with Germany.

The drive was gathering momentum against Hungary, and German resistance in southeastern Europe appeared to have collapsed as disastrously as it has in France and the Low Countries.

Cut Across Top.

Cutting straight across the top of the Balkan peninsula, the Russians can still trap thousands of Germans, who have been struggling to withdraw from the Aegean Islands, the Greek mainland, Albania, Macedonia, Montenegro, Hercogovina and Bosnia

Marshal Tito's three years of difficult isolation may be ended within a few hours, Moscow believed.

The Russian assault in northern Poland thundered through its second day, gaining the important communications centre on Wyskow, 26 miles northeast of Warsaw on the north bank of the Bug river, and reaching the Narew river at several points.

S. Woodcock Instantly Killed At Bancroft Mill

Bancroft, Sept. 6 —(Special)— Sandford Woodcock, 55, a resident of the Monk Road, Faraday Twp., was instantly killed shortly before noon this Wednesday while employed at the Mica and Stone Products Mill at Bancroft, operated by Fred Orser. Mr. Woodcock's heavy overalls became entangled in a clamp on a shafting and he was whipped around many times before the power could be turned off. Another workman, hearing cries of agony, tried to pull the stricken man away, but the force of the turning machinery tore him from the man's grasp. Dr. O. W. Anderson, coroner, who lives close to the plant, was immediately called but life was extinct. The man's arm and both legs were badly crushed and both feet whipped off. He is survived by his wife and seven small children, also his mother, three sisters and a brother. An investigation is pending.

Ontario Premier Now in France Visiting Troops

London, Sept. 6 (CP Cable) — Premier Drew of Ontario now is in France, visiting Ontario units of the 1st Canadian Army, forward squadrons of the R.C.A.F. and field hospitals, it was announced today.

The premier recently made a 24-hour visit to flying-bomb anti-aircraft gunsites and saw a good day and night's shooting.

Col. Drew—an artillery officer in the First Great War—said he was greatly impressed and added:

"In my opinion, it (shooting down flying bombs) is the most remarkable feat our artillery has accomplished."

He was full of praise also for the flying ambulance service operating between Great Britain and France. He visited a Canadian army hospital in Britain and saw a soldier placed on the operating table at 5 p.m., who had been injured at 9 a.m that day.

25-LB. LUNGE HOOKED IN MOIRA LAKE

Despite the fact that catches of 'lunge this season have been rather isolated, there are still big ones to be caught—if you know where to get them. At least that is the contention of Mr. David White, Toronto, son of Mr. Robt. White, Front Street, who on Monday afternoon caught a nice 25-pounder in Moira Lake.

Out in his father's boat fishing with a spoon, Mr. White snagged the big fellow and after a battle of about fifteen minutes brought him alongside. Needless to say he went back to Toronto well satisfied with his Labor Day holiday.

McDonnell, Stirling, has been promoted to the rank of acting quartermaster sergeant, it has been announced from the Canadian Ordnance and Electrical Mechanical Engineers Training Centre, Barriefield Camp. PTE. SAM B. JONES SEVERELY WOUNDED

Nineteen-year-old Private Samuel Bruce Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Jones, 18 North Front Street has been severely wounded during enemy action overseas, his parents were informed yesterday by official cablegram. No details of the young soldier's injuries were included in the information.

Born in Belleville, Pte. Jones attended Queen Victoria School. Prior to enlistment in November, 1943 he was employed at the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation here. Transferred to the famous Black Watch Highlanders after going overseas in July of this year, he was wounded in action on August 27th.

Bruce has a brother Jack, and three sisters, Grace, Amanda, and Olivia at home.

PROPERTY DAMAGE RESULT OF CRASH

to a truck and passenger car on Highway No. 37 immediately north of Belleville Tuesday night. George Matthews, Belleville, was driving his motor car out of the Stoney Lonesome side road onto Highway No. 37 as Malcolm Huddleston, also of this city, was attempting to pass another south-bound truck. Huddleston's truck and the motor car collided resulting in fender damage only. Provincial Constable Jas. Driscoll investigated.

STEAL POP BOTTLES TO GET DEPOSIT

It has been said—there is nothing to equal the creative mind of a child.

To prove this a new method of raising cash was unearthed by city police yesterday when it was discovered teen-aged lads were stealing empty pop bottles from cases left in storage at a local soft drink plant and selling them to retail stores for the deposit amount.

Police investigations yesterday revealed this practice of taking the empty bottles and tendering them as purchased goods to obtain the two cent deposit return, has been going on for some time in Belleville. The names of several juveniles were obtained by police yesterday. "They had quite a profitable business. At least realizing sufficient money to provide drinks, candy and show money for their efforts," police officials revealed today.

'Fags' Catch Up With Belleville Boys in Lines

Although Canadian armed forces are advancing with lightning-like speed along all fronts of the European war, the Belleville boys always manage to take time out to write home and thank donors for cigarettes received at the front lines of battle. Weekly replies are received by Chairman Buster LaBarr, of the Kinsmen Fag Fund, indicating what importance a small cigarette can be to a Canadian fighting man, be he in the Navy, Army or Air Force.

For instance in sending his personal thanks back home Pte. R. Shoebridge wrote from Italy: "Your cigarettes come in handy over here. Had it not been for the smokes coming through the morale of our boys would have doubtlessly been lessened." Jim Meens sent two post cards expressing his thankfulness, while Sergt J. H. Hill added—"cigarettes are more valuable than gold here in Italy." Gnr. G. Van Allen wrote to say they had "Jerry" on the run in Italy and soon hoped to be able to smoke cigarettes sent from Belleville right in Berlin.

Such are the expressions of feelings of hundreds of Belleville boys, who regularly receive cigarettes from local fag funds. In their most recent shipment the following Belleville boys were sent individual shipments of 300 cigarettes each through the Kinsmen Fag Fund:

Bus Travel Shows Big Increase

Whether it is the result of a growing scarcity of gasoline or because Belleville motorists are saving their tires as much as possible, a considerable increase in bus travel has been noted in this city this year as compared with the previous season.

During the second quarter, that is the months of April, May and June, in 1943, buses of the local Rawson bus line carried slightly over 156,000 passengers, while for the same period this year, the number of passengers totalled approximately 215,398, a percentage increase

Kinsmen Clubs Raise $743,000 During Past Year

Resuming their regular fortnightly dinner meetings after a two-month "holiday" during the summer season, members of the local Kinsmen Club gathered at the Quinte Tuesday evening to hear reports of committee chairmen on summer activities and to lay plans for their fall and winter program.

President "Matt" Currie gave members a detailed report of the recent Kinsmen convention in Regina at which he and two other local members attended, and gave statistics of what the club had accomplished nationally during the last fiscal year.

Seven hundred and forty-three thousand dollars had been raised by Kinsmen clubs through Canada for war purposes during the past year, as compared with $569,000 the year previous. In addition $93,500 had been raised for community service. Over seven million quarts of milk had been sent to Britain bringing the total since the inauguration of the fund to over fifteen millions. Total money spent for milk had been $1,722,418.

Twenty-nine new Kinsmen clubs had been formed across during the year, three of which had been sponsored by the Belleville club. In the 29 new clubs there were 800 members, 120 of whom were in the three Belleville district clubs. Total Kinsmen club membership was now 5,500 with 1,400 members added during the year. There are 1,200 Kinsmen on active service.

Won by the Belleville club at the Regina convention the Harold M. Long Expansion Trophy going to the club sponsoring the most new clubs during the year, was exhibited at Tuesday evening's meeting. Belleville was the only Eastern Canada club to win a trophy at the Regina convention. The meeting was attended by a representative gathering, members being entertained by William Navan at the piano.

Saco Marines Will Continue In Ont. Playoffs

As the result of a recent military order from the Department of National Defence in Ottawa, the Kingston Ordnance softball team has been denied the privilege of further participation in the Intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns, it was announced here today by Harry Rollins, first vice president of the provincial softball body. When the Kingston Ordnance announced their inability to continue into the O.A.S.A. playdowns, their decision automatically brought the SACO "Marines," winners of the Belleville and District Softball League, back into the provincial softball picture.

"Under the circumstances Belleville moves back into the O.A.S.A. picture and will continue into the playdowns despite the fact they were eliminated by Kingston last week. At the time of the Kingston-Belleville series some discussion was brought out regarding the eligibility of the Ordnance team following the orders of no provincial playdowns for armed service teams issued from Ottawa. However ,the Ordnance management insisted they would be permitted to continue. Such was not the case, however, and today we have the SACO "Marines" back into the Eastern Ontario softball finals against the strong Oshawa General Motors team," pointed out Mr. Rollins.

The first game of the series will be played at Oshawa on Thursday evening with the return game slated to be played at the Fair Grounds here commencing at six o'clock Saturday evening. Umpires will be provided from each city.

Huntington Twp. Barn Destroyed

Fire of an unknown origin Sunday night completely destroyed the frame barn owned by Mr. Richard Wallace, 9th concession of Huntingdon township, near Ivanhoe. A quantity of hay, together with some farm implements were lost in the blaze but livestock was not in the building.

In Prince Edward County the new barn of Mr. A. Lloyd of Hillier, was destroyed when fire started in the straw mow during threshing operations. By prompt action on part of the owner, the threshing separator was removed from the barn before being damaged by the fire.

Children's Work Subject of Talk At Kiwanis Club

For 25 years an active worker in boys' and girls' circles, and current executive director of the Kiwanis Boys' Club of Toronto, Mr. Ed. J. Mitchell, of that city appealed to members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club to take an active individual interest in children's work in the Belleville area.

Speaking to club members at their regular weekly luncheon meeting Tuesday noon, Mr. Mitchell stressed while many plans had been made for the post-war period, it must be remembered these plans will be carried through by the sons of the present generation. "And it remained," he said, "for the present adult generation to train the minds of present day youth in the right direction."

Recounting the work of the Toronto Kiwanis clubs in children's work, the speaker intimated that while they had ample funds with which to work, there still was need for a great deal of individual interest from the members. The foundation of their work evolved around maintenance of the spiritual aspect towards life rather than the material. Young people were urged to place their trust in God, to be loyal citizens of Canada and to be helpful towards others.

Entitling his talk "A Guy, a Gal and a Gat," Mr. Mitchell cited an individual case in Toronto which had given the club considerable trouble. Despite all that had been done for him the 17-year-old principal had eventually wound up as a member of a gang running contraband from Detroit to Toronto.

Broaden Appreciation.

Participation in boys' work by service club members would broaden members' appreciation of children's problems and would tend to humanize them, according to Mr. Mitchell. "If you do a good job as Kiwanians in your young people's work, you will have accomplished more than if you had builded with bricks," he said. "It will give present day boys and girls the opportunity of becoming leaders of tomorrow."

In closing the speaker complimented members of the local club on their young people's camp project at Roblin's Lake and trusted they would take a long term viewpoint of the results of their work.

Kiwanian Harold Bateman introduced the speaker with club appreciation being capably expressed by Taylor Franklin; financial report of the recent carnival was read by Secretary Ross Stiver with Chairman of Ways and Means, Herb Reed, expressing appreciation to members for their co-operation in assisting to make the carnival a success. President Jack McVeigh presided over the meeting with Leo Riggs again present as pianist; Harold Carruthers as song leader and George Forhan as Sergeant at Arms.

Salvoes from the Haida shattered the submarine's conning tower.

The Germans then swarmed on deck and jumped oevr the sides. At this, Cmdr. H. G. De Wolf of Bedford, N.S., skipper of the Haida and in over-all command of the two Tribals, ordered cease fire and minutes later the submarine's stern lifted and she slipped under the sea.

As the Haida—perhaps the best known of Canada's destroyers because of her numerous recent actions—entered her base port ship after ship flashed signals of congratulation. From every little tug and harbor craft came waves and cheers.

The Haida, noted for her victories off the French coast, has a fighting record which few other Allied destroyers in those waters can equal. She started her war against the German navy last April when in company with H.M.C.S. Athabaskan she began picking off Elbing class destroyers attempting to run the Channel blockade.

She was with the Athabaskan when that vessel was blown up in April, and avenged the loss by getting two of the enemy. Her toughest battle came early in June when with her sister ship H.M.C.S. Huron she sank two German destroyers of the Roeder class, more heavily armed and speedier than the Canadian Tribals.

This action blazed for hours and was described by naval observers as the hottest fight that Canadian ships ever fought.

In July she fattened her score of kills when with two Allied destroyers she pounced on a small force of German ships off the French coast, sank two and left a third sinking.

Battle of France Recalls Memories

By G. H. C.

Veterans of the last Great War are turning to their newspapers in these days with more than average interest is the war news. For with the rapid advance of the Allied forces in France geographical names now hold a familiar ring for the 1914-18 "swaddy." Grizzled sparse-thatched "old sweats" lay, down their pipes and turn reminiscent eyes ceilingward when such names as Amiens, Arras, the Somme, Rouen, Le Havre, Abbeville, Albert, Bapaume stare at them from the headlines. Memory flits across a chasm of twenty-five years and pictures for them the white chalk of the Somme craters; the Leaning Virgin of Albert, the Mud of Death that was Passchaendale; the Menin Road; immortal Vimy; the coal-dust of Lens; Festubert; La Bassee with its winding streets; Ploegsteerte ("Plugstreet"); Neuve Eglise; the giant crater that was Messines; St. Julien, the never-to-be-forgotten April of 1915, when gas-choked French Colonials, gave way before the death-clouds of chlorine vapor and where "The Canadians saved the situation"; Armentieres, home of the mythically famous "Mademoiselle"; Ypres, (Wipers) pockmarked with craters of "Jack Johnsons" (17-inch shells), where dead horses lay for days, legs stabbing the air at absurd angles; Poperinghe and Vlamertinghe (two refugee mademoiselles from Lille sold cached champagne for two francs the litre); Ouderdom, La Clyte, Bailleul ('Urry up, Miss, pom de tare fritz, and bocoo be-ayer); the Pas de Calais; "Shrapnel Corner" (the mules of Ally Sloper's Cavalry, decided to join the union and refused to go farther); Boulogne, the camp on the hill and the Rue de Gallienne; spires of tiny churches gleaming rapier-like in the sun of the Somme valley; white villages half-buried in distant fields of waving golden wheat; the Chateau Belge, with its graceful white swans, untouched in four years of war; Zillibeke, and the Brasserie; The Bund and its dugouts; voracious rats, as big as cats, leering sadistically from the corner of the paraphet; lone rooms in ruined houses, labelled "Estaminet" where one drank biere Belgique, or if the crown and anchor experts left one with enough francs, a spot of cognac; duck-walks of bully beef along which the runner taggered with the issue of S.R.D.; black-leggingеd sergeants of the Army Service Corps, shined and shone, sitting in their "offices" near the dumps; overhead Bristol fighters spinning dizzily around cumbersome tri-planed "Jennies" at the breakneck speed of ninety miles per hour while a wondering army gazed in awe; horse-lines; boots and saddles; plum and apple jam, ("Whenner we gonna get strorbry"); "Mr. McConachie" in tins, s(c)ent from Heaven; those Belgian horses, controlled with one rein and "Yitoo"; Belgian "soldats" and their "Carts Postales"; French trumpeters, the best in the world, bar none; French mademoiselles from Paree, the best is the world (then), bar?, yes; French urchins shouting "Beesqueet," and fighting for hardtack when it was thrown them; Leaves; London in the smoke and Paree in the Spring; the leave train from Dover to Victoria Station; stoical Tommies returning to the front with a "Cheerio muvver, keep yer chin up, it wont be so b....long nah"; the "crack" train from Boulogne "up the line," roaring around corners at four miles an hour while "Belgiques." French and others "parley-vooed" ribald stories; Fritz naval gun reception committee at the railhead; the first tanks, labelled by an army wag, "The Swiss Navy," lumbering up the Albert-Bapaume road under cover of darkness; La Boiselle, Fricourt, Pozieres and the sunken road at Courcellette ("The Two-Two Battalion, she's here, by Gar"); the Hindenburg line; then April, 1918; "Our backs are to the wall"; the fury of the German advance; the turn of the tide; entry into Mons; and the Armistice.

Soldier sons, returning from the present war, may have the "old man" verbally tied up when speaking of the North African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns, but the old boy will be able to meet them on, at least, some common ground, if the 'young squirts" start recalling experiences in France. They will be able to sing together. through experience that stirring ditty of the British Army, of the old days:-

"We turned them on the Marne
We beat 'em on the Aisne,
We gave 'em hell, at Neuve Chapelle,
And 'ere we are again."

Bethel Church Holds Memorial Service For Three Boys Who Die in Service

Rawdon, (Special.)—Bethel United church on the Rawdon circuit was the scene of a very impressive memorial service on Sunday evening when relatives and friends gathered to pay their last tribute of respect to three boys who had given their lives in the cause of Freedom. The edifice was filled to the doors with seating capacity at a premium. Members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment (R) under command of Lt.-Col. A. V. Yates formed a guard of honor at the entrance as the mourners filed in the church and also on their departure and these men stood throughout the service.

The pulpit, altar, piano and choir loft were draped with Union Jacks and the flags of France, Belgium and New Zealand were used very effectively as a cornerpiece.

Bouquets of asters, gladioli and Summer blooms together with several pots of ferns adorned the church.

Portraits of the three boys and the Honor Roll of Bethel United Church were placed on the Communion Table beside a cross dotted with red poppies.

The pulpit was flanked by two artificial wreaths. The pastor and his wife arranged the church for this occasion.

The service was held for Pte. Edward Kirkey, Gunner George Dunkley and Sergeant Earl Phillips who gave their all for King and country.

Mrs. Harold Elliott, A.T.C.M., presided at the piano and the gowned choir sang a prayer hymn, "These Things Shall be". Mrs. Thomas Searles rendered a vocal selection "Jesus Remembers when the World Forgets".

The pastor Rev. T. F. Townsend, B.A., B.D., officiated and chose his text in the Book of Hebrews 9:26, using the words "Christ put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself".

His address will long be remembered by those privileged to be present as he told of the vast sacrifices made by these three young men and a host of others, "who have made the supreme sacrifice that we folk here may enjoy our freedom. It is up to us the folks here in Canada to dedicate our lives to the creation of a peaceful world and universal brotherhood, when this struggle is over.

Truly these boys have thrown the torch to others as they gave their lives on the battlefields and Flanders' Fields will always be a poignant memory.

At the conclusion of the service the Last Post was sounded by the H. and P. E. Bugler Pte. E. Brooks, Deloro, with Pte. Earl Fox in charge of the flag. Two minutes' silence was observed and Reveille sounded.

Sgt. Earl D. Phillips was killed in action in the Mediterranean area. He was 24 years of age, and was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Phillips, Carrying Place, and a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Dunkley, of Rawdon. He married Miss Mabel Irene Dunkley, and she with a young daughter, Joan, also four brothers, Norman Phillips, Brighton; Russell, Robert and Leonard Phillips at home and four sisters, Mrs. L. Buck, Trenton; Lulu, Hazel and Betty Phillips, at home, survive.

Sgt. Phillips took his basic training in Canada and was stationed at Trenton. He then enlisted in the special service force and underwent further military training in the United States. He was reported missing on December 3rd., 1943, in the Mediterranean area and officially reported dead in July, 1944.

Pte. Edward Kirkey was killed in action in Italy on Wednesday, May 17. He was in his 22nd year and was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kirkey, Rawdon. He was a member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and went overseas early this year. He has three brothers serving in the armed forces: Cpl. Lorne Kirkey, England; Gnr. James Kirkey, Italy, and Pte. Earl Kirkey, Camp Borden, also Samuel Kirkey, Belleville; Murney Kirkey, Rawdon, and five sisters, Katherine, Mabel, Myrtle, Betha and Norma.

VENGEFUL NAZIS

Occupants Mowed Down.

At a given command the Germans suddenly opened fire with machine-guns, rifles and machine-pistols on all the huddled groups.

Weapons were thrust into windows and the occupants of the structures were mowed down.

The Germans mounted improvised ladders to fire through the church windows at the women and children packed there.

The cracking of the shots was accompanied by the terrified screams of women and children, the helpless crying of babies and the groans of wounded men.

Then the Germans hurled phosphorous grenades through the windows and soon the whole village was a huge bonfire.

There are bloodstains on the walls and floors of the wrecked church, school and houses. All the bodies later were collected and buried in common graves.

Crucifixes Melted.

The phosphorous grenades generated such heat that crucifixes and other metal fixtures of the church melted and poured in rivulets over the floor, then hardened. The altars are black and chipped.

These details came from the seven survivors who are sane. Their accounts were gathered by Commandant Marchel, chief of the French Forces of the Interior of the Limoges region and supported by photos taken of the bodies before burial.

"Why did the Germans do it?" I asked him.

"No reason," he replied.

Marchel said reports published abroad that the burning was in reprisal for the killing of four German soldiers in the town were incorrect.

There were no Germans killed there and no Maquis activity in that area, he said.

CANADIANS PUSH PATROLS THRU TO STRAITS OF DOVER

Other Units Closing in on Boulogne Within Mile of Port

DELIVER ULTIMATUM

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army on the French Channel Coast, Sept. 6.—(CP Cable)—The Canadians today pushed patrols through to the Straits of Dover on both sides of Calais, and Canadian units closing in on Boulogne were within a mile of that port.

Polish troops fighting with the Canadians under command of Lt.-Gen. Crerar moved strong forces of armor and infantry into the outskirts of St. Omer, 28 miles east of Boulogne.

British 2nd Army troops on the Canadians' right flank are approaching the Netherlands border, and an estimated 50,000 Germans remain in the narrow coastal belt between the Boulogne-Calais-St. Omer area and the Schelde River, 75 miles east and just inside the Netherlands frontier.

British infantry of the 1st Canadian army already is probing the outer defences of Le Havre, north and east of the city.

Today another ultimatum will be delivered to the German commander of the Le Havre garrison.

A Canadian armored car unit, which has done excellent work in the rapid drive from the Seine was first into the Calais area.

5,000 Nazis in Boulogne.

There is no indication yet of the type of opposition met by these forward troops, but there are believed to be 5,000 Germans in Boulogne and resistance to the Canadian advance on that port is stiffening.

German artillery in Boulogne was in action last night, trying to shoot up roads leading to the port. Canadian tanks and infantry, however, edged closer from the south and east and now occupy several hills in the vicinity.

For Polish troops on the outskirts of St. Omer, within 15 miles of the Belgian border, the immediate obstacle is the crossing of the Aire Canal and the network of small streams in the St. Omer area. This is an engineering problem, and Polish-Canadian supply men are working around the clock to keep the advance rolling.

There are also many streams in the Calais area and between Calais and Dunkerque that must be bridged for the Germans have blown many of the regular bridges.

Only One Escape Route.

Of the estimated 50,000 Germans in this area, 30,000 are believed still organized in effective fighting units, with the remainder wandering about aimlessly. Their lone possibility of escaping the trap is to cross the Scheldt, which is from three to six miles wie.

Barges could be used, and efforts to escape by them likely will be made behind a rear-guard action which may be fought by three coastal divisions which were not engaged in the earlier fighting in Normandy.

The action likely will be fought along the Albert Canal.

London Enjoys Quiet Night From Flying Bombs

London, Sept. 6 —(CP)— As London enjoyed a quiet night—the fifth in a row broken only by one brief flurry of flying bombs early yesterday—the Germans hinted they would turn their "V-1" robots against Allied armies on the continent now that most of the buzz-bomb coast has been lost to Canadian and British armies.

Conceding that the flying bombs "may not be launched against England with the same regularity as hitherto," a Nazi radio commentator declared: "The V-1 can be employed against other targets on the European continent. The weapon will lose nothing of its importance."

Londoners, while naturally suspicious of the Nazis, are about ready to hail their own "liberation"—the freedom from four years of bombing.

While the British Government has warned the thousands who left London at the height of the robot raids to stay where they are for a while anyway, railroads report a growing trickle of returning evacuees—mostly adults.

Any mass return would lead to a serious housing problem. In addition to the thousands of homes blasted so badly they are uninhabitable, thousands of others are in such bad condition that only one or two rooms are livable.

A robot bomb struck the home of Queen Wilhelmina recently but she escaped injury. One of the house staff was killed and the damage was so great that The Netherlands ruler moved to another residence about 25 miles away.

EARLY FALL PREDICTED

Gananoque, Sept. 6-(CP)-Despite warm weather this week, there are indications of an early fall and cold weather. A number of flocks of wild geese were seen flying over this town in a southerly direction. Authorities on such happenings claim that this is a sure sign of an early Fall and cold weather.

Dieppe Raid Two Years Ago Was Big Surprise to Nazis

By ROSS MUNRO

Dieppe, Sept. 6 (CP)—The raid on Dieppe more than two years ago by the 2nd Canadian Division was a complete surprise to the Germans, according to French civilians who were in Dieppe at the time.

There was unanimous agreement among people to whom I talked today that the German garrison had no inkling that the raid was going to be made and that no general alarm was sounded until landing craft touched down on the main beach before the town. After the raid there was some suggestion that the Germans might have been waiting for the Canadians, but this does not now appear to have been the case.

Even the interception by German surface craft of the convoys carrying the Royal Regiment and British Commandos across the Channel to Berneval, east of Dieppe, does not seem to have given them the tip-off that they were to be attacked.

This is one of the big mysteries of the Dieppe raid, and although information available from French people here is not the final word these people insist that the Germans were not manning all defences in anticipation of a sea-borne attack.

New Mayor Emphatic

The new mayor of Dieppe, who was a member of the underground here and was on A.R.P. duty near the Esplanade during the raid, shook his head emphatically when I asked him if the Germans knew in advance of the attack. He said a normal guard of 100 soldiers was maintained every night along the Dieppe Esplanade. This consisted of a few score sentries who patrolled the sea front, with the rest in dug-outs, pillboxes and fortified houses along the front.

The whole guard did not stay awake at night, but dressed and equipped, dozed in their defence positions. There was no standing guard at Pourville, a mile west of Dieppe, where the South Saskatchewan Regiment made a successful landing, but there were guards at Puits, a mile east of Dieppe, where the Royals suffered heavily.

The total garrison at Dieppe numbered about 3,000 Germans, including infantry and navy personnel. The Germans also armed the local Todt organization workers. There was no estimate of their numbers.

Allied planes which came over the town to bomb gun positions just before the pre-dawn landing awakened many civilians and Germans in Dieppe and a good many went to shelters to wait for the raid to pass. Nobody had the least idea that the bombing presaged a landing, the mayor said. They thought it was just another air attack.

The mayor was A.R.P. chief of shelter just 50 yards from the Casino and he was on duty there when naval gunfire opened up just before dawn. He said he thought something strange was happening, and so did the Germans.

No General Alarm Given.

No general alarm appears to have been given until landing craft carrying the Essex Scottish and the Royal Highland Light Infantry touched down on the main beach shortly after the destroyers began shelling. When the sentries spotted the Canadians racing over the beach the alarm was sounded and dugouts began to fire along fixed lines which cut across the beach and esplanade.

Five hundred guards hastily took up positions and the rest of the garrison turned out. "There was a terrible lot of confusion and for several hours the Germans did not know what was happening", the mayor said. "They did a lot of firing, but there was no sort of order in the town. Guns on the headlands on either side of the beach were in action and they seemed to be the worst thing for the Canadians as they covered the beach.

'All morning the Germans were very frantic. I saw officers and men bolt and run. There was complete panic in some streets".

The mayor said he saw several Canadian tanks moving on the western side of the esplanade and one got to the town, half of which is behind the Casino.

He did not see any tanks break right into the town itself. However, Canadian infantry did get over the open space from the Casino to the streets of the town and fought their way inland for two blocks to the Church of St. Remy, where there was fierce fighting. This sector is close to the centre of the town.

The mayor said he talked to five Canadians near the church during the fight and they gave him cigarets. Canadians also got into the streets of Dieppe further east, toward the harbor.

German Losses High.

George Guibon, president of the Dieppe Historical Society, agreed with the mayor that the raid was a surprise.

"If more troops had been landed late in the morning when the raid was over, you could have gone far inland, for the Germans were ready to quit, I think," he said. "They were very badly shaken and their casualties were high. I believe their casualties in dead and wounded were just as high as the Canadians', if not higher. And the Germans were behind walls and in fortified houses. It took great courage to attack them."

M. Guibon said that at Puits a German force of several hundred had been awakened by the guard and were manning machine guns on the cliffs before the Royals got ashore. (Because of the interception at sea the Royals were somewhat later than planned.)

But at Pourville, Guibon said, the Canadians caught the Germans in their beds. There was no guard there, and it was not until after the landing was made by the South Saskatchewan Regiment right on time that machine gunners went into action.

A United States woman in Dieppe, whose name cannot be disclosed, said it was not until 4 o'clock in the afternoon that German reinforcements began coming up the roads from Rouen and Amiens.

Blankets Thrown to Canadians.

The proprietor of the Hotel de Rouen, behind a line of fortified houses on the esplanade near the Casino, said there was street fighting around his hotel. The Germans ran up and down the streets shouting wildly and firing at everything that moved.

He had Germans billeted at his hotel, and said they went to bed as usual on the night before the raid. He confirmed the heavy street fighting around the Church of St. Remy. Bullet holes in buildings near the church still may be seen.

After the raid the Germans marched lines of Canadian prisoners through the streets in their bare feet. Many of the Canadians were almost naked, and French people threw them blankets and shoes. Any who did were either struck by the German guards or later arrested.

The Germans buried their own dead, but the people of Dieppe buried the Canadians in the centre of the town.

The Salient Facts

Everyone in Dieppe will talk freely of the raid and although some of the stories are contradictory these salient facts stand out:

It was a surprise; the Germans were in a state nearly approaching panic; they nearly folded later in the morning; and their casualties were as high as the Canadians' in killed and wounded.

As a result of the Dieppe raid the Germans launched an intensive program of defence along the Dieppe sector, M. Guibon told me. I drove him along the coast from Dieppe to Pourville, which had been a banned area ever since the day after the raid, and he gasped at the sight of the new fortifications along the cliff top on that mile stretch of coast.

Guns in casements cover the approaches from the sea completely. This was without doubt genuine Atlantic Wall construction and it is formidable. The only mistake the Germans made was in not sighting any guns inland from Dieppe as well. They could not defend Dieppe if an attack were made from the south, as the 2nd Canadian Division attacked. The results were that the whole position had to be abandoned without a shot being fired.

2 Rochester Men Get 45 lbs. Bass In Three Hours

Trenton, Sept. 5—Nearly forty-five pounds of bass was the result of three hours fishing by two Rochester fishermen in West Lake near Bloomfield in Prince Edward County on Sunday afternoon last. With their full quota of twelve small-mouth black bass Bert Mahn and Joseph Norman both of Rochester, N.Y., called it a day after only three hours on the water. The largest of the twelve weighed four and a half pounds while several others registered four or more. Swamp paper-shelled crawfish, brought all the way from Rochester, was the bait used by these two who have fished in West Lake over a period of twenty years. Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Drew, R.R. No. 1 Picton, they recalled how Mrs. Drew had landed a fifteen-pound-pike from the same waters. The lake is but a small one with several shaded nooks where bass and pike lurk in numbers although not always eager to take local bait.

W.C.A. Report

Held in the board room of Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday, the monthly meeting of the Women's Christian Association, who own and operate the hospital and the Home for the Aged, heard reports from chairmen of its various committees. The meeting was held under the chairmanship of Mrs. Reg. Abrams.

Following the reports, Mrs. Harry Thompson was delegated as lady-on-duty at the Home for the Aged for the month of September. Donations to the Home for the month of June included: — Mrs. (Dr.) Marshall, bacon dripping; Boys' Scouts Club, sandwiches, cake; Mrs. Terence Dolan, four bricks of ice cream; Tabernacle Church, box of wieners and buns; Cyril Major, ice cream for all inmates; Miss M. Bradford, man's sweater. The monthly religious service was conducted on the first Sunday by the Salvation Army.

For July—Mrs. Draycott, ice cream and cake for all inmates; Kiwanis Club, sliced bread; Mrs. (Dr.) Marshall, bacon and dripping; Mrs. Purdy, bacon and dripping; Ridley Grocery, three dozen saucers. The Salvation Army conducted special services on the first Sunday of this month.

For August—Blood Donor Clinic, sliced bread; Harry Bell, pickled pork for all inmates; Mrs. Harry Thompson, watermelon for all inmates.

BROWN BEAR CHASED

Temiskaming, Sept. 6—(CP—The out-of-town students recently had some fun when they discovered a large brown bear behind the high school dormitory. They chased the animal with every imaginable weapon ranging from knives and forks to pike poles and chairs. The bear fled for its life.

$6,537.65 Profit Made by Kiwanis Club at Carnival

A complete financial report of the Kiwanis carnival two weeks ago was presented at the regular luncheon meeting of the club on Tuesday showing net proceeds of the four-day activities to be $6,537.65. This included the net proceeds of the bond draw, which swelled the total by $2,212.

The report showed that this year's carnival was one of the most successful financially ever to be staged by the local Kiwanis club. In comparison with former years, it was shown the net proceeds this year more than doubled those of the past two years. In 1942 net proceeds were $3,213 while last year the carnival netted $2,688.

Expressing appreciation to members of the club for the manner in which they worked to assure the success of the carnival project, President Jack McVeigh indicated, that the club's newest project, that of establishing the children's camp at Roblin's lake, had proven an incentive to members. The club will expend in the neighborhood of $10,000 in fitting of the camp for use next summer and a large percentage of the funds realized through the carnival will be utilized for this purpose, it was intimated.

Shortage Forces Dealers To Reduce Ice Deliveries

Housewives, who array their crowning glory in pigtails, curlers and other wave-coaxing gadgets, won't have to hide in the dining room during the early morning hours, in the future.

For the ice-man, that pick-armed "harbinger of the dawn" who invaded milady's early morn sanctum, the kitchen, won't call around so often. In fact, his visits have been restricted to three times a week.

Not because the legendary vendor of ice is averse to early morning social amenities, but rather a shortage of that commodity has made it necessary for local ice-dealers to place it on a more or less rationing basis.

Stocks in the city have been heavily depleted during the past two months. This is due, dealers say, to not only the increase of transient population, but the inability on the part of householders, old and new to procure electrical refrigeration.

Adding to this is the fact that steady users of ice, have, for some reason or other, demanded larger quantities than in former years.

One prominent dealer stated that his stock of local ice disappeared some time ago, and he has since been dependent on outside markets for his supplies. As long as this market is available, there will be no local shortage.

However, reports from outside centres to the effect that ice is running low, may have something to do with the local situation. If outside supplies are cut off, then Belleville will do without iced tea and coffee, and the "frost" on tall glasses.

Jean Dickenson Sings to Airmen And Guests at Mohawk Air Station

Twenty members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club, their wives, and a large number of young ladies, members of the Hostess Club here thrilled to the marvellous voice of Miss Jean Dickenson, radio "Song-bird of the Air," at the official opening of the new recreational hall at No. 1 Instrument Flying School, Mohawk Air Station, near Deseronto, last night.

The glamorous soprano, heard weekly on a well-known international airwave program, was generous to the extreme with her vocal accomplishment singing no less than ten numbers. Highlighting her program was the "Ave Maria," "Kiss Me Again" and favorite selections from Strauss.

An appreciative audience of station personnel and civilian guests filled the new hall, to hear Miss Dickenson and other features of the evening program.

Miss Dickenson and other guests were entertained following the program in the officers' mess where Squadron Leader McLeod, commanding officer of the station and his staff were hosts at a social get-together and refreshments. The attractive singer mingled freely with members of her audience chatting and taking part in general social amenities.

The evening was climaxed with a dance in the new hall.

Inducted as Honorary Member of Mohawk Tribe.

During the evening Miss Dickenson was inducted as an honorary member of the Mohawk tribe. The induction ceremony was conducted by Chief Clifford Maracle and his council. Miss Dickenson's Indian name is Kawesnehawe, which translated means "Voice of the Air."

The ceremony was witnessed by more than 2,000 airmen.

PEACE COMMITTEE FORMED

St. Thomas, Sept. 6-(CP)-St. Thomas city council last night appointed a committee of four to prepare plans for a "peace celebration" to be held here when the war between the United Nations and Germany comes to an end.

Gum-Dipped TIRES

THE effects of atmospheric conditions on the rusting of ordinary steel is well known to all. By the same chemical action, the oxygen of the air causes deterioration of rubber compounds.

Just as the addition of proper alloying metals to ordinary steel prevents rust and corrosion, so does the addition of Firestone's Vitalin to ordinary rubber—synthetic or natural—prevent corrosion due to oxidation or from sunlight.

But this isn't the only advantage of Vitamic Rubber. Being fortified with Vitalin, Firestone tires are greatly improved in toughness, durability and heat resistance. And these all add up to even longer life and mileage. When you obtain your Tire Ration Certificate, insist on having Firestone Vitamic Rubber tires.

Now Is the Time

There is no time like the present—and there is no finer present for the boy overseas than that Christmas parcel from home. Summer days are lingering and the bright Autumnal colors are yet to scarlet-and-gold the trees. It is all very well to say "there is plenty of time" but that well-known purloiner of minutes, hours, days and months, procrastination, will get in his nefarious work if immediate attention is not paid to that all-important task of getting the Yuletide goodies on the way to Jack and Jill overseas.

The Post Office has warned that if parcels are not on the way soon, they will not be delivered on or just before Christmas. Mailing deadline for the United Kingdom and France is October 25th—the Middle East, October 5th and for the Central Mediterranean, October 10th.

With events rapidly changing in the different theatres of war, these dates are subject to alteration. Battle positions are constantly moving, always away from distribution bases. Shipping is being taxed to the utmost, with more bottoms needed to transport munitions to the hungry maw of the battle lines in France and Italy, More ships are needed to build up the tremendous offensive stores in the Pacific areas.

So it would be a good idea to get the parcels off well ahead of the deadlines. That boy or girl will be keenly disappointed if his or her name is not called out when "Mail" shrills through the hangar, army camp, or aboard ship. Keep them smiling. Mail Early.

New Uses for Wood

Although almost 300 species of trees are found in Canada, only about 30 to 35 are used commercially. Some are not used because they are too soft, or weak, or crush or dent too easily, are not durable, or present working, turning or finishing difficulties. But, according to the Canadian Industries Limited magazine, C-I-L Oval, a new process will bring many of these into the range of usefulness. In fact, it is said, perhaps no chemical discovery made during the past five years offers greater potential benefit to the Dominion than that announced recently, namely, a process for the transmutation of wood. Simple impregnation with comparatively abundant and inexpensive chemicals synthetized from coal, water, and air, transforms ordinary wood, the oldest material used by man, into substances as different from the original as steel is from iron. The process reconstitutes wood to order. It enables industry to create in a few days wood harder than ebony, which nature takes a century or more to grow.

Wood now permitted to go to waste, or used only for fuel, can be imbued with qualities, fitting it for use in furniture, home construction, or boat-building. Poplar becomes harder than hard maple, which in turn can be made harder than ebony. The compressive strength of wood is so increased and other properties are imparted to such an extent that the result is actually no longer natural wood, but a new material which may be termed "'transmuted wood." The process makes wood markedly harder, stronger, stiffer, and more durable. It eliminates its natural tendency to swell, shrink, or warp with changes of humidity, and prevents the grain from rising when moistened. It enables more available, near-at-hand, cheaper species of woods to compete in fields hitherto open only to scarcer ,costlier varieties from afar.

Furniture made of the transmuted wood can be shipped throughout the world, to the dry climate of Canada's prairies or to the humid jungles of Central America, with assurance that drawers and doors will continue to operate smoothly and remain close fitting under all temperature or humidity conditions. Color may be imparted permanently throughout the wood by mixing a dye with the impregnating chemicals. Light-colored pine can take on the hues of cherry, the glamor of rosewood, or the depth of mahogany, or it may be colored in brilliant reds, greens, or purples.

Veneers sufficiently treated become self-bonding. They require no adhesive to be formed into plywoods, since heat and pressure fuse the product into a hard, dense substance. Even sawdust, shavings, and similar wood wastes may be molded into articles, and dyes or pigments incorporated. Other cellurosic and fibrous products, including cotton, farm wastes, paper, leather, also lend themselves to the treatment. Likewise it is applicable to bamboo and similar cane and fibre materials.

With the vast forest resources of the Dominion, and the numerous and important wood-using industries, the process can be employed to great advantage in the manufacture of veneers and plywoods, flooring, furniture, textile and other machinery parts, sports goods, musical instruments; tool, knife and kitchen utensil handles; millwork; screen, window, and door sashings; rollers, wooden heels, shoe lasts, tanks, sanitary ware, serving trays, laundry and chemical equipment, agricultural implement parts, and scores of other items.

The postwar application of the transmutation process seem to be virtually unlimited, and Canadian lumbermen and wood users are displaying keen interest in the new process.

Soviet Rescue

(U.S.S.R. Bulletin)

When Pilot Sery's 'plane was shot down in an operation over the Narva Gulf, Soviet scouts sighted the flyer in a rubber boat. With his left arm badly burned Sery was attempting to row out to sea with his right hand, but the current forced him toward the enemy coast.

A hydroplane was sent to his rescue, but rough seas made it impossible to set the 'plane down. Cutters directed by radio from a 'plane then sailed out into the Gulf. Meanwhile Sery's raft was driven nearer the enemy shore.

The Germans spotted and opened heavy fire on the Soviet cutters and 'planes. Ilyushin Stormoviks took off to silence the enemy battery, while 'planes laid a smoke screen between shore and raft.

When Sery was less than 400 metres from the coast, an enemy submarine surfaced about 100 metres off, but at sight of the approaching cutters hastily submerged. The Baltic sailors succeeded in reaching Sery and took him aboard, safely reaching their home base.

War on the Juke Boxes

(New York Herald Tribune)

From time to time we have had occasion to disagree with Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, though we have always admired his eloquence, with, imagination and good intentions.

At last the Senator has taken a stand on an issue—an issue so important to the American social scene—in such forthright terms that we must agree with him wholeheartedly. The Senator is against juke boxes. He doesn't merely want to reform juke boxes, or regulate them. He would junk them all.

Senator Pepper, like ourselves, believes in a high degree of liberty, and it may be that nothing can be done about the juke box. But the right to be let alone, the right to be free of dreadful noises—surely, that is something. Good luck to the Senator in his brave crusade.

Luck Pieces

(The London Times)

There is today an acute shortage of five-shilling pieces.

The chief demand has come from American soldiers stationed over here, who see them as souvenirs.

Americans are very fond of their "pocket piece" or lucky coin, although some people in England, particularly waiters and theatrical employees, regard the coin as unlucky.

If women really dressed to please, the bills would be considerably lower.

SAVAGE AND CULTURED

Can savag'ry so long a while
Be hidden by a toothy smile,
And yellow fangs which tear and bite
Be covered under lips polite?
Does culture ask no more than these:
"So sorry!" and "Excuse, sir, please."

Did Tojo, who has wrecked Japan,
Think raiment proved the gentleman;
That swallow-tails and high silk hats,
And trousers striped and pearl gray spats,
With little tricks of outer grace,
Could civilize a savage race?

Did Tojo think that stealth, somehow,
Could prosper long as knowing how;
That sham and cunning and pretense
Could triumph over better sense,
And Japs could play at being smart
And still be savages at heart?

Poor Tojo, who has put his race,
As he would say it: "Out of face,"
Knows, now that he is tossed aside,
That savag'ry is hard to hide,
And culture deeper lies than these:
"So sorry!" and "Excuse, sir, please."

Pyle Speaks Up for Medical Aidmen Who Are in Service in Front Line

(By ERNIE PYLE)

In France —(by wireless)— The last time I was with the front-line medics—a battalion detachment in the Fourth Division—they showed me a piece in The Stars and Stripes about Congress passing the new $10-a-month pay increase for soldiers holding the combat infantryman's badge.

This combat infantry badge is a proud thing, a mark of great distinction, a sign on a man's chest to show that he has been through the mill. The medical aidmen were feeling badly because the piece said they were not eligible for the badge.

Their captain asked me what I thought, and so did some of the enlisted aidmen. And I could tell them truthfully that my feelings agreed with theirs. They should have it. And I'm sure any combat infantryman would tell you the same thing.

Praise for the medics has been unanimous ever since this war started. And just as proof of what they go through, take this one detachment of battalion medics that I was with.

They were 31 men and two officers. And in one seven-week period of combat in Normandy this summer they lost nine men killed and ten wounded. A total of 19 out of 33 men — a casualty ratio of nearly 60 per cent in seven weeks.

As one aidman said, probably they have been excluded because they are technically noncombatants and don't carry arms. But he suggested that if this was true they could still be given a badge with some distinctive medical marking on it, to set them off from medical aidmen who don't work right in the lines.

So I would like to propose to Congress or the War Department or whoever handles such things that the ruling be altered to include medical aidmen in battalion detachments and on forward.

They are the ones who work under fire. Medics attached to regiments and to hospitals farther back do wonderful work too, of course, and are sometimes under shellfire. But they are seldom right out on the battlefield. So I think it would be fair to include only the medics who work from battalion on forward.

I have an idea the original ruling was made merely through a misunderstanding, and that there would be no objection to correcting it.

You must hear about my new stove. You may remember that last winter in Italy we mentioned how practical and wonderful the little Coleman gasoline stove was for soldiers in the field. Well, that remark had repercussions.

It seems the employees of the Coleman Stove Co., in Wichita, Kas., were very pleased. It made them feel that they were doing something worth-while for the war. So in appreciation they decided to make up a special stove as a gift for me.

We kept hearing about it over here for weeks, and waited for it the way children wait for Christmas. The other correspondents were as excited about it as I was.

At last it came. Boy, you should see it. It is an exact duplicate of the regular stove, except that this one is all hand-made and chromium-plated and has my name engraved on it, like a loving cup.

One of the correspondents said, "You can't light that, it's too pretty."

An army colonel said, "They should have sent a fireplace and a mantel along for you to exhibit it on."

For days there was a line of soldiers and correspondents at my tent wanting to see the stove. Twice we got ready to light it while photographers took pictures, but at the last minute we couldn't bear to, and put it away. The boys all kidded me and said they bet I never would light it.

Necessity finally drove me to it. That was in Paris. I had given my old stove to a friend, thinking I wouldn't need one any more. But the eating situation in Paris was drastic at first, and we had only the rations we brought with us individually.

So at last I had to break down and light my stove in a hotel room in Paris. Some of the boys had joked and said it was so beautiful it probably wouldn't work. But it did. It practically melted the hotel walls down.

So to all of you who had a hand in the stove, my thanks and gratitude. But if this keeps up I'll have to be careful about admiring in print any Baldwin locomotives or steam-shovels.

POSTAL CARDS

The use of postal cards was first suggested in 1865 by Heinrich von Stephan when he was director of the Royal Prussian Post.

Later Stephan became the first postmaster-general of the German Empire and founded the International Postal Union, which became operative July 1, 1875, and which nearly all countries later joined.

His suggestion about postal cards, however, was not approved by the Prussian postal system, and two years later Dr. Emanuel Hermann of the Vienna Military Academy, apparently without any knowledge of Stephan's proposal, suggested a handy stamped card in a letter published in a Vienna newspaper.

The Austrian post office approved the idea and the first postal cards, called "Korrespondenz Karten" in German, made their appearance in that country in 1869.

In 1870 postal cards, sponsored by Prime Minister William E. Gladstone, made their debut in Great Britain and immediately became popular, nearly 1,000,000 being disposed of the first week they were on sale.

Postal cards were first issued in the United States May 1, 1873, under an act of Congress approved June 6, 1872. The design on these first American postal cards consisted of the head of the Goddess of Liberty. By 1943 the Government Printing Office in Washington was printing one-cent postal cards at the rate of 2,500,000,000 a year.

Just who invented post cards, unstamped picture cards handled by private firms, is not known for certain. One story is that they were created in 1870 by a man named Schwartz in Oldenburg, Germany.

About 1890 Dominique Piazza, of Marseilles, France, published picture cards and he is regarded by his countrymen as the originator of illustrated post cards.

Heinrich Lange, a stationer at Gottingen, Germany, who died in 1932 at the age of 84, sent such cards through the mails about 1890, and they were introduced into the United States a short time afterwards. It is estimated that post cards are now being mailed in the United States at the rate of some 5,000,000 a day.

BULGARIA SUES

"neutrality."

While the meeting was in progress word was received of Moscow's declaration of war, and a foreign ministry official was dispatched immediately to the Soviet legation to request an Armistice, Sofia declared.

No reference was made in the broadcast to Britain or the United States, upon both of which Bulgaria declared war early in the present conflict while remaining technically at peace with Russia.

Sofia said Bulgarian troops strongly resisted them when attacked by German forces, but asserted that the Nazis—by a surprise assault—had captured a number of Bulgarian staff officers and had disarmed some Bulgarian units.

Berlin radio this morning reported bitter fighting between Hungarian and Romanian troops inside the Hungarian border.

Mocow, Sept. 6. (AP) — Foreign advices that Bulgaria has asked the Russian government for an armistice drew no comment here today.

It was generally believed an armistice request would fall on deaf ears in Moscow unless the Bulgarian government accompanies it with a promise to break with the Germans immediately and lend active military assistance to the United Nations.

FOOD FOR BOYS

Roger is about ten years old, a pudgy kid, though not too fat. He is as active, and as strong, as a boy of his age should be. When he calls in the morning to join his playmate Frank, about the same age and general build, to start off on their visit to the swimming pool, he usually contrives to arrive while Frank is at breakfast. Frank is a few months younger and a few pounds lighter than Roger, but while Frank puts away a whale of a meal Roger eyes the food wistfully and makes a noble effort to decline with thanks invitations to have a waffle with butter and maple syrup on it, or some bacon and fried egg. No, sighs the poor kid, I had breakfast just before I left home.

What did Roger have for breakfast?

Oh, a glass of orange juice.

Yes, go on.

Gulp, and a turning of the wistful gaze off toward the blue. That's all. You see, Roger's sister is an aspiring young movie actress and so she knows all about dieting to keep down weight. Roger must not get too fat—she wants him to be nice and slender like the children in the movies. So Roger's breakfast is restricted to a glass of orange juice. On that Roger must get along, with his tearing around, swimming and other activities, until lunch time.

My, my, says Frank's mother, serving Frank his second waffle you must get pretty hungry by noon. What will you have for lunch? Roger opens his lunch-box to show her—a whole orange about the size of a back yard lemon and two fine peaches! Now Frank's lunch box usually contains some sandwiches, cookies and some fresh fruit, and he buys a pint of milk to go with it, if milk is to be had where he is at noon.

It is sad to think of the fate of Roger if his moronic sister persists in keeping the poor kid on the "Hollywood" diet.

I am happy to send readers who ask for it (no clipping will suffice) and inclose a stamped self addressed envelope, the pamphlet "How to Lose Weight." But in no instance, if I know or suspect the correspondent is less than eighteen years of age, will I give any advice or information about reducing. There is but one reasonably safe way a child under eighteen years of age can reduce or even avoid taking on superfluous flesh, and that is under the constant personal care of a responsible physician.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Never Mind the Neighbors

I'm doing my poor best to help people whose doctors have gone into military service. Please confine your queries to your own health or ailment—let the neighbors shift for themselves. And please don't ask me to send this and that to John Doe or Mary Roe—you take care of that on your own time, please.

Eyestrain

Please send me a booklet on how to get rid of pimples and blackheads. My mother has me pull all the gray hairs out of her scalp. Is that a strain on one's eyes?

(K. M.)

Answer — For the pamphlet on Pimples and Blackheads send a stamped envelope bearing your address. Send no clipping—ask for it in writing. It is not a strain on the eyes but won't the treatment eventually produce baldness?

Tonsillectomy and Poliomyelitis

What is there to this rumor of danger in removing tonsils when infantile paralysis is epidemic?

(Mrs. S. A.)

Answer — The virus of infantile paralysis probably enters through lining of nose or throat. There have been several instances of severe (bulbar) poliomyelitis immediately following tonsillectomy. Therefore, in my opinion, it is unwise to subject a patient to the operation if infantile paralysis is occurring in the community.

Milk and Ginger Ale

What is your opinion of a mixture of milk and ginger ale as a beverage for gaining weight—half milk and half ginger ale?

(Mrs. V. P.)

Answer — I believe one would gain twice as fast if the beverage is made of milk exclusively. Send stamped envelope bearing your address, ask for pamphlet "How to Gain Weight."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Like The Proverbial Worm, This Taken-for-Granted Wife Turns

"It took the headline in one of your articles to make me realize how much of a taken-for-granted wife I've been for the past five years. In spite of the clamor of the War Manpower Commission for workers, my husband found no job to his liking. His 'health' was his dearest possession.

"For several years I've had a comfortable old-fashioned boarding house of the type one doesn't find often today. I run it with an excellent negro cook, her husband who is the handyman, and a part-time maid. The house has twenty rooms and five baths. As we're near an important shipyard, I get plenty for my large rooms-with-bath, and rent the hall bedrooms to girls doing secretarial work in the plant.

"Soon there was a sub rosa joke in the house to the effect that my husband always made love to some girl in the hall bedrooms. The guests tried to keep this from me, but I overheard plenty, spoke to my husband about this, and told him I was glad to take care of him and his 'health' but I could not be made ridiculous before the people for whom I kept house.

"He'd weep and promise to be good, but it was the same old story over and over again, with disastrous consequences in one case, in which I had to go deep in my own pocket—for I was sorry for the girl.

"I've always believed, marriage was a fifty-fifty proposition, and if a man falls out as a breadwinner, his wife should do her share. But not while he's able to make love to other women, enjoy poor 'health' and make his wife ridiculous.

"So one bright day when I was feeling judicial, I engaged room and board for my husband at another boarding house, paid his expenses a month in advance, packed his belongings and sent them there. I knew he'd weep and wail, so I left my home with my faithful helpers and went away for a few days. The first night he slept on the studio couch in the parlor, but the boarders all looked at him, and that fussed him up and made him nervous. So the next day he went to his boarding-house, where he is at present.

"I suppose some of the Patient Griseldas who read your column will think I'm a hard woman, but it would be better if some of these doormat wives had a little more independence.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. My husband and I are going to give a cocktail party, and since quite a few of our friends don't drink any alcoholic beverages, what non-alcoholic beverages should we plan to have?

2. I don't want to serve assorted canapes....too much trouble to make them, and I don't think many people care for them anyway. What should we serve with the drinks?

Since we're inviting a large number of guests, I'm going to write the invitations on my Informals. What hour should I name, and how are the invitations worded?

E. B. G.

1. Would you like to serve tea... hot or-and iced? You'll probably be surprised how many people will welcome it, and that's why nowadays so many hostesses give tea-and-cocktail parties. Anyway, as an alternative to cocktails, have a supply of tomato juice, red or yellow, or tomato juice cocktails, or fruit juice, or grape juice to be combined with sparkling water of some kind, or ginger ale or other non-alcoholic favorite.

2. I agree with you about "assorted canapes"! Simplest and appropriate cocktail-accompaniments are nuts, popcorn, potato chips. If you wish, also set out dishes of cheeses and crackers, for guests to "combine." And, for style and taste, arrange a large platter of crisp, uncooked vegetables, to be dipped into the central container of salt.... radish rosebuds, hearts of celery, slivers of carrots, tiny branches of cauliflower. If you have time and artistic inclination, you can arrange these on a large round platter, in the form of a wheel: the hub, the container of salt; the spokes, lines of uncooked peas; and between the spokes, the various other vegetables crisp, delicious, nibbly!

3. Five-thirty or six o'clock is a proper hour....earlier, if you wish, and if it suits the convenience of the majority of your guests. On your invitations you may use the word "Tea," if you plan to serve this pleasant beverage or "Cocktails", or do what many of today's hostesses do..avoid using the word "cocktails" if quite a few of their guests don't drink alcoholic beverages, and instead just invite their friends to "come in about five-thirty." On the inside page of your informals you may write only the information:

Tea (or Cocktails)
Tuesday, September 12
Five-Thirty

or a note:

Dear Kay,

We're asking a few friends to drop in to have a cup of tea or a cocktail and a chat next Friday, September 15th at 5:30. Please make us happy by saying you and Tom will join us!

Affectionately
Betty

Tell Your Employer

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Will you please settle an argument by answering this question: When a customer of your firm gives you a gift (a quite important gift, not, for example, a box of candy) is it necessary for you to tell your employer about it? A says it is, but we all disagree with him.

W. T.

A is right about this. Employers know, and employees should realize, that such "important" gifts are too often given by a customer with the hope that the "gifted" employee will show some favoritism about an order, or will give some special kind of service perhaps not convenient to, or specified by, the employer.

How Do You Speak?

By Mrs. Beeckman

Since we all have to learn to talk, we might as well, as we progress in the knowledge, (1) learn to speak distinctly, (2), train ourselves to pronounce words as they should be pronounced, (3) cultivate a pleasant voice, and (4) a pleasant manner when we speak. The sum-total of these assets is the basis of the first impression we make on people.

It looks as if we're going to do a lot of walking, instead of hopping in the family car or a cab, come winter evenings. Pretty, and perfect to hold the coiffure in place, is a large scarf-hood of black jersey made with clusters of sequin and jet flowers. Matching gloves.

SWACO GIRLS WIN FIRST GAME OF SEMI-FINALS

Defeat Universal Squad 12-11, the Result of Homers in Right Place

SLOPPY FIELDING

Saying it with the sheer power of their extra-base clouting, Tommy Colden's SWACO girl softballers took the first game of the local ladies' softball semi-finals, when they clouted out a close 12-11 decision over Jack Alexander's Universal gals at the Armouries lawn last evening. The series will be continued Thursday evening, when the same two teams resume hostilities. If necessary the third and final game will be played Friday evening.

Indicating just how home runs entered into last evening's contest was the fact, that eleven of the 12 runs manufactured by the winners were scored as the result of home runs. Three times with the bases well populated, batters conked the ball over the Pinnacle Street fence to keep their team in the lead. For the winners round trippers were hit by Colden, Meens, Kelleher and Rowbotham, the last named player accounting for two four base clouts. Her effort was equalled by Helen Tuttle for the losers, who also conked two over the fence, while Allison also got a round tripper.

Against their potency with the bat, however, the winners kicked in with a flock of costly errors, which meant runs for the Universal girls all through the pastime. Four of the loser's first five runs were of the unearned variety, while the same could be said of their last tally which came within one of knotting the count.

Layoff Took Toll.

The long layoff between games apparently took its toll and fans were dished up anything but playoff ball. Ev. Reid had difficulty in finding the plate with frequent walks and wild pitches giving the Universal girls passes to first bases and free transportation around the basepaths. On the other hand Douglas' offerings were to the liking of SWACO bats with a total of 20 hits being counted. Universal nicked Ev. Reid's deliveries for a total of a dozen safeties including three homers. Feature defensive plays were made by Ronsky for the winners and Parker for the losers, both coming through with fine catches.

The teams:

SWACO— Fralick 2b; Colden ss; Meens c; Haslip 3b; Rowbotham 1b; Corneal cf; Ronsky lf; Reid p; and Kelleher rf.

Universal—Corneal 1b; Parker 3b; Allison 2b; Tuttle ss; Reeves lf; Robinson rf; Carswell cf; Douglas p; and Zebedee c.

Score by innings:

SWACO—203 510 1—12 runs.

Universal—232 202 1—11 runs.

Umpires—"Red" Townsend, plate, and A. Ethier, bases.

London, Sept. 6,-(CP)-A pointer towards managerial changes when big-time football resumes under normal conditions came with the announcement that Eddie Hapgood, England international halfback and Arsenal captain, will manage Blackburn Rovers. He will take over when released from his duties as a flying officer in the R.A.F. physical training section.

Several other professional stars whom the war has carried into their 30's will be seeking executive jobs in the post-war soccer boom. Clubs, anxious to revive peacetime traditions after the last "all-clear," will jump at the chance of signing name players as managers to build up war-weakened teams.

A London sports writer, commenting on the appointment of Hapgood said that "it seems rather a pity that the talents of Hapgood have not been secured for London where the famous back was the idol of the Arsenal crowd for so many seasons."

As a matter of record, eight of London's professional clubs are managed by former professionals. There is Jimmy Seed, great Tottenham international and cup fighter, at Charlton Athletic; Billy Birrell, former Raith Rover and Middlesbrough captain, at Stamford Bridge: Fulham's Jack Peart one-time brilliant forward with Sheffield United, Notts County and Derby County; Millwall's Bill Voisey, former Millwall player; Charlie Paynter of West Ham, the team he once played for.

Of the others, George Irwin, once a power in goal for West Bromwich, Reading and Crystal Palace glories; Bill Wright left the Clapton Orient team to manage it, while Dave Mangnall, former Millwall star, is with Queen's Park Rangers.

Announcement of Hapgood's peacetime appointment coincided with a decision of Al Kirchen to become a farmer and meant that at least two of Arsenal's last peacetime team will be missing when normal football is resumed.

They won't be the only two. Five years is a long time in the life of a footballer and some others won't feel like standing the stress and strain of league football.

Kirchen, England international, purchased two dairy farms near Norwich and intends running them himself. He would have played soccer several more seasons but for a knee injury last season which caused his discharge from the R.A.F.

Hapgood played 43 times for England, including wartime internationals, and was captain on 34 occasions. His last international was against Wales at Wembley Stadium last year. He first came into prominence with Kettering Town, was signed by Arsenal in 1927 and gained an immediate place on the first string team. At Blackburn, Hapgood will succeed the late Bob Crompton, another famous back.

St. Louis Cards Plan To Hold Baseball School at Hamilton

(By The Canadian Press)

Final play-off draws in the Ontario Softball Association were announced at Hamilton last night with a best-of-seven series in the senior final between either St. Catharines or Hamilton and Toronto. This series opens Sept. 26 at Toronto.

The Senior B finals are set for Sept. 28 and Trenton, Oshawa, Toronto, St. Catharines, Brantford, Guelph and Hamilton are still eligible. The all-Ontario final is slated to start at Sudbury Oct. 7.

Intermediate A finals will start Sept. 30 with the all-Ontario final starting Oct. 7, and Intermediate B finals are set for Sept. 18.

Youthful baseball aspirants from all parts of Ontario will be able to show their wares at the baseball school which the St. Louis Cardinals plan to hold at Hamilton Sept. 14, 15 and 16. Three coaches will be on hand from the National League club.

Atlas Steels of Welland took the jump on St. Catharines—Merriton Combines last night at Welland, winning the opener of the best-of-seven Niagara district senior championship final 7-0. The O.B.A. in a meeting at Hamilton, however, put the Hamilton Co-ops back in the picture after they had been ousted by the Niagara district league. The district league found Hamilton erred in using five American players in one game, but the O.B.A. upheld Hamilton's appeal and ordered the series between Welland and St. Catharines cancelled. The O.B.A. ruled that Hamilton and Welland must meet for the title with the first game at Hamilton Sept. 7 or 8.

Brantford Stelcos face elimination from the Ontario Intermediate "A" softball playdowns. Last night's game at Guelph was awarded to Guelph Adams in the second innings after outfielder Easto of Brantford objected too strenuously to a baseline decision and was tossed out of the game. The whole Brantford team walked off and the game was awarded to Guelph although tied 1-1 at the time. Guelph won the first game and if the umpire's decision is upheld they will win the series in two straight.

The Toronto Cricket Club's annual invitation tennis tournament ended last night with Henri Rochon of Montreal beating another Montrealer, Bren Macken, in the men's singles final. The score was 6-2, 6-4, 6-3.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Sept. 6 —(CP)— Talk of six-man football being taken up in Winnipeg leads Ken J. Colling of the Belleville Ontario Intelligencer to recall that the game was brought into Belleville about seven years ago. He says Belleville was the first city in Canada to take up the new game, which was first played in Nebraska.

Capt. George Laughlin, now with the Canadian artillery in Italy, physical director at a Belleville school, made a special trip to Nebraska to learn the rules and rudiments of the game. Belleville schools are proud of their record in winning all interscholastic playoffs held in Ontario since the game first caught on, and are hoping now to see a Junior Ontario Rugby Football Union established, with the regular game slated for play, of course.

Colling says Peterborough, Belleville, Lindsay, Oshawa and Cobourg all are interested in a possible junior O.R.F.U., though probably nothing definite will come of it until the war is over, and school athletics gain a new lease on life.

Like Mother?

This is really building for the future. Olive Bend Little, all-star hurler last year with Rockford Peaches of the all-American girls' professional softball league, has a three-months-old daughter who is getting an early start on possible stardom. The Littles, Olive and friend husband, say baby Bobby has received a professional contract, effective 16 years from now, offering a salary of $100 weekly. If pitching prowess is hereditary, the baby has a good chance, since her mother tossed Peaches' only no-hitter last year, and plans to rejoin the club next year for another try.

It will be a sad blow if the urchin doesn't like softball when she grows up! That has happened all too often with children of famous athletes, who tried to make stars of their offspring.

Incidentally:

Herman Besse, who used to serve them up for Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League and Philadelphia Athletics of the American loop, will pay a return visit to Canada when the Sherman Field Flyers of Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, meet London in the International Sandlot Baseball Tournament this month . . . SACO MARINES BEAT CEMENTMEN IN FOURTH GAME

SCORE IS 5-1

Scattering eight hits in a masterful manner Jim Hunter hurled the SACO "Marines" to a 5 to 1 win over the Point Anne "Cementmen" in the fourth game of the City Softball Finals at the Fair Grounds Tuesday evening and evened series at two games each. The fifth and deciding championship game will be played here on Friday evening when the winner will be presented with the Bank of Commerce Trophy, emblematic of the city softball championship.

While Hunter was scattering the eight hits he allowed the Cementmen, Max Peoples' Marines were proving apt opportunists to take full advantage of the Point Anne errors and coupling nine hits with four miscues racked up five runs, that were good enough to win.

The Marines gathered in a brace of runs in the second inning on Carson's double, two errors and Callaghan's one base blow. The winners added two more in the sixth after Wood walked as Latchford and Callaghan doubled, but here again a wild pitch and an error helped in the scoring. Point Anne filled the base paths with one out in the seventh, but could only tally once. Green, Bunton, Hutchings and DeForge all hit, but Green was nicked at the plate while Wood took Whitehead's hard smash in centre to retire the side as the Cementmen were handcuffed by Hunter in the clutch. Stan Luffman, hurling for the losers, got a big hand in the fifth, when he struck out Wardhaugh and Carson with two aboard.

Hunter struck out three and issued but one base on balls, while Luffman whiffed four and passed two via the four ball route.

The lineups:

SACO "Marines": Callaghan 1b, Henn 2b, Wardhaugh 3b, Carson ss, Latchford rf, Wood cf, Barriage lf, Temple c and Hunter p.

Point Anne "Cementmen": Bunton 1b, Whalen 2b, Loft 3b, Whitehead ss, Bennett rf, DeForge cf, Hutchings lf, Green c. and Luffman pitcher.

Softball Siftings.

Max Peoples SACO "Marines" extended the city softball finals to a fifth and final game by beating the Point Anne "Cementmen" 5 to 1 last night....The "Cementmen" were exceedingly generous to the Marines, kicking in with four costly errors, three of which entered into the game's scoring....However, big Jim Hunter scattered eight Point Anne hits in as fine a manner as a pitcher could be expected to and coupled with some timely hitting the Marines earned their victory... Fans are missing some good softball in these city play-offs, which sees the fifth and final played here Friday night....In the Junior O.A.S.A. series the Belleville Squires journey to Toronto on Saturday for the first game of the second round in the provincial junior playdowns.. Actually this series should about windup the junior semi-finals, as there aren't too many junior teams entered in the playdowns this season..In a slugfest Tommy Colden's SWACOS drew first blood in the Ladies' Softball Semi-finals at the Armouries last night winning 12 to 11 over Universals....Eleven of the SWACO runs were the result of circuit blows, Peg Rowbotham getting two, with Colden, Kelleher and Meens adding one each....Helen Tuttle got a brace of round-trippers and Allison one for the losers.

Learn How It's Done.

While the Peterborough Westclox were staging an uphill fight to snatch an overtime victory from the local gals at softball here Saturday afternoon, Secretary Eddie Schrieder was getting some timely tips on the operation of the Peterborough Girls' Softball League from President Russ Kitchen, former Peterborough fireball pitcher in the old C.O.B.L.

It seems in the Liftlock City they operate a junior and senior city loop, the junior girls' group being organized to promote the game among the teen-aged school girls. From this junior league players are advanced to the senior loop as they show promise. For instance Joyce Withers, the Westclox starting pitcher here Saturday, has just turned 15 and a product of their junior loop. Although such a program might be too great for Belleville, some means of promoting interest in the teen-aged class could easily be established. For instance each senior team could be compelled to sign and play three teen-aged girls in at least fifty percent of the league scheduled games. This would help to stimulate interest and also bring along new players each succeeding season.

Remember When.

Big Bill Tilden won his first United States singles tennis title at Forest Hills, N.Y., 24 years ago today, defeating W. M. Johnson 6-1, 1-6, 7-5, 6-3. Tilden reigned as the world's outstanding amateur net star until 1931 when he turned professional.

Most Turbulent.

Looking over the lengthy list of rough-house rasslin' ruffians Promoter Frank Tunney is parading at the Hume Arena tonight the one that stands out as the most turbulent of the pack in Nanjo Singh, the mad Hindu. When Singh goes into the wrestling ring it is with one purpose in mind—winning— no matter how—just winning. Singh will stoop to the lowest principles to gain his end, but then the rest of tonight's badmen, Jerry Monahan, John Katan and Bob Wagner don't boast of too many wrestling scruples. At any rate the Front St. fans seem to think there'll be more action at the local palace de sport tonight than has been their good fortune to see in many months past.

The unfortunate ones are Pierre DeGlane and Frank Sexton, who haven't much of a chance with such a collection of ring ruffians.

Some Are Away.

Jimmie Dykes, manager of the White Sox, doesn't like the steady diet of night ball forced on his club this season and is certain that after the war all clubs will be held to a maximum of seven nocturnal contests a season.

By that time, however, his coach Bing Miller, expects to see night horse racing, which led him to perpetuate a terrible pun at the expense of his boss.

"A truly brilliant idea," retorted Dykes. "They'll go to the stables to get a nag to run and find out he's asleep."

"Then, we'll have plenty of upsets," countered Bing, "because we'll get a lot of sleepers."

Whereupon, Jimmy reminded Miller he was signed to boss the club for two more years, and a repitition of such humor might result in Bing being invited to take a ride.

Baseball Tomorrow.

Baseball is slowly moving into higher brackets in Belleville, now that an adequate playing field has been provided for the game at the Alemite field. Thursday evening the Mountain View "Bombers" will play an exhibition game with Everett Dickey's Alemites with the proceeds to be given to the furtherment of junior baseball in Belleville. This is the same Bomber ball team that played in the R.C.A.F. command playdowns recently and with Ernie Smith on the local hilltop a good baseball game can be assured the local patrons. The Bombers have "Lefty" Dudgeon, a former Vancouver senior pitcher, to toss in against the Belleville boys.

BALTIMORE BACK IN FIRST PLACE OF INT. LEAGUE

Defeats Syracuse in Double Bill on Hitting of Mackiewicz

LEAFS LOSE TO BIRDS

(By The Associated Press).

Baltimore is in first place again in the International League pennant race and the Orioles can thankfully say they rode in on the potent bat of outfielder Felix Mackiewicz.

With the score locked at 3-3 in the eighth inning of the first game with Syracuse last night, Felix blasted a grand slam home run to give the Birds a 7-3 decision. Previously he had poled a homer in the seventh to tie the game as the Birds trailed 3-2.

As the Orioles took the second game, 12-2, Felix gathered four for five to bring his batting total for the night to seven hits and seven runs batted in.

While the Flock was forging back to the lead, Jersey City levelled Newark, 13-4 with a 16-hit offensive.

The Little Giants decided things in the third when they batted across six runs to chase Johnson.

The rejuvenated Montreal Royals whipped Buffalo's ace Walter Wilson, 3-1, and almost tumbled the Bisons from third place. Charley Fuchs pitched all the way for the Royals and together with Eddie Basinski led the attack, each getting three hits.

Toronto lost a chance to gain third place, losing to Rochester, 5-2. Bill Emmerich turned in a neat four-hit pitching job as the Leafs tagged Red Kress for 11 blows. The margin of victory was three runs scored on Toronto errors.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 4

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

Bridge is full of goofy ginks using methods full of kinks. Some believe in antics wild unbecoming to a child. Many get their only thrill dominating their own will. Others find their greatest charm doing all their partners harm.

When you open the bidding, a sensible response is due you from partner. What is the rational reply? That depends on the type of hand he has and the type of opening you used.

An opening of two no-trump shows a hand that contains eight high cards or their equavlent. It admits needing one high card in partner's hand to help make a game in no-trump.

Therefore, such an opening does not force partner to bid if he has nothing. With no high card, partner should pass. But with one high card or better, partner should bid something.

Suppose partner opens with two-no trump when you have this hand:

♠Q 9
♥10 7 6 4
♦9 8 7 5
♣9 8 7

You have nothing but a queen; one measly high card. Partner's opening asks you to bid with one high cards or their equivalent. It have more. It does not ask you to use judgment. Respond with three no-trump.

Maybe you think your hand is too weak. Maybe you think you should pass and warn your partner how weak you are. But don't stop to figure out a new system in the middle of a deal.

Are you worried that your lone high card is not enough to make three no-trump? Then you have no confidence in what your partner says. Because he promises to take eight tricks in his own hand.

If he has eight and you have one, there are nine tricks in your pair. And nine tricks are enough to make a game of three no-trump. At least, it is reasonable to try for a game with them.

There is such a thing as waiting for too much. When you wait for too much, you miss too many boats.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Ride Tenderfoot Ride"

"Henry Aldrich Swings It"

The boys —Henry Aldrich and pal, Dizzy—are cutting up again in their latest comedy, Paramount's "Henry Aldrich Swings it", which is the added comedy at the Capitol Theatre with Jimmy Lydon as always-in-hot-water Henry, and Charles Smith his innocent bystander friend.

It seems that in their latest escapade, Henry organizes a swing band instead of concentrating on the school orchestra's classics. When pretty Marian Hall, the new music teacher, arrives, Henry's interest in the orchestra perks up.

According to all accounts, however Henry's bad time will provide a very good time to his many fans.

On the same program a color cartoon and the 12th Chapter of Captain America will also be shown.

AT THE BELLE

"Dr. Wassell" in Color.

When a great screen masterpiece is brought before the public, there's a pretty good chance that Cecil B. DeMille has had a hand in the production. That's the case with Paramount's "The Story of Dr. Wassell", anyway. This fine Technicolor film is now in its final day at the Belle Theatre and only the highest words of praise were offered in its behalf by appreciative audiences.

Based on true life incidents related by Dr. Croydon M. Wassell and wounded sailors whom he rescued, this stirring drama describes the experiences of this group which were told in part by President Roosevelt in one of his radio speeches. Heading the cast is Gary Cooper as Commander Wassell while Laraine Day plays the role of a nurse in China whose inspiration drove him ever onward.

"The Navy Way" Exciting

Setting a fast pace for comedy, action, and romance, Paramount's "The Navy Way", due next at the Belle Theatre, promises moviegoers a solid evening of entertainment. Describing the training of recruits at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, the film gives a factual account of the various phases undergone by the trainees before graduation. Playing in the featured roles are Bob Lowery, Jean Parker, Bill Henry and Roscoe Karns. All four, it is said, turn in convincing performance; the three males as raw recruits facing their boot training and Miss Parker as a pretty Wave with a pharmacist's rating.

Romance has its moments in the picture, too. The triangle finds Henry and Lowery angling for the hand of Jean Parker with the keen competition reaching one climax afer the other. From the start, Bob Lowery seems destined to win the fair lady's affections but the tide swings to and fro with each succeeding scene. The rivalry promises moments of amusement bringing with it an element of suspense to audiences. "The Navy Way" seems the perfect mixture for an evening's entertainment for theatregoers.

"You Can't Ration Love"

No wonder there's been so much talk about "You Can't Ration Love", the 2nd Paramount feature on the same program. It's Hollywood's first film dealing with the rationing of male college students.

Betty Rhodes and Johnnie Johnston, both well known through their work in previous Paramount musicals, are co-starred with supporting roles handled by Marjorie Weaver, Johnnie "Scat" Davis, Marie Wilson, Bill Edwards and D'Artega and His All-Girl Orchestra. Christine Forsythe, six-foot-two showgirl and Roland Dupree, olmost half her size, contribute to the proceedings with an eccentric dance number said to be slightly terrific. It's a comedy high-mark!

DETROIT TIGERS ONLY TWO GAMES FROM TOP RUNG

Newhouser Did Neat Southpaw Job by Shutting Out Chicago

NO OTHER GAMES

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

Newhouser or Trout pitching and Trout or Newhouser warming up appears to be Detroit's success formula today as the Tigers crept to within two games of the American League-leading Yankees.

On paper the race still was between New York and St. Louis, separated by only a half-game, but Steve O'Neill's Bengals were feared most by the three other contenders.

O'Neill has been criticized by some sources all season for "overworking" the strong-armed pair, but the box scores continued to give the answers on the right side of the ledger.

It was Hal Newhouser's turn to take up the burden last night, and the 23-year-old southpaw did his job with a six-hit shutout over Chicago, 6-0.

With the bulk of the doubleheaders out of the way, it was probable that the pair would do most of the work in the 23 remaining games, eight of which were with Cleveland. Twenty-five games won appeared to be within easy reach of each.

All other contenders were idle yesterday so the Tigers gained a half-length on the field.

Mort Cooper and Bucky Walters blossomed forth as the National League's first 20-game winners as St. Louis Cards and Cincinnati took turns dividing 4-0 shutouts. Cooper outpointed Tom Delacrus on a six-hit effort in the opener, but Walters came back to match Cooper and beat Max Lanier in the finale.

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER 12

"Evidence, of course," was my prompt answer. Then I repeated. "Sergeant, I didn't kill Pamela Keith."

"All right then, Miss Randolph," the Sergeant said. "Youd didn't kill Pamela Keith. Who did it?"

"I don't know." I replied, bristling. "I left my crystal ball at home."

"Miss Randolph. do you know what an accessory after the fact is?"

"Yes," I said. "An accessory after the fact is one who, while not actively participating in the crime, nevertheless helps that person to escape trial or conviction by destroying material evidence, or withholding it."

"Correct," observed the Sergeant. "Now don't you think you'd better come clean?"

I thought I'd better. There were a lot of things I could tell him. About my attack in the basement and that flowered tab on Reginald's sentimental birthday card signed "G"...The conversation I'd overheard between Sandra Keith and young Vic Corliss the night of the murder....The feather I'd found beside the desk in the library which didn't mean anything so far as I'd been able to learn...The letters from Luke Cramer to Gladys, and from Pamela to Earle Pines....Also the startling amount of money in Pines saving account...The picture of Richard Keith Fanella Castigena's collection, and Doctor Wayne Courtney having no patient at Emergency Hospital...My teeth marks on someone's neck, and I was afraid that someone was Peter Gibson for I had snooped around the necks of every man and woman connected with the case so far, and there were no fresh scars on them... Gladys Newcomb leaving her house with Reginald the afternoon I'd been hanging around in her closet, and Imean hanging...

But if the police had a tail on me—were really shadowing me—they evidently knew all about Gladys and Reginald at this point. . . . Then there was the yarn the Congressman had told me about Luke and Pamela quarreling in the cocktail lounge at The Mayflower. Oh, there were a lot of things I thought I'd better tell Sergeant Hornblower, but I didn't.

"I don't know anything definite—yet," I said. "Nothing important at all, really. Certainly nothing conclusive. But I promise you that if I do find something, you'll be the first person I'll tell."

"Provided you live long enough to do so," Sergeant Hornblower remarked slowly.

My heart jumped.

"What-t-t-t-t do you mean?"

"Miss Randolph, a murderer wouldn't hesitate to strike twice, three times, four times, five times if he feels his safety is in jeopardy. If you get too close to something and he or she realizes it . . ." He drew one of his huge forefingers across his throat and made a grisly sound with his tongue against his tomb-like teeth. In that second, all the starch went out of me.

"Heath, get Miss Randolph a glass of water," the Sergeant said kindly, and his assistant, who had been writing down every word I said, bustled off to the kitchen. Soon Heath was back with a glass of water.

"You look upset, Miss Randolph. Drink that water," the Sergeant suggested.

The glass shook but I swallowed obediently. I leaned back and took a deep breath, and then another. I still felt as if all the blood had drained out of my body.

"Do—you s-suppose—I c-could be going—t-to faint?" I stammered.

"Heath—get Miss Randolph some —medicine."

A few moments later when the brandy restored the circulation of my blood, the Sergeant asked, "Okay now?"

"Okay! This is a new experience. Room started whizzing when you said what you—d-did. I had a h-horrible feeling I was being p-played with by the murderer and —l-laughed at."

And on that confused note I left the library. As I went shakily upstairs to bed, I heard Heath telling Marvin Eustace that the Sergeant wanted to see him.

I couldn't sleep. I tried everything including sheep, that business of making yourself limp, a couple of triple bromides, the dullest book on my night table, and finally exercises before the open window. Somewhere between one and two, Sandra came in and, finding me still wide awake, asked if there was anything she could do.

"Just look under our beds—and in that closet," I said miserably. "Lock the doors, if you're sure we're—alone. I've got the worst case of jitters."

And there went my teeth again. I scare easily; there's no question about that. But this was more than being just terrified. It was another premonition, as I was soon to learn.

* * *

It was almost dawn before I fell asleep. At seven o'clock one of the upstairs maids had to shake me three times before I opened my eyes and stretched my arms from beneath the blue satin quilts. "You asked to be awakened at seven, Miss Randolph," the maid whispered. "I hope you haven't changed your mind."

"No," I yawned. "I have to go to work. Nearly everyone at the office has flu except me. Thank you for not forgetting."

When the maid left, saying that breakfast would be ready in the dining room in fifteen minutes, I lay in bed, staring up at the ceiling, hating to get up. Finally, I rolled over on my side and looked at Sandra. The coverlet was unrumpled. Her long, slender hands were exposed with the faint golden sunshine of early morning upon them. She seemed to be sleeping soundly, deeply—so deeply, in fact, I was convinced she had taken some narcotic.

Sandra had a doll in bed with her! I could see the black thatch of its head above the coverlet, and one long soiled white satin arm. It was an ugly doll: battered, dirty, with a bashed-in sort of face. I had never seen it before, but Sandra had told me all about it. She'd had that doll ever since she could remember. She had brought it back with her from South America, and had slept with it until she was sixteen.

Two years ago she had packed it away in a trunk, carefully wrapped in tissue-papers. I was surprised she had it in bed with her once more, and I wondered just what part the ugly Spanish doll had played in Sandra's childhood. A great deal, I imagined, when the nurse had gone out and had shut Sandra alone in the frightening darkness of her nursery.

As I watched Sandra I saw her stir a little, reach out her hand, feel around experimentally and, finding the doll, curl her arm around it, drawing it up close to her. A sudden pang of pity for the young girl smote me . . . A doll seemed such an inadequate thing to be clinging to for comfort.

I climbed out of bed then, walked into the bathroom, and emerged in seven minutes showered and feeling almost alive. I dressed in my tartan skirt, gray Shetland sweater which buttons up the back, brown brogues, red and white woolen socks, and went down to breakfast.

Reginald had thoughtfully placed the morning papers beside my plate but there wasn't much in them. Pamela's murder still had a place on page one, and the little that had been written about Marcella Kingsley was relegated to page twelve.

I reached my office at a few minutes after eight, to the surprise of the colored elevator operator. He stared at me out of big white-socketed eyes.

Working methodically until eleven, I was just clearing off my desk when the Society Editor herself came in. She informed me that her cold was terrific. I told her sweetly that I hoped she'd be simply peachy-perfect in no time, and made a hasty escape. I caught a cab in front of the Tribune Building and arrived fifteen minutes later at Washington's sparkling new morgue.

There was nothing unusual about the Pamela Keith inquest. The verdict was: Murdered by person or persons unknown. And I saw in the early evening papers that Marcella Kingsley's inquest, held immediately after Pamela's, brought in the verdict of suicide.

Pamela's funeral was on Thursday morning. Practically all of the suspects were present at the Cathedral service and later at the Cedar Hill Cemetery. I don't like to be flippant about funerals but, with the exception of Sandra Keith and Luke Cramer, there wasn't enough grief around that ornate coffin to justify a 2" by 4" wailing wall. Tears of anger and shame for the insensibility of people sprang into my eyes. Of course, there is no point in moaning and sprinkling ashes on your head if you aren't grief-stricken. But to me there was something almost obscene in that group around Pamela's grave. Their indifference to her death, even their relief, seemed to pervade the whole cemetery where Pamela would lie forevermore.

Sandra was in black, heavily and dramatically veiled. It was somewhat of a surprise to find Victor Corliss dutifully and affectionately supporting Sandra, one of his long tan hands firmly gripping her elbow. That could mean only one thing: Vic had convinced Sandra somehow that he had not murdered her mother. I remember I thought: Nice break for you, Vic. Now you get the girl and the money. Did you achieve these results yourself? I wonder if Sandra was right about you in the beginning. . . .

Countess Fanella Castigena wore a half-frown . . . Elsie and Marvin Eustace were trying to discipline their features to the expression which they imagined suitable for funerals, but it was obvious that their almost overwhelming relief was difficult to conceal . . . For no special reason my eyes noted the contrast between Doctor Wayne Courtney's long, delicate surgeon's fingers, and Earle Pines' immense, hairy brown hands . . . Gladys Newcomb's black-gloved fingers were twisted together tensely, and her red lower lip had a dent where she'd bitten it. I remember thinking too: Wonder if you ever did get over Pamela taking Richard Keith away from you, Gladys? You couldn't have stood it if she'd taken Luke Cramer too, could you? Now Luke's free. That is exactly what you wanted, isn't it?

I looked at Luke Cramer then. I'd heard Doctor John Redmond urging him not to go out today, as he'd urged him yesterday not to attend the inquest, pointing out the dangerous consequences which might follow. Luke had not argued. He'd simply gotten into his overcoat and, white-faced and weak, had gone down the stairs holding the bannisters for support. Following behind him it had come to me that nothing really mattered to Luke now; that if he had a physical collapse due to the strain of exertion after a high fever, it would be a triviality not worth thinking about. The thing that did matter to Luke, his urgent all-compelling vital breathless need, was to be as near Pamela as he possibly could until the very end.

Peter Gibson wasn't at the funeral. I was glad Peter hadn't come. At times when he looked at me I had to hold myself back from rushing off to write a sonnet or something . . .

Reginald was there and so were other servants, including the blonde maid, Charlotte Cunningham, which indicated that "certain aspects of the case must have been cleared up" since she was no longer being held by the police as 'a material witness."

My mother and father stood on either side of Me, Dad's hand on my arm and Mother watching me as closely as Sergeant Hornblower and his henchmen were watching everyone else. Sometimes even now I wake up swept with horror and sick pity, thinking how easily what was to come could have been averted if only I had thought a little deeper, investigated more thoroughly during those first few days after the crime. For it was all there, the whole horrible pattern, complete and deadly, visible if you could just see through the thin layer of extraneous things down to the ugly, sordid motive. Yes, I hate to admit it. But I could have saved the other lives.

After the service at the cemetery was over, Dad suggested we drive a little in the gorgeous November morning and then drop by Gaston's for luncheon. We did, Mother and Dad tossing the conversational ball back and forth without a stop. I didn't talk at all, being too busy fighting down the panicky feeling that something unseen—something hideous and sinister—was creeping up on me. It was almost a relief to climb out of the car at last, and turn into the gay bandinage of the fashionable French restaurant just off Dupont Circle.

Gaston's is a Washington legend. Before the war, diplomats from all the Embassies and Legations gathered there at noon for snails and one another's company, to eye the feminine oomph-gals who patronized the place because the "big shots" were there, as well as visiting celebrities, chiefs of foreign missions, ranking bureaucrats, politicians and an occasional Cabinet member, but mostly to watch one another suspiciously, to strain their ears in the hope of overhearing something. . . .

Gaston's has a way of dividing the sheep from the goats so markedly that the restaurant has the air of a Coronation with the nobility aloofly together and the peasants seated at a respectful distance.

As Gaston, smiling urbanely, was leading our little family trio to a table in the very heart of the sheep, I rather wished we'd been relegated to the goats. For in one of the side wall cubicles there were a good many goats important to me now, and I might have picked up some hot news.

For instance, there was Countess Fanella Castigena, Marvin and Elsie Eustace, Gladys Newcomb, Earle Pines and Doctor Wayne Courtney. Inasmuch as they were on their salad course, they had evidently come straight to Gaston's from the funeral. However, they didn't look as if they'd just returned from so depressing an affair; they were quite cheerful . . . If any of their tears had been shed at the cemetery, they must have been glycerine! And I was certain for the first time that Dr. Wayne Courtney had not harbored any undying love for Pamela. As the waiter pulled out my chair, I saw Dr. Courtney throw back his blond head and laugh gayly. Somehow it chilled my blood. It was so soon after Pam's funeral. So soon . . .

But Dr. Courtney wasn't the only one who looked gay and lighthearted that noon at Gaston's. Earle Pines' blue jowls were quivering with his subdued chuckles and Galdys Newcomb was giggling into her handkerchief; the others grinning broadly.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being just enough steak to go around, and ma said, h, dear, is there anything more aggervating than spending several precious hours of your best endeavors slaving over something, only to have it come out an absolute ruin?

Nothing that I can think of at the moment? pop said, and ma said, I dont know why you consider quince jelly such an unspeakable luxury, but there's no accounting for peculiar tastes, so I thought I might as well put up a batch of it for you as long as you enjoy it so much. Oh dear such an utter failure, but I'm still convinced it wasn't my fault, because I followed directions to the red letter. It was just one of those things that happen she said.

That's really hard luck, did you spend the whole day at it? pop said, and ma said, To all intense and purposes, I ean practically, yes.

Oh well, dont let it get you down, my dear, pop said. I'll take the will for the deed and the perseverance for the preserves, he said, and ma said, That's very nice, but just a same, an entire wasted afternoon is something that can never be recovered.

Just put it down to profit and loss, especially loss, pop said. By the way, though, I thought you'd spent the afternoon downtown, he said, and ma said, Oh, it wasn't this afternoon for lank sakes. It happened 4 or five years ago, dont you remember? The thing is, quinces are cheap and plentiful now and I thought of putting some up for you, but the tragic memory of that other failure makes me think twice about it, so I dont know, she said.

Neither do I, and I'll probably never find out, pop said.

And he took some more mash potatoes and shook his head to himself all the time he was eating them.

Start Repair Work Following Shocks At Cornwall

Cornwall, Sept. 6—(CP)—Orders have been placed for 122 carloads of building materials to repair damage to public buildings, stores and homes in this city in the series of earth tremors early yesterday which rocked this town severely and was felt in most of Ontario and Quebec and the northern United States.

This was announced today by town officials who said a meeting of the town's contractors had decided 100 carloads of brick, seven carloads of lumber and five carloads each of plaster, flue lining and roofing will be needed.

Repair work was started today at the public school where several sections of brick were loosened in the tremors, most severe of which came at 12.40 a.m. Damage to the public school, collegiate and churches was estimated at $100,000 and Mayor Aaron Horowitz said that total damage to buildings is about $1,000,000.

City Engineer W. H. Magwood announced that seven dwellings, three of which are more than 50 years old, have been condemned as unfit for use and will be torn down.

Inspect Buildings.

Inspection of other buildings is continuing.

It is expected that skilled labor needed for the repair work will be obtained through National Selective Service and Mayor Horowitz said 100 men are needed to get the work started and 300 to 400 can be put to work. He added that he was in touch with the Federal Building Controller in Ottawa last night and was told to go ahead with plans for repair work without worrying about permits.

The 122 carloads of supplies which have been ordered do not include plumbing, heating and electrical equipment which will be needed. Orders also have been placed for several tons of iron and nails.

A sidelight on the earthquake came today from Homer Rupert of Farran's Point, 14 miles west of here, who reported that after the 12.40 a.m. shock yesterday his home was illuminated by a sudden flash of light. He added that he was talking to neighbors later and some of them reported seeing a light dancing along the ground as if it were gunpowder flame. Herb Barkley, also of Farran's Point, was one of those who saw a flash race along the ground after the tremor.

Street Light Standard Is Broken Off

While driving his truck away from the curb on south Front St., Wednesday afternoon the rack of the vehicle struck a street hydro light standard breaking the standard off at the base. The truck was driven by John Platt of Frankford, who reported the accident to police headquarters. The hydro emergency crew employees were immediately notified and repairs commenced. The lamp was shattered and the standard bent as the result of the crashing to the pavement.

AUTHOR EXECUTED

London Sept. 6 — (CP) —The Geneva Tribune reported last night that Germans had shot Jean Provost, author and journalist, who was taken prisoner during the Maquis figt for Grenoble.

RUSS DRIVE ACROSS BULGARIA INTO GREECE

CANADIANS CLOSING IN ON DUNKERQUE, OSTEND

Reach Turkish Frontier in 2-Day Push of 160 Miles

Fighting Reported Within Ninety Miles of Belgrade

New York, Sept. 7 —(AP)— Russian troops have driven across Bulgaria into Greece, reaching the Turkish frontier in the Demotica area after a sensational 160-mile advance in two days, the German radio said today in an official D.N.B. broadcast.

Another Russian tank column was reported advancing toward Sofia, the Bulgar capital of 400,000.

Bulgaria, against which Russia declared war Tuesday night, was invaded at three points, the Germans said, adding:

"No resistance worth mentioning seems to have been put up in consequence of the muddled-up political conditions there."

Berlin announced earlier that Bulgaria had broken relations with Germany and unconfirmed Turkish dispatches said Bulgaria declared war on Germany to put the Balkan country at war with both sides. The Bulgars pleaded with Russia for an armistice soon after the Kremlin declared war during a time in which armistice negotiations with the United States and Britain were bogged down.

Reds Reach Iron Gate.

The Germans said the Russians crossed the Danube in the area of Giurlu and Ruse, Romanian and Bulgar towns facing each other across the river, and in the area north of Sofia. The Russian plunge to the iron gate of the Danube yesterday gave them control of all the north frontier of Bulgaria.

Demotica lies in Thrace, the eastern extremity of Greece which Bulgaria seized and occupied after the German conquest of the Balkans. It is 60 miles north of the Aegean, 190 miles east of Salonika and 130 miles northwest of Istanbul, the former Turkish capital on the Bosporus.

"The general direction of the march is toward the Aegean coast," said the Berlin broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press. The first Russian incursions into Bulgaria took place Tuesday, the day Russia declared war, the enemy said.

By EDDY GILMORE
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Sept. 7 —(AP)— Swift Russian troops were reported fighting within 90 miles of Belgrade today and were believed already to have ferried the Danube and reached Yugoslav soil south of the Iron Gate Gorge where the mighty river cuts through the Transylvanian Alps.

The Red army might be using parachute troops in an effort to establish a junction with Marshal Tito's partisan army scattered through the rugged mountains inside Yugoslavia's northeast frontier.

Turnu-Severin, on the frontier, was captured yesterday and the Russians pursued the Germans through the Iron Gate and were reported fighting today for Orsova on the Danube, well beyond the gorge and 90 miles due east of the Yugoslav capital.

In northern Poland, a great battle that may liberate Warsaw and carry the war into East Prussia increased in violence with two Russian army groups attacking along a 35-mile front along the Narew river and on the close eastern approaches of the Polish capital. The Narew fortress town of Ostroleka was toppled yesterday and the Russians moved on within 23 miles of the southern border of East Prussia.

791,000 Nazis Killed.

Red Star declared 791,000 Germans had been killed on the long eastern front in the summer offensive from June 23 to Aug. 31, and said "this means the Red army in nine weeks has exterminated a German army greater than that sent against the Allies." Other hundreds of thousands have been reported captured.

"Until now, the Germans kept their main forces on the Soviet front, shifting their divisions from occupied European countries and from Germany itself," the army newspaper said. "The Hitlerite command does not conceal the fact that its main task is to prevent invasion from the east."

Junction Expected.

An imminent large-scale junction of the Red army and Tito's forces on Yugoslav soil was expected to block the Germans last overland escape route from the Balkans.

A 50-mile fringe of foothills at the southwestern base of the Transylvanian Alps was all that separated the Red army from the great plain which embraces Budapest and most of Hungary and includes Hitler's most important remaining wheat basin. The Hungarian frontier itself was 122 miles distant.

Before Warsaw, Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky drove the Germans from the ruins of Wolomin- seven miles from the capital's eastern limits and sent tanks thrusting almost to the edge of Praga, Warsaw's industrial suburb on the east side of the Vistula.

Guelph Prohibits Train Whistling Within Limits

Guelph, Sept. 7 (CP)— Guelph city council last night passed an anti-noise by-law. believed to be the most drastic regulation of its kind in the Province of Ontario.

The by-law prohibits blowing of whistles, ringing bells, setting off firecrackers and "shouting calculated to disturb the inhabitants." It also prohibits train whistling at level crossings in the city.

Mayor Robson said that accidents at level crossings in London and Chatham were reduced when by-laws were passed prohibiting trains to whistle at crossings within city limits.

Regina Pilot Awarded D.S.O.

London, Sept. 7 (CP Cable) — Sqdn. Ldr. H. W. (Wally) McLeod of Regina has been awarded the D.S.O., it was announced today.

Today's gazetting formalized an award which had been known to the flier's squadron for some weeks. McLeod previously won the D.F.C. and bar.

He is a veteran of more than 250 sorties over England, Malta and France with 21 confirmed victories in his log book, and is Canada's leading fighter ace still on operations.

The 27-year-old flier's complete score since his first operational flight in July, 1941, is 21 destroyed, three probably destroyed and 12 damaged.

BULGARS DECLARE WAR ON GERMANY STATES BERLIN

Collapse of Hitler's Balkan House Now Complete Except for Hungary

NAZI FORCES TRAPPED

London, Sept. 7 —(CP)— Bulgaria has broken off relations with Germany in a last-minute effort to avoid invasion by Russian troops massed on her frontier.

Dispatches from Ankara said Bulgaria also had declared war against Germany, but these lacked confirmation in Sofia and Berlin broadcasts. Such a declaration would make the Bulgars technically at war with both Germany and the Allies, in the midst of armistice negotiations with the latter.

A flurry was created when Transocean broadcast from Berlin a dispatch quoting a German Foreign Office spokesman as confirming that Bulgaria had declared war against Germany, but an hour later the agency put out a correction saying that the spokesman confirmed the breaking off of diplomatic relations and not a declaration of war.

The collapse of Hitler's Balkan house was complete except for Hungary.

Appear to be Trapped.

German forces in the Balkans appeared to have been trapped, with surrender their only way out, and Cairo dispatches said six German divisions in Greece alone were "virtually in the bag."

The Greek government-in-Cairo was reported preparing to move to Athens, believing the day of Greek liberation was near.

Ankara dispatches dated yesterday said Bulgaria declared war Tuesday night and the decision was communicated officially by the Bulgarian minister to the British and American ambassadors yesterday after the news had been given to the Russian envoy.

The decision was reached by the Bulgarian cabinet Tuesday afternoon, it was said, after news reached Sofia that the Germans had disarmed Bulgarian troops at Nis, in southern Yugoslavia, who had orders to evacuate Yugoslav territory.

On Way to Cairo.

Ankara dispatches added that the Soviet ambassador to Egypt,

GIGANTIC PLANE SEIZED

Rome, Sept. 7 (AP)—The socialist newspaper Avanti quoted reports from northern Italy today as saying a group of high Fascist officials was preparing to flee to Japan in a gigantic plane originally constructed "for the ambitious project of bombing New York."

The dispatch said the plane, once used to convey messages from Hitler and Mussolini to Tokyo, now is under guard at an airdrome near Milan.

With the Canadian Parachute Troops in France, Sept. 7. (CP)— Canadian parachute troops did another terrific job in Normandy, fighting their way forward for 60 miles from just east of the Orne River to the Risle River through some of the toughest country in that part of France.

They did it in ten days and the feature of the advance is that they did it almost entirely on foot, battling Germans most of the way. The only transport Canadians had was six jeeps and they were used exclusively for carrying ammunition and rations.

Canadians carried out this feat of endurance and stamina during the push along the Channel flank of the 1st Canadian Army which followed the capture of Falaise on Aug. 17.

They struck east with British airborne troops and Belgian and Dutch forces and the success of this 60-mile attack contributed a great deal to winning the battle for the Lower Seine. Even the most optimistic commanders did not think they could ever move so fast.

Canadian parachutists started from their positions between Troarn and the Orne River northeast of Caen. The first obstacle was a huge woods with mine fields sown in it, some of them 400 yards deep. They negotiated these and then had to cross four miles of swamp land by the Dives river. Parties of Germans sniped at them as they advanced but by the next night they were over the swamp country. Maj. Peter Griffin, of Toronto, led his company in an attack on some important bridges on road to Dozula, south of Cabourg and Houlgate and it was a complete success. The bridges were seized and by the time the rest of the Canadians came up Griffin's men had a sign upon on the biggest bridge:

"Canada Bridge".

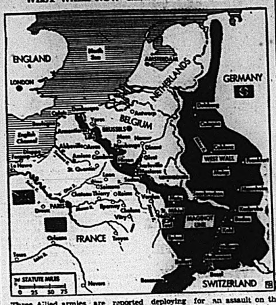
WEST WALL NOW GERMANY'S DEFENCE



Three Allied armies are reported deploying for an assault on the Siegfried line, and Karlsruhe and Ludwigshaven, two of the principal communications centres behind that line opposite the American 3rd Army concentrated between Metz and Nancy, have been heavily bombed, by British and American air forces. The Maginot line defence area, now cracked, by the Allied armies, is shown shaded on the above map. East of this area may be seen the defence positions of the German West Wall, also shaded on the map.

AMERICAN FORCES OCCUPY LUCCA N. EAST OF PISA

Slight Progress Against Heavy Fighting Made by 8th Army

NEAR MAIN DEFENCES

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, Sept. 7 (AP)—With heavy fighting but slight progress reported from the British 8th Army's Adriatic front, American troops of the Allied 5th Army have occupied the important Italian city of Lucca 10 miles northeast of Pisa and driven the Germans back to within less than six miles of the main gothic line defence beyond the town, Allied headquarters announced today.

In the Adriatic sector Allied forces entered Riccione Marina on the coast about four miles southeast of Rimini and captured Besanigo, 2 1-2 miles inland.

These advances were achieved after bitter fighting by infantry and tanks against the dogged and well-entrenched Nazis.

Fighting was reported heavy along a 14-mile front from the coast, with the 8th Army steadily hammering a way through German tank and anti-tank gun defences.

British troops crossed the Ventena river and were within five miles of the eastern border of the tiny principality of San Marino. A little farther inland British and Indian units captured 2,000-foot Monte San Giovanni, dominating the upper Ventena-Conca valley.

The Germans put up a brisk fight there and left 60 dead on the slopes.

Nearing Western End.

American troops were advancing toward the western end of the Gothic line on a broad front. Patrols were reported operating just south of Monsummano, 15 miles east of Lucca. The Americans were within sight of Pistoia and controlled the highway leading into the city from the south.

In the coastal sector 5th Army patrols encountered considerable small arms, mortar and machine-gun fire as well as extensive mine-fields. The Allied Command said "it is expected the enemy will offer resistance by delaying action until the 5th Army reaches the Gothic line, which he probably will defend stubbornly."

In the sector north of Florence and the mountainous area to the east the Germans continued to withdraw and Indian forces seized the village of La Verna, giving excellent observation northwards into both the upper Tiber and upper Arno valleys.

The 8th Army's onslaught in the Adriatic area received heavy support from both air and sea. The navy announced British warships fired more than 600 shells into German defences in the Rimini area yesterday with excellent results.

2,300 OF 8,000 ROBOMBS FIRED MADE WAY THRU

Details of 18-Month-Battle Against Terror Weapon Disclosed

5,000 DEATHS

London, Sept. 7. —(CP)—Disclosing new details of the robot bombings, the government declared today the Battle of London is over "except possibly for the last few shots".

With their wartime blackout due to end 10 days hence, Londoners received more cheer in the announcement by Lt.-Col. Edwin Duncan Sandys that perfected defences and Allied encirclement of the robot bomb coast had virtually ended the menace of the German "vengeance weapon".

Col. Sandys—a son-in-law of Prime Minister Churchill—disclosed 2,900 Allied airmen and 450 planes had been lost in the 18-month campaign against the robots, in addition to more than 5,000 deaths in England as a result of the bombs that landed. He said only 2,300 of the 8,000 bombs launched since June 12, had reached their goal whereas the earlier bombs each took a life, in the average. The campaign against them made such progress that lately an average of three of the robots have been expended by the Germans to kill one person in Britain.

The figures announced today were the latest since Aug. 24 when the government disclosed the Germans had sent about 7,250 winged bombs against southern England.

Weapon Knocked Out.

Some of the newsmen at Col. Sandys' press conference brought away the impression that the Allied advance along the French coast had knocked out the Germans' V-2, reputedly a much heavier rocket bomb than the V-1 launched against London, before it could be used.

"I am a little chary of talking about V-2", Sandys said. "We do know quite a lot about it. In a very few days time I feel that the press will be walking all over these places in France and will know a great deal more then than we do now".

NAMED CHARGE D'AFFAIRES

Ottawa, Sept. 7 (CP)—Pierre Dupuy, former Charge D'Affaires to the Allied governments in London, has been appointed Charge D'Affaires to the Canadian Embassy in Brussels it was announced today on behalf of Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Thomas A. Stone has been appointed Charge D'Affaires to the other Allied governments in London. They include Norway, The Netherlands and Yugoslavia.

AMERICAN FLIERS DESTROY COACHES FULL OF GERMANS

Seaport of Hamburg And Port of Emden Heavily Strafed by R.A.F. Crews

ALL PLANES RETURN

London, Sept. 7 (CP)—Despite dismal weather, R.A.F. Mosquitos based in Britain hammered the German seaport of Hamburg last night while other Mosquitos based in France strafed Nazi transport from Utrecht to Arnhem in the Netherlands and near Dusseldorf in Germany.

A strong force of R.A.F. heavy bombers, escorted by fighters, smashed at the smaller port of Emden just before dark yesterday. The bombing was "concentrated," the Air Ministry said, and several explosions were observed in the dock area.

The Mosquitos blew up a convoy south of Arnhem and a train was set afire near Goch just over the German border.

A recapitulation of results achieved yesterday by British-based U.S. 8th air force fighter-bombers showed 135 trucks, 56 locomotives, and 35 oil tank cars destroyed and 63 motor vehicles damaged. All planes returned safely.

The American fliers destroyed 15 coaches full of German troops in Northern Holland, it was announced.

Canadian Squadrons Active.

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 7 (CP Cable)—Nine squadrons of the R.C.A.F. bomber group took part in a heavy R.A.F. attack on the German North Sea Port of Emden yesterday, marking the first time since the Canadian bomber group was formed 20 months ago that Canadian aircraft have flown over Germany in daylight.

All the Canadian bombers returned safely from the attack, in which the heavyweights were escorted by Spitfires and Mustangs.

Wing Cmdrs. G. A. McKenna of Ottawa, Mike Bryson, of Barrie, Ont., Georges Roy, D.F.C., of Westmount, Que., and A. C. Hull of Ottawa, led the Snowy Owl, Lion, Tiger and Ghost squadrons respectively on the raid which left fires blazing in the port and smoke billowing thousands of feet into the sky.

No enemy fighters interfered with the raid. Anti-aircraft fire was heavy however and planes piloted by FO. Lyle Larson of Regina, FO. Stan Young, of Ottawa, FO. Eric Behit, of Penticton, B.C., and Flt. Lt. Bill Janey, of Toronto, all returned with holes.

PO. Roy Webb, D.S.O., of Hamilton, Ont., completing his operational tour with this trip, landed his Halifax with the bomb doors open owing to hydraulic trouble.

NAZI GARRISON SURRENDERS

Istanbul, Sept. 7 (AP)—The German garrison holding the town of Pythion in the Greek triangle between Turkey and Bulgaria has surrendered to the Turks after crossing the frontier and will be interned, it was announced today.

The garrison of 68 German officers and 300 men will be placed in a camp in the interior of Australia

Old Battleground Of Ypres Entered By Polish Division

U.S. Armies Head East Toward Siegfried Line

London, Sept. 7 (CP)—The 1st Canadian army plunged into Belgium today, thrusting a Polish armored division into the famed first Great War battleground of Ypres, 10 miles inside the frontier, while British 2nd army forces took vent and entered Courtrai in the relentless clean-up of the channel coast between Pas-de-Calais and the Netherlands-Belgium border.

The United States 1st and 3rd armies hammered eastward on two broad fronts toward Germany, heading for the Siegfried Line where a decisive battle, perhaps the last great battle of the war in Europe, may be fought.

Enter Outskirts of Metz

Moving up the Moselle river on a front of more than 50 miles from Luxembourg to Nancy, the Americans wedged into the outskirts of the fortress city of Metz on the river's east bank. They ran into fierce artillery fire both north and south of Metz as German resistance stiffened under orders to hold out in front of the menaced westwall.

Armentieres, French town of the legendary mademoiselle, fell to British forces who pushed 18 miles beyond Lille to Merville in a drive on the channel coast. To the north, the British drive through the Netherlands came under an official ban of secrecy.

The Canadians, with forces on both sides of Calais, on the channel coast, advanced to within seven miles west and southwest of Dunkerque, graveyard of 1940, and prepared to besiege Germans in the Belgian coastal strongholds of Ostend and Zeebrugge.

Plunge Into Ardennes Forest.

The U. S. 1st Army, striding well beyond the Meuse river in southeastern Belgium, plunged into the Ardennes forest today on a 40-mile front, sending the Germans backtracking along the route on which they invaded France in 1940.

Separate columns, moving generally in a direction that would take them across the northern tip of the Duchy of Luxembourg, drove through bridgeheads forged across the Meuse in the vicinity of captured Namur and Givet, 22 miles to the south.

While this 1st Army bulge was developing directly south of the Belgian fortress city of Liege, the U. S. 3rd Army to the southeast steadily built up its Moselle river bridgeheads north of Nancy and edged into the outskirts of Metz against Nazi resistance stiffening into a buffer front before the Siegfried line.

Canadian troops battled their way into the outskirts of Boulogne. At Marquise north of that port they had cut off the German escape. Other British, Canadian and Polish troops isolated Calais with spearheads to the coast north and south of the town. They last were reported closing in to its outskirts.

British Beyond St. Omer.

Just back from the coast the British advanced beyond St. Omer and Cassel into the zone where the Germans were reported to have built concrete emplacements for their threatened 10-ton vengeance rockets.

American forces, now 400 miles from their Cherbourg supply port, apparently were building up their next push-off positions facing Germany even while continuing to batter the enemy back.

The 1st Army was said to be encountering persistent small arms and mortar fire, but apparently it had not yet run into artillery-defended positions.

The 3rd Army, stalled for almost a week because they outran their supply lines, have jumped strongly to the offensive again, with infantry battling to open a path for tanks, but a front dispatch said the Germans there were making their first real stand since the Allied break-through in Normandy.

Enemy Groups for Defence.

The Germans themselves, in Berlin broadcasts, asserted a firm defence was beginning to take shape, but there was every evidence that the racing speed of the now-won battle of France and Belgium is giving way to a slow but sure gathering of Allied strength for a coming bolt across the border and a fight to a finish within the Reich.

The Germans conceded that what fighting they were doing in Belgium was merely a play for time. "Every day rained is for the protection of the Reich", said one Nazi broadcast—presumably a reference to new grouping of strength in the enemy's vaunted Seigfried line.

It is declared now at Allied Supreme headquarters that earlier unofficial reports from the Paris radio and the Swiss-French frontier saying the Americans had reached Liege or the German border city of Aachen apparently were incorrect.

Headquarters announced last night U.S. 1st Army forces had been thrown three bridgeheads across the Meuse river at and south of captured Namur, 32 miles southwest of Liege.

More Prisoners.

Prisoners were still coming in from the pocket formed by the 1st Army around a huge enemy force near Mons. The latest tally showed 25,000 Germans taken there, including two major-generals, raising the 1st Army's total since D-Day to 154,000. Full Allied total now may be in excess of 500,000.

British forces in Belgium previously captured Malines and Leuven (Louvain) on the Albert Canal, the latter town with its bridges intact.

Canadians, Poles and British assaulting the pocketed Germans along the Pas de Calais robot bombs coast made steady strides. Canadian and Poles reached Cassel, 10 miles northeast of captured St. Omer. They also plunged to Marguiese, between the besieged ports of Calais and Boulogne. One unconfirmed report said patrols had reached historic Ypres, 30 miles east of St. Omer.

Writers Claim Canadian, British Troops Had To Take "Back Seat"

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(CP Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 7—(CP)—Criticism of the War Office and British Information Services for making the British, and in parenthesis, the Canadian soldiers, take a back seat in this war was an outcome of the Normandy battle.

Newspaper columnists and editorial writers complained bitterly about the "blimps" who turned the glare of publicity away from the Tommy and his Canadian fighting brother in favor of the United States' Doughboy.

No one tried to take any credit away from the fighting Americans whose great achievements have been headline news in the British press since the break-out in Brittany, but many writers felt that too little emphasis was given to the importance of the bitter Normandy battle.

In an outspoken editorial called "The Back Seat," The Daily Mirror said:

"The blimps of the War Office seem to have an idea that to let the world know the truth about the achievements of the British army would in some grotesque way be tantamount to disclosing an important military secret to the enemy . . .

"The battle of Normandy was won at Caen through the great work of British and Canadian troops . . . The plan was Monty's from beginning to end. Yet it would appear that the policy of our governments is to hide these facts and give the whole credit to the Americans."

FORMER SPRINGBROOK BOY WOUNDED

Member of the Royal Regiment of Canada, Private Frank Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Moore, Springbrook, has been wounded while in action against the enemy in France, relatives have been notified.

The former Eileen McGarvey, Marmora, four-day bride of the nineteen-year-old soldier when he went overseas in June of this year, received the cablegram yesterday. No details of Moore's wounds were included.

Private Moore was born in Springbrook and came to Belleville after finishing his public school education. Here he became associated with the J. B. Boyce garage and worked in the Boyce service station, Front Street. He enlisted in January, 1943 and did extensive training in Canada before proceeding overseas.

Going to France with invasion troops, he was wounded on August 28th. His wife is at present residing at 152 Church Street.

Says Veterans Should Be Let Choose Their Own Way of Living

Members of the armed services returning from overseas after the war should be "given their heads," not patronized, and be let to choose their own way of living, Mr. Arthur Francis, C.D.S. manager here and secretary of the Belleville Rotary Club, told Picton Rotarians this week.

"There will be no need to feel sorry for them," Mr. Francis said. "Instead they will feel sorry for us, that we did not have their experience. Return to civil life after four and five years of life in the services will no doubt be confusing to them. Civilian ways will be strange; methods of living will be strange. It will take some time for them to adapt themselves to their former surroundings and method of existence."

"Returned soldiers should not be patted on the back too much," Mr. Francis asserted. "They won't be looking for it. They know they have done their duty and will not look for any enthusiastic demonstrations on our part. Instead they will be curious as to what we have done in preparation for them."

Mr. Francis preceded his address with a number of personal experiences gained during the First Great War. He was introduced by Rotarian G. H. Carver, Belleville, while the Picton appreciation was expressed by Rotarian James Hepburn, M.P.P. Rotarian Lloyd Hicks, Belleville, who assisted in sponsoring the formation of the Picton Club was a guest.

POLICE BLOTTER

While riding his bicycle across the Pinnacle-Station St. intersection late Wednesday afternoon, ten-year old Kenneth Courneyea, No. 4 Dafoe St., was in collision with a truck driven by Harvey Bailey of Trenton. Although the front wheel of the bike was badly damaged, the cyclist escaped without injury, police were informed by the truck driver.

Assumes Responsibility, Report

Automobiles driven by Harold Carruthers, 165 William St. and Ed Turkington, Kingston, came into collision on Front St. yesterday with the result extensive body and running board damage came about following the impact. Police investigated and reported Mr. Turkington agreed to assume the financial responsibility of the collision.

Police Answer Call

Disturbances opposite the City Hall on Front St. early last evening resulted in police answering the call with sufficient speed they apprehended two young men in the throes of fisticuffs. One of the principals, who police say was Robt. Allen of this city was held in custody until Thursday morning, when he was released.

Imbibing too freely of "wobble water" a local resident slept it off in the confines of the police cell block last night. Yes, he'll face a charge of intoxication.

James Miller Given Extra Six Months in Prison

James Miller, 24, of this city, was sentenced to serve an additional six months in the Portsmouth Penitentiary, when he appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd for sentence today. Miller had previously pleaded guilty to charges of breaking and entering Irwin's garage in Deseronto and stealing a safe and a sedan motor car, both of which were recovered abandoned east of Belleville on June 4th last.

Miller at present is undergoing a four-year penitentiary sentence after being convicted of multiple charges of breaking, entering and theft in a local court some months ago. The six months sentence imposed by Magistrate Lloyd here today will run consecutively with the former terms.

R. D. Arnott K.C., local barrister, appeared on Miller's behalf today and pointed out the accused lad only had been convicted on two previous occasions prior to being sent to the penitentiary. "I feel the present term of four years is ample under the circumstances and ask that any sentence imposed shall be of a concurrent nature," suggested Mr. Arnott.

"Miller is protecting his friends and withholding information," stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., as he urged a four-year additional term. "After all he is equally as guilty as Wood, who is doing eight years," added Mr. Donnan.

His Worship imposed a six months sentence to commence at the expiration of the present four years Miller is serving. Provincial Police preferred the charges today.

Well-Drilling Machines Needed In Local District

With farmers' wells beginning to fail as the result of continued dry weather throughout the summer months, a well driller would do a splendid business in the immediate Belleville district this year. As far as can be learned there are only two well-drilling machines operating in Hastings, one at Madoc and the other in the Bancroft district.

With both of these machines working continuously in their own districts, farmers in the immediate Belleville area have been unable to procure an operator to drill new wells or to strike deeper in wells which are now beginning to fail as the result of dry weather.

Formerly drilling wells in the Belleville area, Mr. Ed. Gartley of this city is no longer in the business, his equipment having burned two years ago. Inquiries still come in to his office, however, he having approximately 100 farmers asking for a well-drilling machine this season.

Another Mild Earth Tremor At Cornwall

Cornwall, Sept. 7. (CP)—Another mild earth tremor rumbled through this eastern Ontario Industrial City last night, throwing a momentary scare into quake-conscious residents still jittery from Tuesday morning's severe shock.

Accompanied by a "distinct low rumbling", the latest disturbance came at 9:27 p.m., E.D.T., and shook crockerware and tables.

Recalling the severe rocking experienced Tuesday morning with resultant damage throughout city, many residents ran into the streets in fear of stronger shocks but soon returned to their homes.

There were no reports of further damage, although it was feared last night's tremor might have weakened some buildings which have been propped up, and roped off because of bulging walls caused by Tuesday's quake.

Mineola N.Y., Sept. 7. (AP)— It all depends on whether Mrs. Ida Mae McGuire of Napanee, Ont., likes dogs. If she consents to care for 15 Pekinese pups, she will receive for life the interest accruing from a trust fund of $100,000, under terms of the will of Mrs. May Marguerite Shaw, filed for probate yesterday.

Maj. H. Alderman Of Salvation Army On Visit to City

Bronzed by Newfoundland wind and sun, and looking very fit, Major H. S. Alderman, of the Salvation Army War Auxiliary Services, and well-known in this city, returned this week on a brief holiday before taking over new duties at Saint John, New Brunswick.

Two years and ten months were spent in Grand Falls, Newfoundland, by Major Alderman since joining the Salvation Army Auxiliary services in October, 1940. Two years were spent alone, and for the remaining ten months of his tenure in the Old Colony, Mrs. Alderman was with him.

He has spent the last few days fishing and a general holiday as well as renewing old acquaintances and the many friends he made during his term of duty here. He leaves on Friday to take over the S.A. duties at his new post.

Newfoundland, the major says, is a spot of rugged grandeur, nature in the rough, and its scenic beauty rare. But wind, fog, fish and rocks are also parts of its natural gifts.

"But you cannot beat Belleville any way you look at it", smiles the major. "I have seen many parts of Canada but this district is absolutely 'tops'."

Cost of Living High.

Cost of living in Newfoundland, due to the facts that practically all food stuffs have to be imported, is extremely high, he stated. "I paid $1.05 for a dozen eggs, and 23 cents for a small banana. Chicken costs 65 cents the pound, and even at that it is cheaper than some meats".

The Salvation Army operated a "Sally Ann" hostel and hostess house at Grand Falls, a town about 240 miles from St. Johns and midway between the capital city and Port au Basque, northernmost point of the island.

During the almost three years of his term of duty there, over 60,000 members of the armed services availed themselves of the facilities of the hostel. Here they could get a bed, and three meals for $1.50. It was the central point for service personnel from Gander, Botwood and other points of the Old Colony.

At his new post in St. John, N.B., Major Alderman will assume charge of two hostels and his Newfoundland experience will stand him in good stead in the Maritime city. While here he related several humorous stories born of his experience in Newfoundland and his ever-changing contacts with members of the armed services.

Prior to joining the war auxiliary of the Salvation Army, the major was stationed in Sussex, New Brunswick. He served in Belleville several years before that and his activities both within and without the realm of the Salvation Army here are well known. He was one of the main factors in the construction of the Salvation Army citadel on Pinnacle Street.

POLICE COURT

Convicted of failing to report a motor car accident cost Ernest Brooks of Belleville, $12.50 in county police court held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today. Brooks entered his plea of guilty prior to the court and settled the matter without appearing.

Traffic Cases Heard.

Other traffic cases heard included a charge of careless driving preferred against Carl Smith of Toronto and resulting in a conviction, that cost the accused $7.50 in all. Speeding under the War Measures Act cost Howard Kelly of Ottawa a total of $17.50, while a careless driving count preferred by Traffic Oficer H. Caldwell against Robert Robertson, Napanee, will be heard this afternoon.

Cases Enlarged.

A charge of violating the Wartime Prices and Trade Board regulations was read against the National Grocers Ltd., with no response until Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. informed the court, that employees of the company had requested a week's enlargement. As Prices Board representatives were not present to press the prosecution the request was granted. The same held good in a case entered by the same Board against Bruce Russell of Toronto charging him with being found in possession of loose gasoline coupons.

Theft Charge Preferred.

James E. Bateman, Springbrook, appeared on a charge of the theft of wood, the property of School Section No. 20 Rawdon Township. Bateman's case was also enlarged to enable him to procure the services of a lawyer.

REPORTED

Silent Witnesses.

Thousands of German dead were strewn grotesquely in woods and swamps further north on the east side of the Narew, silent witnesses to the effectiveness of Red artillery and dive bombers which blasted to bits 11 pontoon bridges on which the enemy relied for escape. Eighty German tanks counter-attacked before the Russians stormed into Ostroleka, "where perfect roads go north to the cities of East Prussia, and south to Warsaw," Izvestia reported.

The Russians overwhelmed wide belts of steel reinforced bunkers and dug out extensive minefields in the Narew area. One tank barrier five miles long was reduced. The Germans frantically tried to stabilize this crucial sector.

Once the Red army gains a sizeable bulge west of the Narew, Warsaw would be decisively outflanked and the entire front across Poland would be in immediate danger of cracking wide open.

(A broadcast from Marshal Tito's headquarters last night said the Red army has smashed across the Danube into Yugoslavia. It failed to say whether a juncture of forces was effected, but it was taken to indicate some connection already existed.)

Front dispatches said the Red army was employing large groups of parachutists in the lightning-like westward advance.

The Russians recaptured Wolomin, 10 miles northeast of Warsaw, and occupied the Narew river fortress of Ostroleka, 26 miles south of the border of East Prusia. The Polish capital was within range of Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's big guns.

Break-Through Indicated.

Front advices said the Russians appeared to have defeated a big, heavily equipped Germany army between Warsaw and Lomza, 20 miles northeast of Ostroleka on the Narew, and a break-through to a considerable depth was indicated.

There was no intimation in Moscow that the Russians had crossed the Danube into Bulgaria. West of Bucharest the Red army filled out a large area on the Romanian side of the frontier, occupying 100 cities and towns.

As the Russians occupied the southern Romanian province of Wallachia, their right flank forces continued to push northward into Transylvania, capturing Campalung, 30 miles north of fallen Pitesti. The advance was pressed through some of the thickest defensive positions on the entire eastern front, and succeeded in clearing the east bank of the Narew river.

Rev. J. H. Arnup New Moderator

London, Ont., Sept. 7 (CP)—A former Methodist minister—Rev. Jesse H. Arnup, of Toronto—is the new Moderator of the General Council of the United Church of Canada.

The 63-year-old secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the church was elected on the second ballot at the opening session of the 11th General Assembly here last night. He succeeds Rt. Rev. J. R. P. Sclater, also of Toronto, moderator for the last two years.

Shelled Frequently.

As Canadians went on they were shelled frequently for two days but that did not stop them. They marched past Dozules which was burning and into the hilly, wooded country where they had to watch for ambushes and scattered batches of Germans, who were withdrawing but fighting rear-guard actions all the way.

The parachutists were held up several times by enemy in woods and these had to be cleared before they proceeded. Between Dozules and Annebault, nine miles southwest of Deauville, the Canadians had battles through caves where Germans were holding out. Dog-tired, they reached Annebault where they had a brief breather and then Belgian troop-carrying vehicles picked them up for their only ride in 60 miles. They took them six miles, but it was six miles north and not east.

The troop carriers dropped them about five miles from the Touques river and the Canadians marched on to the village of Touques, on the river two miles south of Deauville.

The Germans had blown the bridge there and in face of opposition from the far bank, the whole Canadian force crossed the deep, fast flowing, 40-foot river in two rowboats, manned by French Maquis.

Received With Acclaim.

They pushed on through even more treacherous country between Touques river and Risle river and in every town through which they passed they were received with wild acclaim by the French people. It was nearly impossible to get regular rations and supplies up to them and the French kept them going with eggs, milk, butter and bread.

Canadians advanced through Beuzeville and went on to the Risle where they at last got a chance to rest as regular infantry and armor took up the pursuit battle to the Seine.

Casualties were very light for the Canadians during this push and they took about 150 prisoners.

In the rest area the busiest man in the camp was the unit shoemaker who had several hundred pairs of worn-out boots to repair after this marathon march.

Among officers who shared in this push were Maj. Fraser Eadie of Winnipeg, Maj. Griffin, Capt. John Hanson of Montreal and Capt. Dick Hilborn of Toronto. Griffin and Hanson have already won the Military Cross in Normandy for earlier deeds of gallantry with the airborne forces.

Others were Capt. Bev. Hart of London, Ont., Lieut. Forbes Mountain of Toronto, and Capt. Jack Clancy of Guelph, Ont. and Toronto.

PICTON

Several Local Men in Recent Casualty Lists

Picton, Sept. 7—Several local men are included in recent casualties. Most seriously injured was Pte. Edward Weidmark of Picton who suffered 70 per cent burns. According to a letter received from a Nursing Sister at a Canadian hospital in France, he was badly burned about the legs, back and arms, with superficial burns on other parts of the body. He also suffered a broken bone in the left ankle from shrapnel. The nurse reported that Pte. Weidmark was driving a truck, when the enemy began bombing. He dived beneath the truck but this was hit and caught fire. She stated he would be evacuated to England as soon as it was possible to remove him. Official notice was also received from Ottawa that he had been severely burned and wounded.

Pte. Weidmark enlisted a year ago at Kingston with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. He trained at Peterboro and Camp Borden before going overseas, where he transferred to the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry. He is the son of Mrs. H. P. Weidmark, Picton.

Lieut. Rex Walters, son of Mrs. Case Walters, Picton, has been wounded in Italy. No details were received. He was serving with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and had been overseas 14 months. He graduated from the Officers' Training School, Brockville, and earlier trained with the reserve unit here. A brother, Donald, resides in Kingston.

Flight Lieut. George Lane, R.A.F., is reported missing overseas according to word received by Mr. and Mrs. George Cook, from their daughter, Mrs. Lane, formerly Olga Cook. No details were given. He trained with the R.A.F. here and Mrs. Lane joined him in England a few months ago. He had nearly completed his tour of operations. Mrs. Lane is a sister of Mrs. P. A. $27,000 SCATTERED ON TRACK

Port Moody, B.C., Sept. 7 (CP)—When the Canadian Pacific east-bound passenger train passed through here yesterday it left a blizzard of money in its wake. An estimated $27,000 was scattered up and down the track when a mail bag, thrown from the moving train to the station platform, fell under the wheels and split open. Destined for the Royal Bank of Canada here the money was the Thurston-Flavelle Lumber Company payroll.

Postal officials said most of the money was recovered.

Don't Delay Buying Coal

It is very comforting to know that when wintry blizzards howl, snowbanks pile up around the house and temperatures drop to sub-zero level, there is plenty of coal in the cellar.

Last year, it will be recalled, those who derive their winter heat via the coal-and-shovel, or stoker source, were warned to "stock up" during the summer months so that dealers could spread deliveries over the summer and autumn months and avoid the inevitable "jam" at the first approach of cold weather.

The coal-burning public co-operated with the result that everyone was satisfied. The dealer spaced his deliveries; the householder had his fuel; transportation problems were made lighter, and general worries were eased.

But that was last year. Perhaps it is because things worked out so well that a feeling of complacency has obsessed fuel-burners this year. Those who think that coal is available, and wait merely for the ordering, are due for a jolt. They would do well to remember these facts. This year there is less coal than in 1943; fewer trucks and men are available to handle orders; increased national consumption is 70 per cent over 1939 and supply now depends greatly on imports from the United States, which itself has a major shortage of anthracite that will undoubtedly be pared by cutting shipments to Canada.

So if householders desire that comforting feeling that the cellar is coaled, they would be wise to order immediately. In other words, stock up so you can stoke up.

Too Many Fires

By Proclamation published in the Canada Gazette the week commencing Sunday, October 8 and ending Saturday, October 14 has been appointed "Fire Prevention Week" in Canada. Authoritative statistics compiled by the Dominion Fire Commissioner show that during the past ten years 470,000 fires in the Dominion have destroyed insurable property valued at more than $264,000,000 and that during the same period 2,869 persons lost their lives, and at least 10,000 others have been seriously injured as the result of fire.

As pointed out in the Proclamation, humanitarian, wartime, and economic considerations demand that human life and material resources in Canada be so far as possible conserved in order that Canada's war effort be unobstructed and the general welfare of the people may be increased.

Towards this end, the Proclamation recommends that at some time during the week, as may be found most practicable, the following methods of fire prevention should be carried out:

That all residential, assembly, institutional, commercial and industrial buildings be carefully inspected and all conditions likely to cause or promote the spread of fire removed;

That all farm buildings and their surroundings, elevators, and warehouses be carefully inspected and all fire hazards remedied so as to safeguard vital food supplies;

That fire drills be held in all schools, institutions, and factories in order that a greater degree of safety be ensured by acquainting the occupants with the best and most expeditious ways of exit in time of danger, and that special instruction on the subject of fire prevention be given by the teachers and by municipal officials in the schools;

That all legislation and regulations enacted or issued by the Dominion, Provincial, or Municipal authorities dealing with fire prevention be given publicity by the municipal officials, and that by public meetings, the press, radio broadcasts, specially-prepared motion pictures, or otherwise as may seem most fit, endeavour be made to impress upon the citizens the national importance of safeguarding life and property from loss by fire.

Now is the time to look around to make certain that not a single preventable cause of fire will be overlooked.

A Golden Key

(Halifax Herald)

Which of the "Three R's"—reading, writing, arithmetic—is the most important? From the standpoint of the acquisition of education, do they rank of equal importance?

A notable British educationist thinks not. He stresses reading as the "very essence of education." Not reading, he explains, as taught in the ordinary elementary schools, but reading "so that one can read for pleasure." He adds:

"No one should leave school until he could read a page of good English without the slightest effort, hesitation or difficulty, and until he could explain the more important words. If such a rule existed there would be no illiteracy afterwards. People who get to the point where reading becomes a pleasure rather than an effort never go back."

Whilst the importance of writing and of mathematics cannot, of course, be minimized, the art of reading is obviously fundamental to education.

And to teach reading not as a mechanical effort merely to recognize words and their correct pronunciation but as a gateway to pleasure, an alluring avenue to knowledge, is a standard that should be set and aimed at in our public schools.

To make reading enjoyable to youth is to place in their hands a golden key to the world's vast treasury of knowledge.

Australian Hardwood

(Australian News Letter)

Australian hardwoods have surprised the United States Army craftsmen in the New Guinea area.

"Apparently they have nothing like it in America," writes an A.I.F. soldier, "and to see them attempting to drive a nail into it is always good for a laugh. They were using one piece to repair the keel of a small boat until someone noticed the chips were sinking in the water like stones. Then they were doubtful about launching the boat.

"One of the repair officers tells the story of how they were attempting to join two pieces together. They tried to bore them, but took the edge off the electric drill, they tried to nail them, and bent six pounds of nails; finally, he vows, they welded them together."

Australia has probably the greatest variety of hardwoods in the world, in a wide range of colors—from dark to pale red, pink, grey, chocolate, yellow and pale yellow, some almost colorless—and grain.

In weight, they range from 13 pounds per cubic foot, air dried (the Nettle Tree), to 80 pounds and over in some of the heavier acacias.

How Many Men?

(London Express)

Names of British Army formations are familiar to all newspaper readers. But how many men does it take to make up these formations? Numbers of men vary from time to time according to varying roles which the unit has to play. In general the figures for British (and Canadian) units are as follows:

Company: 80-160 men.
Battalion: 1,000-1,500 men.
Brigade: 3,500-5,000 men.

(The Germans do not have brigades. Instead their regiment roughly corresponds to our brigade, although rather smaller.)

Division: 12,000-15,000 men.
Corps: Two or three divisions.
Army: Three corps.
Army group: Two or more armies.

Sweden's Car Gas

Sweden is meeting the gas shortage by manufacturing methane gas in a sewage disposal plant at Stockholm for use as motor fuel for buses and other municipal vehicles. The cost is comparable to the pre-war cost of gasoline and the power derived closely corresponds to that obtained from the same fuel.

Pyle Overcome With Fatigue on Way Home to America for Long Rest

By ERNIE PYLE

Paris, (By Wireless)—This is the last of these columns from Europe. By the time you read this, the old man will be on his way back to America. After that will come a long, long rest. And after the rest—well, you never can tell.

Undoubtedly this seems to you to be a funny time for a fellow to be quitting the war. It is a funny time. But I'm not leaving because of a whim, or even especially because I'm homesick.

I'm leaving for one reason only—because I have just got to stop. "I've had it," as they say in the Army. I have had all I can take for a while.

I've been [illegible] months overseas since this war started, have written around 700,000 words about it, have totaled nearly a year in the front lines.

I do hate terribly to leave right now, but I have given out. I've been immersed in it too long. My spirit is wobbly and my mind is confused. The hurt has finally become too great.

All of a sudden it seemed to me that if I heard one more shot or saw one more dead man, I would go off my nut. And if I had to write one more column I'd collapse. So I'm on my way.

It may be that a few months of peace will restore some vim to my spirit, and I can go warhorsing off to the Pacific. We'll see what a little New Mexico sunshine does along that line.

Even after two-and-half years of war writing there still is a lot I would like to tell. I wish right now that I could tell you about our gigantic and staggering supply system that keeps these great armies moving.

I'm sorry I haven't been able to get around to many branches of service that so often are neglected. I would like to have written about the Transportation Corps and the airport engineers and the wire-stringers and the chemical mortars and the port battalions. To all of those that I have missed, my apologies. But the Army over here is just too big to cover it all.

I know the first question everyone will ask when I get home is:

"When will the war be over?"

So I'll answer even before you ask me, and the answer is: "I don't know".

We all hope and most of us think it won't be too long now. And yet there's a possibility of it going on and on, even after we are deep in Germany. The Germans are desperate and their leaders have nothing to quit for.

Every day the war continues is another hideous blackmark against the German nation. They are beaten and yet they haven't quit. Every life lost from here on is a life lost to no purpose.

If Germany does deliberately drag this war on and on she will so infuriate the world by her inhuman bullheadedness that she is apt to be committing national suicide.

In our other campaigns we felt we were fighting, on the whole, a pretty good people. But we don't feel that way now. A change has occurred. On the western front the Germans have shown their real cruelty of mind. We didn't use to hate them, but we do now.

The outstanding figure on this western front is Lieut. Gen. Omar Nelson Bradley. He is so modest and sincere that he probably will not get his proper credit, except in military textbooks.

But he has proved himself a great general in every sense of the word. And as a human being, he is just as great. Having him in command has been a blessed good fortune for America.

I cannot help but feel bad about leaving. Even hating the whole business as much as I do, you come to be a part of it. And you leave some of yourself here when you depart. Being with the American soldier has been a rich experience.

To the thousands of them that I know personally and the other hundreds of thousands for whom I have had the humble privilege of being a sort of mouthpiece, this then is to say goodby—and good luck.

BULGARS DECLARE

recalled to Moscow for consultation, now was on his way back to Cairo, where a Bulgarian armistice delegation is waiting to reach terms with the Allies.

The Soviet government is understood to have felt that Bulgaria should conduct armistice talks through Soviet intermediation and not directly with the Americans and British, Ankara dispatches added.

Moscow also desires to see some members of the Communist Party in the Bulgarian government, it was said.

The Paris broadcast said the German Minister in Sofia was preparing to return home.

The United States Federal Communications Commission quoted a Bulgarian broadcast as saying Sofia also had broken relations with Mussolini's puppet regime in northern Italy and with the puppet regimes in Croatia and Slovakia.

There was no word here concerning Russia's reaction to Bulgaria's appeal for an armistice, delivered by the Sofia government yesterday only a few hours after Moscow had declared war upon Bulgaria.

Reason For Action

Bulgaria's action in breaking relations with Germany was said to have been taken because German troops attempted to disarm Bulgarian forces withdrawing from Yugoslavia.

The Sofia radio asserted there no longer were any German troops in Bulgaria.

Those who remained after the deadline have been disarmed and interned, the broadcast added.

Thus far there was no indication that Russian forces had crossed the Romanian border and entered Bulgaria. Latest advices from Moscow early today said that while the Soviet government had made no public move toward granting Bulgaria's request for an armistice it apparently had restrained the Red army from starting an invasion.

Authoritative sources here said they had no information concerning a Bulgarian break with Germany.

Russia Remains Silent

Moscow, Sept. 7 (AP)—Soviet Russia remained silent today on the Bulgarian government's plea for an armistice while apparently restraining the Red army from an invasion, but called upon the Bulgarian people to "break the German alliance imposed on them and re-establish their independence and national honor."

The Foreign Commissariat, releasing the texts of diplomatic exchanges between Moscow and Sofia since spring, declared these exchanges proved "the desire of the Bulgarian ruling circles to collaborate in the Hitlerite war against the Russian people."

The releases asserted that as long ago as early in the year the Germans were making military use of Bulgaria's airfields, ports and territory.

The Bulgarian reply of April [illegible] was a blanket denial, but it promised an inquiry if the Kremlin would communicate the facts upon which the protest was based.

Permission Requested

Two days later the Soviet government requested permission to open consulates in two Black Sea harbors, but the Bulgarian regime evaded this issue until July 29, when it at last agreed to the opening of one, the Commissariat declared.

During this period, said the Russian statement, "the principal question became the passage of German troops through Bulgaria."

Following the successes of the Red army's summer offensive and the Allied landings in France June 6, the Soviet government formally demanded Aug. [illegible] that Bulgaria break off relations with Germany.

This demand went unanswered. A Russian note of Aug. [illegible] sharply warned Sofia about Bulgaria granting passage to German troops fleeing from Soviet forces in Romania. The note described this passage as "direct support of Germany in the war" and requested that it cease without delay.

Two days ago Russia declared war on Bulgaria.

YOUNG FOLKS AND OLD FOLKS IN SAME BOAT

Lack of "pep", rheumatiz, leg cramps at night and fatigability, the four most frequent complaints of persons who are physiologically older than their years are, in my opinion, manifestations of nutritional deficiency rather than signs of old age.

In preceding talks about this I suggested that people with these complaints supplement their ordinary diet with a daily ration of vitamin D (1,500 to 3,000 units) and vitamin B-complex (250 to 500 units thiamin, 1,000 to 2,000 micrograms riboflavin etc.) and, particularly those with rheumatiz or leg cramps, additional calcium. All of this being for such persons essential food, not medicine —as essential for health and functional efficiency as is any other food.

The ideal way to get the necessary amounts of these essentials daily is of course in natural food. But let any ordinary citizen try to get genuine whole wheat bread to eat and see how far he goes in his movement back to nature. Or for that matter, try to buy a few pounds of unrefined, natural, raw sugar and see how quickly the merchants, clerks and your neighbors will mark you as a nut. Yet, short of replacing refined white flour with real whole wheat flour and refined white sugar with unrefined, natural, raw or brown sugar (though not the pale imitation sugar refiners try to palm off on the public as "brown sugar" today) it is practically impossible to get from even the most liberal and varied diet a youth or an adult or elderly person may take today enough of the essential vitamins D and B-complex and minerals calcium, phosphorus and perhaps iron and iodine to maintain good health, normal growth, functional efficiency and "pep".

You see, most of the calories in the average diet are derived from refined white flour and refined white sugar or the delectable, appetizing, plentiful, cheap, always easy to eat or drink things made of them. If one gets over half of his daily calories from such items one just will not take enough of the so-called "protective" foods (foods that supply vitamins and minerals the body requires) to maintain the intake of vitamins and minerals on a level adequate for normal nutrition.

So, as I see it, the health of the nation is poor all around. The old folks and the young folks are in the same boat. Indeed they have the same complaints, although they prefer different ways of expressing them. So I prescribe the same remedy for grandpa, grandma and the kids—supplement the diet with a daily ration of vitamin D, vitamin B-complex and a good dash of calcium and phosphorus. But remember, this is FOOD, not medicine.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Rupture or Breach is Hernia

Can the injection treatment cure a rupture as well as a hernia? As our doctor explained it mine is a rupture and it would be impossible for injections to repair rupture.

(J. P. C.)

Answer—Either you or your doctor misunderstands. Of course rupture or breach is only another name for hernia. By whatever name it is as likely to be curable by the ambulant or injection method as it is by surgery. If I know of a physician in your vicinity who is skilled in the ambulant method I'll be glad to name him by mail if you provide stamped envelope bearing your address. Many of the best doctors I did have on my list are now in military service. I do not answer clippings.

Milk

I was thrilled by your recent article—Milk the Best Food. Have all my life been a big milk drinker. Raised on a farm where we always had plenty of milk, cream, butter.

(T. H.)

Answer—Why does a question like this turn up when it is hours since breakfast. Away we go to the dairy in the hills, where we could watch the farmer's collie trot down over the crick bridge, up into the woods on the hillside, drive the cows back to the barn. Then, boy, oh, boy,—the taste of that fresh live milk—all we could drink at cowside. You failed to mention cheese—any and every kind of cheese should be included with milk, skim milk, separator milk, real buttermilk, artificial "buttermilk"—skim milk in which particles of fat are mixed together with lactic bacilli to sour it—dried powdered milk, evaporated milk, condensed milk, Bulgarian milk, Acidophilus milk, sour milk, whey, every item is desirable, if you like it, in the everyday diet.

HELGOLAND AND HELIGOLAND

After Nazi Germany is defeated it seems hardly probable that Britain will permit Germany to retain possession of the tiny island which lies in the North Sea 28 miles off the northwest coast of the German mainland and which the British call Heligoland and the Americans Helgoland.

Helgoland is only about 130 acres in area, although its sheer red sandstone cliffs rise 200 feet above the sea.

The island was much larger in area within historic times and is still being gradually reduced in size by sea erosion.

During the Middle Ages Helgoland belonged to the dukes of Schleswig-Holstein.

In 1807, during the Napoleonic wars, Great Britain obtained possession of it from Denmark, but in 1890 Britain traded it to Germany for Zanzibar, a large island in the Indian Ocean lying 23 miles off the eastern coast of Africa and often called the Isle of Cloves because it produces the greater part of the world's supply of that spice.

This trade turned out to be a bad bargain for Britain. Germany used Helgoland as a naval base against Britain during the First World War. The Treaty of Versailles provided that Germany should remain in possession of Helgoland on condition that she dismantle all fortification and not fortify it again. But Germany refortified the island heavily again and proceeded to use it as a naval and air base against Britain upon the outbreak of the present war.

The waters between the island and the mainland are known as the Bight of Helgoland, the scene of a major naval engagement during the First World War.

The first element in "Helgoland" is from a Teutonic word meaning "holy" and the name literally means "holy land." It is believed that the island received its name from the presence there of some kind of religious shrine in ancient times.

In normal times Helgoland is inhabited for the most part by fishermen and their families.

On one corner of the tiny plateau is the little town of Oberland. At the base of the sandstone cliff is another settlement known as Unterland. Steps and elevators are used by persons going from one of these settlements to the other.

WEDDINGS

VADER—HORNICK

The home of Mrs. Launcelot Vader of Massassaga, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday, Sept. 2, at ten a.m., when the marriage of Elfreida Isabel Hornick and Clinton Edward Vader was solemnized by Rev. G. A. Adamson.

The attendants were Miss Iona Ida Wood, of Belleville, and Jack Vader, brother of the groom. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Wm. G. Hornick, of Tweed, Ontario.

The bride was lovely in her dress of turquoise blue triple sheer with matching accessories and corsage of American Beauty roses. The bridesmaid's dress was of ice cream pink silk jersey with black accessories and corsage of white roses.

After the wedding dinner the happy young couple left for Montreal. On their return they will reside at 50 Everett Street, Belleville.

WELSMAN—STARK

Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, September 2, at four o'clock when Rev. A. J. Wm. Myers united in marriage Corporal Eva Loretta Stark, C.W.A.C., Kingston, Ont., only daughter of Mrs. Mae Hopkinson, 36 Champlain Ave., Nitro, Quebec, and Corporal Yoris Bruce Welsman, R.C.C.S., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Welsman, 2nd Rose Ave., Toronto, Ont.

Baskets of gladioli and early Autumn flowers decorated the altar.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her uncle, Melvin McConnell, Picton, Ont., to the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin, played by Mrs. M. P. Duff, Belleville, who rendered several other selections during the ceremony.

She was attired in a long fitted gown of white crepe with lace insets. The shirred bodice was finished by a sweetheart neckline and the long sleeves ended in points over her wrists. Lace mitts, and a string of pearls, the gift of the groom, completed her ensemble. Her fingertip veil of net was fastened to her hair by a Mary Queen of Scots headdress. Her bridal bouquet was American Beauty roses, baby breath and maidenhair fern.

Corporal Peggy Wallis, C.W.A.C., Kingston, Ont., was bridesmaid, wearing a long dress of baby blue taffeta made on similar lines to that worn by the bride. Her shoulder-length veil in matching shade to her gown fell from a headdress of flowers. She carried a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses, maidenhair fern and baby breath.

The groom was assisted by his brother, J. S. Welsman, Oakville, Ont. The ushers were friends of the groom: Bandsmen H. R. Carter, W. L. Medhurst, T. E. Cowin, all of Barriefield, Ont.

The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a white gold compact, and to the organist, a bone china cup and saucer. The groom's gift to the best man was a woven gold key chain.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Quinte Hotel. The bride's mother received in brown sheer crepe, with gold accessories. She wore a corsage of bronze roses and sweetpeas. The groom's mother assisted wearing a plum ensemble with matching accessories. Her corsage was of Talisman roses and sweetpeas.

The table was decorated with silver rose bowls filled with Autumn flowers, and centred with a three-tiered wedding cake.

Following the reception the happy couple left amid showers of rose petals and confetti for an extended wedding trip to Ivy Lea, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Toronto, Muskoka and Nitro, P.Q. On their return they will resume their respective duties at Kingston, Ont.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto, Oakville, Guelph, Aurora, Kingston, Picton, Tweed and Nitro, Quebec.

Explicit Instructions Carefully Followed Ensure Beginner's Luck In Jam Making

By LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief, Consumer Section,
Dominion Dept. of Agriculture

Whether she be a brand-new bride, a bachelor girl or a grandmother with years of housekeeping behind her, every woman thrills to the sight of a batch of home-made jam, its jewel colours gleaming through the glass jars.

Don't let inexperience or the fact that you've only got a two-by four kitchenette stop you, for jam making is not difficult and, when directions are carefully followed and proven recipes used, success is bound to follow. Incidentally, few things will do more to enhance your reputation as a housekeeper than the sight and taste of your own home-made jam.

All set to go? Then here are the general directions and some excellent recipes from the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Use only firm, ripe fruit, never over-ripe fruit or green fruit.

Measure ingredients accurately.

Heat fruit slowly to extract the juice. A little water may be added to prevent sticking but remember that the more water that's added, the longer the jam will have to boil. Long boiling kills the fresh fruit flavor and darkens the color, so be sparing with the water.

When the fruit used has a tough skin, like grapes and plums, the fruit is cooked before the sugar is added, for no amount of cooking will make those skins tender after the sugar goes in.

How to tell when the jam is done? The easiest way, of course is to use a jelly thermometer and when it registers 220 degrees F. it's off the stove and into the jars. Appearance is deceiving to the inexperienced, for jams thicken considerably as they cool. Times are only approximate but a simple test can be used for 'doneness'. Dip a cold spoon into the boiling jam; when the jam is done it will remain heaped up in the spoon, and not be runny.

If a scum forms, skim it off.

Pour the hot jam into hot, sterilized jars. (Be sure to stand the jars on a folded cloth or in an inch or so of hot water while filling them. They will crack if placed on a cold surface.)

Leave a good quarter-inch space at the top of the jars and set to cool.

When cold pour a thin layer of melted paraffin wax over the top of the jam and when it is hardened add a second layer. This time tilt the jars gently so that the wax runs a little way up side of the jar and makes a close seal.

Cover with either metal or brown paper covers.

Store in a cool, dry, dark place. Warmth and dampness invite the growth of yeasts, which cause fermentation and of moulds, and light fades the color.

Peach, Carrot and Apple Conserve

2 cups diced carrots
1-4 cup boiling water
2 cups diced peaches
2 cups diced, tart apples
3 cups sugar

Add water to carrots and cook five minutes. Add peaches and apples and cook five minutes. Add sugar, cook until thick, about 20 minutes. Pour into hot, sterilized jars, cool and seal. Yield, about 2 1-2 pints.

Damson Jam

3 quarts Damson plums
2 cups water
7 cups sugar

Wash Damsons, add water and simmer for 30 minutes, skimming off the pits that rise to the surface. Add sugar and boil gently until thick, about 30 minutes. Pour into hot, sterilized jars, cool and seal. Yield, 4 to 4 1-2 pints.

Medley Fruit Conserve

8 pears
8 peaches
4 quinces
2 tart apples
Grated rind and juice of 1 lemon
Sugar

Wash, peel and core pears, peaches, quinces and apples. Put fruit through chopper using a coarse blade. Measure, and for each cup of fruit pulp allow 1-2 cup sugar. Put fruit and sugar in a bowl in alternate layers, cover and let stand overnight. Place in preserving kettle, add lemon rind and juice and cook until thick, about 30 minutes. Pour into hot, sterilized jars, cool and seal. Yield, about 5 pints.

Stoco Couple Married Fifty Years Still Operate Farm of 290 Acres

Mr. and Mrs. J. Masterson Hold Family Get-Together on Labor Day

RECEIVE MANY GIFTS

Still superintending the operations of their 290 acre farm in Hungerford township despite their advanced years, Mr. and Mrs. J. Masterson, of Stoco, on Sunday will celebrate the 50th anniversary of their marriage.

Although the actual anniversary of their marriage will be September 10th., the occasion was celebrated by a family get-to-gether on Labor Day when eleven of their 12 children and other members of the immediate family paid tribute to the bride and groom of fifty years. The couple have 39 grandchildren.

Slightly failing eyesight has failed to keep down the energy of the pioneer Hungerford township farmer who, although now in his 77th year, assists in the operation of his large farm and in the milking of 18 cows night and morning. In addition to looking after her regular household work, Mrs. Masterson, after raising twelve children of her own, craved the companionship of children and is giving a home to three shelter children, ranging in ages from eight months to 14 years. To them she is "grandmother".

It was a real old-fashioned celebration which took place at the Masterson homestead on Labor Day with 71 persons sitting down to dinner and almost an equal number for supper in the evening. During the day many friends and neighbors called adding their felicitations to the enjoyment of the occasion. The bride and groom of 50 years were the recipients of many gifts.

During the morning High Mass was celebrated for Mr. and Mrs. Masterson in St. Edmund's Catholic Church at Stoco, the church in which the couple were married. During Mass, Theresa Cassidy favored with a solo with Clara Maloney presiding at the organ.

Present at the celebration were the attendants of 50 years ago. Mr. Thomas Masterson, now of Belleville, was his brother's groomsman, while Mrs. Nelson Caul, also of Belleville, sister of Mrs. Masterson, acted as bridesmaid. Prior to her marriage Mrs. Masterson was Miss Ann Laveck.

Nearly all of Mr. and Mrs. Masterson's children live in Belleville. The children are: Mrs. Ted (Mary) Bashell; Mrs. Jack (Elizabeth) Cronin; Fred Masterson; Leonard Masterson, all of Belleville; Francis, Hungerford Township; Mrs. Claude (Bertha) Finnegan, Belleville; William Masterson, Campbellford; Stafford Masterson; Donald Masterson; Mrs. Simon Malloy, all of Belleville; Mrs. Ed. (Leona) Parcell, Alberta and Mrs. Fred (Lena) Ervine, of this city.

Witness Testifies Deceased Hid From Accused

Whitby, Ont., Sept. 7. (CP)—A Crown witness testified today that Michael Sheveluk, 25-year-old caretaker of a Jewish boys camp near Pickering, who was murdered nearly seven years ago, hurried to the cellar of the camp to hide when Samuel Michael visited the camp about a month before the murder.

The witness, Ole Christensen, was testifying at the preliminary hearing of Michael, a farmer, on a charge of murder in Sheveluk's death in 1937. Sheveluk's body was found on a sideroad near the Camp No. 27, 1937. There was a bullet wound in his back, his throat was slashed and his body mutilated.

Christensen, saying he lived at the camp with Sheveluk in 1937, testified that Michael's 10-year-old son visited the camp to ask for money for his parents and that Sheveluk replied he had no money for them.

Under cross-examination Christensen said Sheveluk might have hidden because he owed Michael money.

Dr. H. C. Pearson, coroner, said that Sheveluk died without a struggle and that a magazine was found under his head. It was open at a page bearing the caption: "Behind the Sex Crime".

Michael was arrested three weeks ago by Provincial Police who had continued investigation for nearly seven years.

The hearing is continuing.

Wagner and Sexton Bout In Semi-Final of Wrestling Card Actually Stole the Show

Two Versatile Mat Men Wrestle Thirty Minutes to Draw

KATAN BEATS MONAHAN

Promoter Frank Tunney's advertised "ruffians' riot" at the Hume Arena Wednesday night didn't vindicate any of the pacyderm villains on the bill. As a matter of fact it was in reverse as the so-called badmen came out on the short end of the night's entertainment, much to the satisfaction of over 1,500 gleeful patrons.

In the main bout "Irish Jerry" Monahan was so surprised at being the peoples' choice he became overzealous and lost to "Panther John" Katan, the Palermo finger-twister. It was the semi-final go between Bob "The Octopus" Wagner and Frank Sexton, the Pacific coast champ, that actually stole the show, as these two ranking ring gladiators battled 30 full minutes to a draw in a bout, that left nothing to the imagination.

In the main scrap "Killer" Katan started early in his attempt to dissect California Jerry Monahan by beating the gong. Now when two such mat villains meet it left the fans in somewhat of a quandry as to which they should elect as their verbal choice. Finally Monahan got the nod and that is perhaps what caused his downfall. After all Monahan isn't used to vocal encouragement and no wonder he became over-anxious in his effort to please his new-found friends.

One Fall Didn't Count

To demonstrate his surprise and in an effort to please his supporters Monahan pinned both Referee Maxwell and Katan early in the bout, but of course as the official was the "under-cover man" that one didn't count. As a matter of fact Maxwell didn't take any too well in having upwards to 500 pounds of humanity heaped upon him from the rafters and when Monahan gained a body hold on Katan, while leaning against the ropes Arbiter Maxwell saw his golden opportunity. With a mighty heave Maxwell put his entire leverage to the ropes and off bounced the gladiators with Monahan naturally toppling over backwards with Katan atop him and before the fans could light up another fag, Monahan was counted out.

Just to demonstrate his muscular ability Monahan evened matters in the second round with three successive back-breakers that left "finger-twister John" helpless and all was even.

Monahan Favored

The third round saw Monahan still the favorite and still bewildered over the kindly reception he was receiving. "Am I hearing things?" Monahan asked himself as he applied his new-fangled neck-whip. But before Monahan could answer his own question Katan supplied the reply with a back flip and flying mare that left Monahan hors de combat. Moral—don't ask yourself questions unless you know the $64.00 answer.

For 30 minutes Bob Wagner and Frank Sexton battled it out in the semi-final with the lithe Sexton being the favorite. However, this didn't bother Wagner to any noticeable degree, on the contrary the Oregon Octopus seemed to thrive on the cat-calls and verbal abuses from the fans. Only once was Wagner in a bewildered position, that coming, when he gained a double toe hold only to discover he had applied the pressure on his own feet. Of course, that isn't being done this year so Wagner promptly disregarded such foolish practice for the duration.

Singh Disqualified

The opener was the classic of the night. Actually it could well be termed a "chewing match," because when Nanjo Singh, the mad Hindu, wasn't chewing on Pierre DeGlane's arm, the Montreal adonis was taking bites out of the Hindu's flesh as he later washed out his mouth with a towel. When the principals weren't chewing each other, referee Cliff Fox was chewing the gab, paramountly at Singh for roughing matters until finally, when the Hindu physically attacked both the official and DeGlane, arbiter Fox waved his arms in the fashion of a baseball umpire that indicated Singh was OUT, or in wrestling terms—disqualified.

New York, Sept. 7 (AP) — The Major and Minor Baseball Leagues have scheduled their winter meetings for the same days—the big leagues Dec. 5-6-7 in New York and the minors starting Dec. 6 at Buffalo....Maybe Jedge Bramham figures that's the best way to keep the major leaguers from interfering with his charges.... Latest tip on the next National Hockey League president is Dr. William G. Hardy, University of Alberta professor and amateur hockey bigwig....The job may be offered to Connie Smythe first but nobody thinks he'd be interested in the kind of dough it pays.

Dodger Didn't Dodge

When the Newport News Dodgers were playing the Richmond Colts in a Piedmont League game the other day, the Richmond catcher, Cabrera, tried to pull a fast one by falling to the ground and clutching his ankle when a pitch hit the dirt near him....The ump didn't fall for it and sent him back to the plate... A couple of innings later Cabrera tried to block the plate when a Dodger slid home...When the dust cleared, Cabrera was writhing on the ground again—and that time it wasn't a gag. He had to leave the game.

When the Pirates swept four games against the Cardinals recently it was the first time the Cards had been blanked in a four-game series since July 1940, when the Bucs also did the trick...Everett McGowan, one-time speed skating champ and pro hockey player, has a new wrinkle in the ice show business. His review will play the Massachusetts State fair at Brockton on a portable outdoor rink.

Babe Grattan Boy Wins Pacing Futurity Staged at Stratford

(By The Canadian Press)

Two heats in each division of the three-year-old futurity at Stratford yesterday were completed before rain brought a second postponement of the harness card, originally scheduled for Labor Day, to Friday afternoon for the balance of the program. Babe Grattan Boy swept both contests for the pacers, his best time being 2:18½ on an uncertain track. Dillon Mc. Jr., driven by Milton, was leading in the trot for the $3,000 purse although stoutly opposed by Honey Lee. Dillon Mc. Jr. travelled the initial heat in 2:17 ¼. Lee Dillon captured both heats of the 2:26 trot.

Coach Hap Emms has issued a call to players of the St. Louis Flyers, new team in the American Hockey League, to report for training at Port Arthur, Ont., Sept. 25. Several recruits are expected to be drafted from the Port Arthur amateur club.

Vera Baldwin, driven by her owner, Louis Floyd of Johnston, Va., last night paced to victory in the mile feature, defeating David Mack and Belle Dale, the favorite, in 2:09¼ and paying $32.70, the event being part of the Grand Circuit card at Wesbury, N.Y.

The senior Western baseball championship was decided at Saskatoon last night when the Saskatoon Pats vanquished Edmonton 8-2 in the fourth and deciding match of the final series.

Toronto, Sept. 7 —(CP)— Horse racing returns to Toronto this Saturday after an absence of more than two months when the fall meeting gets under way at the Woodbine race track. The meet will take on the aspect of an international contest with a number of sprinters from New York and Detroit vieing for the big races.

The Kingston Ordnance softball team has been forced to withdraw from the O.A.S.A. playdowns because of the recent army ruling with respect to championship competition, it was announced yesterday by Secretary Frank Feaver of the Provincial Association at Hamilton. Belleville Marines, runners-up in the Western Ontario League, have replaced the Soldiers and are drawn to meet Oshawa in the zone finals.

In the first setto of the O.B.A. Junior "B" playdowns at St. Catharines last night between the Kitchener Rangers and the St. Catharines Lincolns, the home team was swamped 7-0. The Lincolns helped themselves to defeat with a total of six errors.

Working Agreement With Philadelphia Athletics Made

Toronto, Sept. 7 —(CP)— President Peter Campbell of Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League last night announced renewal of a working agreement with the American League's Philadelphia Athletics.

Under terms of the agreement, three Toronto pitchers—righthanders Al Jarlett, Woody Crowson and Luther Knerr—have been sold to the Athletics and will join them at the close of the 1944 International League season. The Leafs obtained an undisclosed amount of cash and title to several players in the Philadelphia organization. Selection of the players will be made by the Toronto management at a later date.

Newark Bears Virtually Tied With Baltimore Orioles for Lead

BALTIMORE BEATEN

By The Associated Press

Although Baltimore holds the International League lead by 8-10ths of a percentage point, Newark Bears have hoisted themselves to a virtual tie with the flock.

Frank Hiller pitched for Newark as the Bears smothered Jersey City yesterday, 8-1, while Baltimore lost to Syracuse, 2-1. Hiller racked up his 15th win aided by 10 hits off three Little Giant pitchers.

Baltimore was scheduled to play a doubleheader with Syracuse, but rain halted the nightcap. Ben Geraghty decided things in the Chiefs' favor in the first game when he tripled Dutch Mele home with the clincher in the eighth.

Gene Dellinger clouted Montreal Royals to a 3-2 win over Buffalo as Wayne Collins scattered four Bison hits. Going four-for-four, Dellinger doubled Walt Chipple in with the winning run in the eighth after Buffalo had knotted the count at 2-2. Montreal's victory puts the Royals one game away from the fifth place Giants and drops the Bisons to within half a game of the fourth place Maple Leafs.

DETROIT TIGERS CLOSE IN ON YANKS

By The Associated Press

Steve O'Neill hopped up with another route-going pitcher in Rufe Gentry today as the Detroit Tigers moved to within a game and a half of the Yankees in the American League but the veteran Roger "Doc" Cramer took the play with his .537 nine-day batting splurge.

The Detroit club could be composed of two fellows named Hal Newhouser and Dizzy Trout for all the average fan know but the all important matter of base hits was being taken care of by the 38-year-old Cramer.

Known best for his days of stardom with the Philadelphia A's, Cramer has set the pace for the Tigers with 22 hits in his last 41 at bats, boosting his average from a sub par .196 on June 15 to .280.

Cramer continued his spree with a triple and single, scoring two runs in last night's 3-2 edge over Chicago, only game in the majors. Gentry scattered eight White Sox singles in his second complete game since June 22. It was Rufe's eighth win and Johnny Humphries' ninth loss, winding up the season series between the two clubs with Detroit holding a 13-9 margin.

Hell-Fire Corner In England Quiet

Dover, England, Sept. 7. (CP)— Residents of this hell-fire corner were taking perhaps their last box seat view of the war yesterday, watching the Canadians across the Channel fight on both sides of Calais.

The German coastal guns drove many Dover folk to live in caves, but now quiet was due for this corner of England which has been Britain's front line for five years.

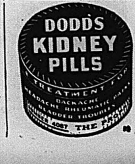
Shells splashing into the smoke-shrouded sea southwest of Boulogne this afternoon led to the belief that Germans in the Channel port of 52,000 were duelling with Allied warships.

Medium guns on the coast near Wimereaux, between Boulogne and Calais, opened up at one p.m., and continued banging away at three.

Two huge fires licked the outskirts of Boulogne.

Big guns turned briefly toward England and a shell warning sent spectators hurrying to caves. A few minutes later, a new smoke screen drifted across the Boulogne harbor entrance and the battle din increased.

A steady stream of R.A.F. fighter squadrons added to the cacophony.



CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Evidence

Jones was exceptionally cheerful. All day long he had been whistling and humming at his work, until at last Brown asked him what was the matter.

"Well, you see," explained Jones, "my wife has lost her diamond engagement ring."

"Well what's there to be so cheerful about in that?" asked Brown.

"I'm waiting for her to tell me. You see, I found it in my trousers' pocket."

We're in Again.

When it was announced from O.A.S.A. headquarters yesterday that the SACO "Marines" were back in the provincial softball hunt once again thoughts ran back to the statements made by the Kingston Ordnance during the Soldier-Marine series when the Kingston Soldiers announced they had received the "green light" to continue into the provincial playdowns. Even at the time this was definitely against regulations handed down by Ottawa and had the Kingston league officials done the proper thing they would have sent out a civilian team. However, there was no civilian team in Kingston strong enough to meet the Marines, so like an old Kingston custom they went ahead with the Ordnance all-stars regardless as to ultimate results. (Anything to beat Belleville, you know.) However, virtue has its reward and the Marines now meet the Oshawa General Motors team, conquerors of Peterboro in the Eastern Ontario intermediate softball finals. The first game will be played in Oshawa this evening with the second game at the Fair Grounds here as a twilight fixture Saturday evening.

Players Known Here.

Like the Marines, the General Motors team boasts of two pitchers, Harvey Bennett, a long lean left-handed hurler, and Hillier, a right-hander. In the third game between Peterboro and Oshawa the Liftlock City nine batted Bennett out of the Oshawa box in the second inning, with Hillier taking over as relief hurler to win. However, Bennett had beaten the Petes in the first game of the series.

Other Oshawa players known in Belleville are Roy Covert, who played both hockey and softball here these many years back. Duke McGarry, who broke in with the Oshawa C.O.B.L. team years ago and Respond, who played first base in the Motor City both as a junior and an intermediate. Trott, in left, is another veteran player.

When the Marines left here at noon Manager Max Peoples wasn't sure whether he would start Bill Anderson or big Jim Hunter, with emphasis on the latter name, however. With the Marines back in the O.A.S.A. hunt the local softball balliwick should be jammed to the seams for the return game.

20 Years Ago.

It was exactly 20 years ago this month that both the Kingston Ponies and Peterboro were tossed out of the C.O.B.L. on their proverbial ear for playing ineligible players. Oshawa and Belleville, left by the wayside in the regular schedule, were then brought back into the picture to battle it out for the Central League bunting. Belleville won. That was in 1924. No win 1944 after Belleville had been eliminated by a team that should not have been in the softball play-offs, we find ourselves in somewhat of a similar position. Will history repeat itself in the ultimate result? Oshawa boasts of a strong defensive team, the ability to back up their pitcher being one of their principal features.

Getting back to that 20 years ago picture, the reason Peterboro and Kingston were disqualified was for using professionals, or players not eligible under the residence rule. Strangely enough both concerned were pitchers, Kelly for Kingston and Serth from Peterboro. After finishing third and fourth respectively Belleville beat Oshawa with Jack Oulette hurling for the locals and Duke Dainty for Oshawa.

Around the Town.

It looks like softball play-offs are on the upbeat insofar as Belleville is concerned this week..The Belleville Squires are now in the Junior O.A.S.A. semi-finals with Toronto.. the remaining two cities sponsoring junior softball being Windsor and Hamilton....The Belleville-Toronto series opens at Perth Square in Toronto on Saturday with the return game slated to be played back here next Wednesday....However, the Queen City sponsors are trying to have the second game played here on Saturday Sept. 16th, as the majority of the Toronto juniors are working, not going to school as juniors should be this day and age.... Then this evening sees the second game of the SWACO-Universal semi-final series in the Ladies' League at the Armouries Lawn when a loss for Jack Alexander's girls means elimination....At the same time baseball fans will have the opportunity of seeing some good ball at the Alemite Field this evening when the locals meet the Mountain View "Bombers" in an exhibition baseball tussle....Although it was advertised as "villains' night" at the Hume Arena last night, the badmen of the ring didn't exactly come out on top....Actually the semi-final between Bob Wagner and Frank Sexton stole the show and Promoter Frank Tunney could do worse than match these two top-ranking grapplers as the principals some other time. They are just about the best in the circuit.

Remember When.

Billy Papke knocked out Stanley Ketchel in three rounds at Los Angeles, Cal., 37 years ago tonight to win the world middleweight boxing championship. One year later Ketchel reversed the decision at San Francisco, Papke again claimed the title, however, after Ketchel was shot and killed in 1910.

750 U.S. Heavies Concentrate On German Troops

London, Sept. 7. (CP)—Some 700 United States heavy bombers flying from Italy bombed concentrations of German troops moving northward from south of the Danube Wednesday, along with enemy retreat routes in the Balkans.

They struck as wave upon wave of smaller American bombers battered besieged Brest for a solid hour and ranged behind the western front and into Germany, snarling transportation.

One large formation of heavy bombers from the south bombed a mass of enemy troops, tanks and vehicles jammed into the small town of Ofeskovac 150 miles southeast of the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade. Other heavies bombed the Oradea railyards, 125 miles southeast of the Hungarian capital of Budapest.

Before dawn, R.A.F. British mosquitos battered Hannover without loss and typhoons attacked shipping of Holland with rockets, sinking a medium sized vessel, set another afire and damaging three others.

British coastal and naval planes kept harassing German shipping along the coast, although weather worsened during the day.

37 MORE SUNK, DAMAGED

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Sept. 7. (CP)—In new attacks on the Philippines, Halmahera and the East Indies, Allied bombers destroyed or damaged 37 more Japanese cargo vessels and barges, including 13 filled with troops, it was disclosed Wednesday. This raised to at least 57 the three-day toll of enemy ships in this theatre.

LESSON NO. 474

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

As a ham invites eggs, so does each type of opening bid invite its fitting response. And if the opening is a signal, the responder completes the signal with the first reply.

An opening of two no-trump promises the equivalent of eight high cards (no-trump tricks). That needs one no-trump trick (high card) in partner's hand to make a game (nine tricks) at no-trump.

Such an opening is not forcing to game. Nor is it forcing for even one responding bid. If partner has not a high card, the answer is a pass. So, anything but a pass admits having a high card or more.

Notice that any response other than a pass admits having a high card. And let me remind you again that a high card is enough to help make a game with a two no-trump opening.

Therefore, although a two no-trump opening is not forcing to game, anything but a responding pass turns it into a forcing-to-game signal. And you can see the logic of that.

All bidding follows the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. And partner of an opening two no-trump may have a biddable suit for a takeout instead of a no-trump response.

If he does takeout, it is forcing to game. Because responder would have passed without a high card. And the fact that he made a takeout said he had a high card. Which is enough for a game.

Suppose partner opens with two no-trump when you have this hand:

♠Q J 9 5 4 2
♥8 5
♦7 6 3
♣4 2

With one high card, you must not pass. You have enough to bid three no-trump. But with your biddable suit, you should first takeout to three spades.

Partner now knows you have a high card, enough for three no-trump. You have merely given him the added information about your spade suit. If he passes, by cracky, the galoot must be wacky.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Christmas Holiday"

It's not often that a girl deliberately plans to stay up all night just so she'll be tired the next day.

However, that is exactly what Deanna Durbin did—all because of her most difficult scenes in Universal's "Christmas Holiday" which co-stars Miss Durbin and Gene Kelly, now playing at the McCarthy theatre.

The sequence is Christmas Eve mass, which Deanna attends with Dean Harens, whom she has just met. According to the story, as originally written by Somerset Maugham, Deanna is so deeply touched by the religious services that she breaks into heavy sobs bordering on hysteria.

If the script calls for a crying scene, Deanna has to work herself up to a state where she really feels like crying. From past experience, she has learned that she cries more easily when she is terribly tired.

So, since she knew that she would have to spend virtually an entire day sobbing as if her heart were breaking, the star decided that best start for such a performance would be to report for work literally exhausted.

"Did you ever try staying up all night with nothing in particular to do?" Deanna asks. "I never before knew that a night could be so long. I listened to a radio, read books, wrote letters, played the phonograph for what seemed like endless hours.

"Finally my alarm went off at 5:30. I had set it just as a precaution, in case I did fall asleep. Usually it's my pet hate. But that morning it was the nicest sound in the world. I took a shower, changed clothes, made some coffee and drove to the studio.

"When my hairdresser saw me she exclaimed, "Good heavens, Deanna, you look awful, I felt kind of awful too. But I knew I would be able to do those scenes well."

At 6:30 that evening the most exhausted girl in Hollywood was home and in bed.

AT THE BELLE

"The Navy Way," Funny

"The Navy Way", Paramount picture which is one of two swell features now on the Belle Theatre screen, is packed with enough thrills to satisfy the most exacting film fan. A story of the Great Lakes Naval Station, near Chicago, orientation grounds for many American seamen, the picture combines romance and comedy in addition to drama.

Bob Lowery and Jean Parker carry the major portion of the acting load but are ably supported by Roscoe Karns, Robert Armstrong, Bill Henry and others. The action deals with a group of raw recruits who receive their boot training at Great Lakes and follows their experiences right through the memorable graduation exercises.

"You Can't Ration Love", Musical

Described as a complete diet of diverting entertainment, "You Can't Ration Love," Paramount's new collegiate musical, is the second feature attraction. From all reports, this film about a university where girls ration their dates on a point system, is a laugh riot from start to finish.

Marjorie Weaver, in the role of screen siren, is the co-ed, who establishes the male rationing plan with the hope of dating Bill Edwards, Betty's beau. Complications arise when Johnnie Johnston, as "Two-point" Simpson, auditions for the varsity show by singing a classical number. It doesn't click so Betty remodels him from head to toe, transforming Johnnie into the male idol of the campus.

Versatile supporting players in the cast are Marie Wilson and Johnny "Scat" Davis; Christine Forsythe, Six-foot-two showgirl, and diminutive Roland Dupree, who bring in a slap-happy side dish in the form of a specialty dance to the catchy music of "How Did It Happen?" one of the five new tunes in the picture. The other four are "Ooh-Ah-Oh," "Nothing Can Replace a Man," "Love Is This," and "Look What You Did to Me." Added to the musical menu is a melodic old-timer, "Louise," which is bound to become a favorite again.

Sing and be happy with the New Community sing featurette to be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Ride Tenderfoot Ride"

Gene Autry is back again at the Capitol theatre in his greatest triumph "Ride Tenderfoot Ride" with many of your favorites in the supporting cast which include Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee, June Storey, Warren Hull and Joe Frisco and the Pacemakers.

"Henry Aldrich Swings It."

Henry Aldrich is having his troubles again at the Capitol theatre, the added hit in Paramount's amusing comedy, "Henry Aldrich Swings It," with Jimmy Lydon playing that bewildered, bedeviled youngster in his usual fine style.

Henry gets into a jam when he accidentally exchanges his cheap fiddle for a $10,000 Stradivarius belonging to a concert artist who visits Centerville High School. Henry's life is complicated by the fact that he leads a swing band at a shady night club and when the place is raided he leaves the expensive instrument behind him in his rush to get away. With him, as usual, is Charles Smith in the role of "Dizzy."

2,300 OF 8,000

In an earlier report Mr. Churchill said on Aug. 2 the first 5,340 bombs launched had killed 4,735 persons—mostly in London and injured another 14,000 seriously enough to require hospital treatment.

In the same report the Prime Minister disclosed that 17,000 houses were destroyed and 800,000 damaged, although a large proportion of these only had windows broken and 600,000 were restored quickly to habitability.

It is unlikely that the final casualties and damage from the robot bombardment will be disclosed prior to the reassembling of parliament Sept. 26.

Battle of London Over

Lt.-Col. Edwin Duncan Sandys, who as chairman of the War Cabinet Committee was in charge of counter-measures against Hitler's secret weapon, told a press conference:

"Except possibly for the last few shots, the battle of London is over."

The defence afforded by the balloon barrage, anti-aircraft guns and fighters was perfected to such a high degree that 97 of 101 bombs fired at England Aug. 28 were shot down, he said.

This, coupled with the Allied encirclement of the robot bomb coast, has ended all but the threat of robots launched from planes—carried pickaback style on Heinkel-111s.

"This form of attack can, of course, be carried on from airfields in the heart of Germany," he said. "We cannot therefore as yet assure the public that the flying-bomb attacks will cease altogether. We can, however, be reasonably confident that the scale of attack will be very small.

Tribute Paid Airmen

Col. Sandys paid tribute to Allied Air Forces for the systematic destruction of robot installations since August 1943.

"The targets included launching sites, storage depots, and communications in France as well as factories, special fuel plants and experimental stations in Germany," he said.

"Altogether they have dropped on these targets over 100,000 tons of bombs."

The attacks have cost British and American Air Forces 450 planes and 2,900 airmen, he disclosed.

"Our American Allies," Sandys told almost 200 British and American newsmen, "have thrown themselves into the job of beating the bombs with as much energy and enthusiasm as though New York or Washington had been the victim of the attack.

"American batteries provided about one-eighth of the total enemy heavy anti-aircraft guns over the south coast and certainly contributed a full share. Some of their equipment was the very latest.

"Necessary priority was given to our needs here by the President himself in response to the personal request of the Prime Minister."

No over-all official figures were available, but it was a conservative guess that at the height of the attack there may have been close to 2,000,000, or about 26 per cent of London's population evacuated.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, Sept. 7 (CP)—They are reviving the old argument over who should be classed as the world's outstanding athlete, and a United States publication has plumped for Canada's own Lionel Conacher as logical contender for the crown. Usually the great track star, Jim Thorpe, is nominated for the title, and it is a startling change to see a Canadian get such mention.

Commenting on it, Elmer Ferguson of the Montreal Herald points out that Conacher never was great at individual athletics, but made a specialty of starring at team games, where he truly excelled. Thorpe on the other hand was more of an individualist and made his name as such, except for his prowess at football.

Conacher at his best was a great team man. He has often been called Canada's greatest in this game, and stood out above the crowd as much as Thorpe did in U.S. pigskin circles. Besides that he was a star at lacrosse, one of hockey's greats, a fair baseball player—though not as good as he might have been if he had exerted himself, a good boxer and wrestler, and he even golfed a bit.

All that certainly qualifies him as one of the greatest of the greats.

Meat and Poison:

Apparently the wrestling fraternity is hoping to make capital out of football's sad state in western Canada, Dave (Regina Leader-Post) Dryburgh reports. With Winnipeg out of the senior game, and Regina's prospects very dim without Winnipeg competition, the wrestlers want to move in and corral some fan interest. Dryburgh reports they have ideas for educating Edmonton, Moose Jaw, Regina and Winnipeg in the whimsicalities of the mat game.

Incidentally:

Watchim, classy trotter owned by Halifax Alderman Frank Adams, is much in demand after his record-breaking performances on Maritime tracks this summer. United States interests are said to have offered $13,000 for the horse. That's one of the best prices mooted for a Maritimer racer since the Fredericton horse, Bill Sharon, was knocked down for $25,000....Gordon Thompson, former western Canada welter and lightweight champion, is still flying high these days—he just earned his paratrooper wings at Camp Shilo, Man.....International League umpire "Butch" Henline may get a big league trial next summer..English and Scottish football enthusiasts are always ready at the doffing of a Glengarry to argue the merits of their respective games, but the boys at Peterborough, Ont., decided to settle it for sure. The English and Scots, none under 40, will tangle in a special international match, with the Irish providing the officials.

AT THE CAPITOL—Young love in bloom as represented by Jimmy Lyden and Mimi Chandler in Paramount's delightful comedy, "Henry Aldrich Swings It," which is now at the Capitol Theatre. The added Western hit "Ride Tenderfoot Ride" stars Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette

Alert Traffic Officer Arrests Wanted Men

Trenton, Sept. 7. (Special to The Ontario Intelligencer.)—Wanted in Hamilton for armed robbery and in Welland for the theft of a motor car, two Welland men, Harold G. Williams, 21, and John S. Ford, 23, were arrested by Traffic Officer Harry Caldwell following a speedy chase north on the No. 6 Repair Depot road east of here yesterday. Williams and Ford are also wanted here in Trenton on a charge of obtaining gasoline fraudently.

The Welland pair obtained nine gallons of gas from a local service station and drove away without paying for the same. At the same time Traffic Officer Caldwell was stationed at the intersection of No. 2 Highway and the No. 6 Repair Depot road leading north to the 2nd concession of Sidney and noticed a motor car with two passengers swing north, but there was no licence plate displayed. Becoming suspicious the officer gave chase in ihs police car and after giving chase forced the vehicle to the side of the road where, at the point of his service pistol, Constable Caldwell ordered the pair to get out of the car.

Find Loaded Gun in Car.

Subsequent investigations by the officer revealed a loaded automatic rifle was secluded in the front of the car, while other articles, including a typewriter, were found in the rear and appear to be stolen goods. After placing the men under arrest and handcuffing them securely Constable Caldwell drove them back to the No. 6 Repair Depot where he was assisted by a Corporal of the R.C.A.F. service police to place the men in the Trenton lock-up.

Wanted in Trenton for the theft of gasoline, Chief Bain subsequently contacted Welland, where the men stated they resided. From Welland came word to hold the pair as they were wanted there for the theft of the car in which they were riding. Later the licence plate, which Constable Caldwell first noticed missing and lead to the arrest, was found in the car. Provincial Police at Hamilton later communicated with Chief Bain to say the men were wanted in Hamilton on two charges of armed hold-up near Oakville, where they are alleged to have slugged a service station attendant over the head. It is not known whether the men will be tried here or returned to Hamilton to face the more serious charges first. Sgt. Harry Thompson, of the Hamilton O.P.P. district headquarters will be in Trenton today to question the pair.

Police Court

Trenton (Special)—A case of dangerous driving against Alvin Dulabough, Bancroft, was dismissed in Trenton police court on Tuesday by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd after hearing the evidence, given by Sergt. Weeks of the Trenton armouries, Constable McColl and two other witnesses. Weeks had been struck by the Dulabough car some days previous while crossing from the Gilbert House to the post office. Dulabough had come to a stop in front of the post office when a car passing him had sideswiped him. A number of people at the Gilbert House had shouted to him to step on the gas and get the number of the car which sideswiped him but did not stop. Dulabough had just started up when Sgt. Weeks stepped in front of him. He was caught by the front bumper and one of the front wheels went over his foot. Dulabough immediately stopped his car. On the evidence the Magistrate could not find that he was driving in a dangerous manner.

The number of Clayton R. Brickman's car was taken as the hit-and-run car but as there were no marks found on the car and Dulabough stated that Brickman's car was not the one which struck him, the charge against Brickman for leaving the scene of an accident was dismissed.

J. H. Deline, charged with careless driving, was fined $10 and costs and W. Acton, Antony Viklickly, Ken MacDonald and Herbert LeHigh were all fined $5 and costs for speeding.

Joseph Payouys paid $10 and costs for careless driving and also $10 and costs for driving without a licence.

Two were fined the usual $4.50 for failing to obey traffic signals and two others $1.00 each for breach of the parking by-law.

Walter Loshness on an intoxication charge paid $20 and costs and five others paid the usual $10 and costs for breach of the Liquor Control Act.

William Preston, Stanley Preston, Leslie Preston and James T. Burton were all charged with assaulting Joseph Cannon inflicting grievous bodily harm. On pleading guilty, the Magistrate suspended sentence for one year, on payment of Cannon's hospital bill and cost of the court amounting to $25 each.

Two minors were charged with theft and after making restitution were given suspended sentence.

Ila Weese on a charge of assault was fined $4.50, while Leslie Lee on a similar charge paid $10 and costs and Howard Yarrow charged with assaulting Allan Lee was given a year's suspended sentence and ordered to pay the doctor's bill and cost of the court.

Three were before the court on a charge of assaulting Constable George Crawford and the case was enlarged for two weeks.

On a charge of obstructing the same officers Roy Maher's case was also enlarged for two weeks.

"The Pains Have Left My Back, Arms and Legs"

Got Relief After Using Few Bottles of Syntona: Also Ended Stomach Gas, Acidity, Dizzy Spells and Tired, Worn-Out Feelings, He Says.

"I am feeling like an entirely different person since taking a short treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound," said Mr. Thomas Bancroft, a well-known resident of Delaware, Ontario, in a recent statement.

"During the past three or four years my stomach had given me an awful lot of trouble and no matter what medicines I took it kept getting worse. I used to suffer after every meal with sour stomach, gas, cramps and heartburn. I'd get sick, dizzy spells with black spots darting before my eyes. Usually these would be followed by a splitting headache. Then rheumatic pains settled in my arms, back and legs. They felt stiff and sore and ached very badly at times. I got so bad I couldn't sleep and was beginning to feel tired and worn out all the time.

"I had been disappointed by so many medicines that I waited a long time before I decided to try Syntona, but now I cannot find words to say enough good about it. My stomach is acting just fine. I eat regular meals, enjoy them and have no distress from gas, sourness or heartburn afterwards. I am also free from the dizziness, headaches and spots before my eyes. Since then the aches and pains have left my back, arms and legs. I get sound sleep at night and don't feel tired and worn out all the time like I used to."

Syntona is made from the pure extracts of 12 Herbs, Roots, Barks and Leaves. It acts on stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels and aids in the elimination of excess acids and poisonous waste matter and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy. It is pleasant to take and contains no harsh drugs.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER 12.

I glanced at my watch. Exactly one hour ago Pamela Keith's funeral had ended with only that white-haired minister looking really grieved. I knew the minister was grieved, too. He had christened Pamela; he had known her as an infant and child and he'd lived to see Pamela turn from the church. Pamela had even swayed Sandra in that direction. Many considered Pam an atheist!

I'm not a Puritan, but I believe firmly in God, and if there is ever a crisis in my life, I will have that faith. Thinking along that line, I found myself more than sorry for little Sandra. . . .Then another idea struck me piercingly. It might be very easy indeed for an atheist to kill. The wrath of God wouldn't frighten him—or her; there would be no fear of the hereafter or a final judgment. . . .

I stared at the table in the cubicle. Marvin Eustace was believed to be an atheist, and I suddenly remembered that Earle Pines was, too. . . . .But where, exactly, did that lead me beyond my personal conviction that it would be far easier for an atheist to murder?

Dad was ladling our soup when his voice shattered my thoughts: "Letty, you're moving bag-and-baggage out of that Keith house today. That funeral this morning almost undid me. Never before in my life have I felt such—well, such overtone of hate."

Mother said firmly: "You're not going to stay in that house another night, Letty. I mean it. You've been sleuthing around, sticking your nose into things that are absolutely no business of yours and, as a consequence, murderer may well think you're on to him. The guilty one might try to poison you, or something. And being in all probability a doctor he'd know just how to do it too. Just how much roach powder or something of that kind to use".

"Roach powder!" I snorted. "That is flattering! Still, I think you've got something there, Mom". Turning to her, I added, "What you just said is beginning to click. You speak so definitely of the murderer knowing exactly how to poison me if he set his mind on it. That means you are still convinced a doctor did it?"

I didn't mention Wayne Courtney's name because an elderly stranger at the table next to ours was hanging on every word we said.

"I have never deviated from my original belief", Mother declared. "Why did he come back after all these years? And Pamela was murdered a week after his return! It adds up, Letty". She looked straight at me. "With all your sleuthing, young lady, you haven't found any other reason why he returned, now have you?".

"No. But I did find out that he has no patient at Emergency. Or anywhere else".

"You see", said mother excitedly, and I realized I hadn't told her this bit of news before. (I wondered if it would be news to the police if I told them, or had they already tripped up Courtney on that).

Dad asked, "Letty, who is that woman over there? The good-looking one. Silver-fox jacket and turban".

I glanced at the cubicle. "Don't tell me you've never seen Gladys Newcomb before! She was Richard Keith's first wife, you know".

"Oh, I've seen her before. A great many times", said Dad. "And quite recently at The Mayflower. She was with Luke Cramer."

So it had been Gladys Newcomb who had been acclaimed by Father and the Congressman as a fine figure of a woman!

"Mrs. Newcomb is really built!" enthused Dad. "None of this starvation diet for her!"

"Nor for Countess Panella Castigena", I pointed out and Dad observed, "The Countess leans a little too heavily toward the fat—"

"Leans?" interrupted Mother. "That is a masterpiece of understatement. She wallows!"

I rode back to the hotel with my parents. At the front desk I found a letter from my University of Virginia swain and, like the speedy guy I knew him to be, he told me he was mailing me a University Year Book. It was easier to send the book than to make a list of each of the graduates for the year I'd requested, and he hoped I'd find what I was after.

"But don't tell me you've gone overboard for one of our old grads", my friend wrote at the end of his letter. "I couldn't bear that. The University has changed a lot in the last couple of decades", etc.

The Year Book came in the four o'clock mail. A bulky thing with some postage due. Bowed over with its 620-page weight, I carted it into my bedroom, plunked it down on my little maple desk and ruffled the pages until I found the Medical School index. Wayne Courtney's name was listed on page 247 along with a photograph and a biography. I flicked the pages nervously to 247, and there he was staring up at me from the glossy sheet: A young, blonde Greek-god of a man, fair hair waving back from his forehead; a slender, almost classically sensitive face with shrewd but fine blue eyes and a quirk at the corner of his full lips that showed he had known, as a young man, how to laugh at himself as well as other people. I couldn't blame Pamela for eloping with such an Adonis; in fact, I decided it would have been a physical impossibility to have resisted doing so. The puzzle was: Why had she allowed her parents to talk her out of her marriage? How on earth had she been able to go out of his life and stay out?

The biography read in part:

WAYNE COURTNEY
Washington, D.C.
"Spike" "Court"

Spike or Court began his medical career in a truly academic and scientific manner on his first day at the University by going on a big splurge in the Dean's office, which broke up the intense strain of that meeting for several minutes. . . .His football dropkicking has turned more than one apparent defeat into a Virginia victory. His excellent athletic career began in his Freshman year, when he made the football, basketball, baseball and track teams. After a year's absence from the University, due to illness (due to Pamela's annulment of their marriage, I edited) he returned to his books and the varsity teams. .. Court did not limit his field of activities to sports alone. As Senior Class president, etc., etc. . . . Spike or Court points toward a medical career, likely to be most successful.

In small script letters were the names of the organizations, Greek letter, social and medical to which he belonged. Also, academic awards he'd won, athletic letters, cups, etc.

Somehow it seemed significant to me that there was no mention of a girl or girls in Wayne Courtney's biography. I glanced at several other biographies and found various romantic references. . . .Why, I asked, was there love interest in almost all the youthful biographies except Wayne Courtney's? It did seem odd, especially since the collegiate "Spike" or "Court" had never re-married after that youthful plunge with Pamela.

I was flicking through the pages of the Year Book aimlessly when all at once. I stopped at page 321 in the College of Liberal Arts section, my heart beginning to gallop. For I was looking straight down at the photograph of a slim, dark young man. I was so excited, and so incredulous, that my eyes ripped through the words of that biography. . . ..

I couldn't believe that the face, staring at me from the University of Virginia yearbook was Reginald's! Pamela's English Reginald! Pam's butler who had graduated from the University of Virginia the same year Wayne Courtney had! But there it was. I read the biography excitedly:

REGINALD FIELDING
Richmond Virginia
"Reggie" "Reg" "Casanova"

Our "Reggie" was born in Richmond where he received his elementary education. He went to England with his parents one year, attended Warton's Public School in Sussex, coming back to the States to end up at Richmond High. From there he went to Charlottesville, embarking on his higher education.

"Reggie's" athletic ability made itself known from the autumn of his freshman year. . . A head injury at football hospitalized him for months in his Sophomore year. Junior and Senior year found him on the Varsity squad and as end in the Maryland game.

"Reggie" boasts six feet of lean brawn. . . His main ambition is to travel and write. . . .He has the natural ability to tell tales, a vivid imagination, and a love of the romantic side of life which put him on the first rungs of the ladder of literary success.

Our "Casanova's" ruling passion is an insatiable appetite for romantic novels, poems and motion pictures. . . .When there is a dance you can always find him circled by the fair sex, leading the sort of life he will eventualy write about: Romance, Good Luck, "Reg"! May your future be sprinked with pretty girls, plenty of moonlight, and soft whispers 'neath the perfumed shade of magnolias.

There were only a few script lines beneath Fielding's biography. He hadn't joined a fraternity. He had achieved no scholastic honors, but had won two letters in ahletics.

Wayne Courtney, of course, must have recognized "Reggie" as his classmate, though he'd never revealed this by look or word. Did Reginald have brain trouble as a result of that football injury years ago? Had any of the Fielding family sent for Dr. Courtney to talk "Reggie" into an operation?

"Reggie's" career was strange. A university graduate — buttling! This, I thought, will certainly slay mother! She would get to work instantly on Reginald's genealogy endeavoring to unearth Yankee ancestry . . . . .

Obituary

STEWART WALLER KINNEAR
(Melville)

The funeral of Stewart Waller Kinnear, who died suddenly on Saturday, Sept. 2nd., took place from his home at Melville, Prince Edward County, on Monday afternoon, Sept. 4th., and was very largely attended. The service in the home and at Glenwood cemetery, Picton, was conducted by the Rev. J. W. Shier and the Rev. P. Tiller.

The bearers were Messrs. M. French, Frank Zufelt, Ross Cruickshank, Garfield French, Will Morton and Stanley Brooks.

The sudden passing of the late Mr. Kinnear has brought much regret to a large number of friends in the district, where he lived and elsewhere throughout the county. He was well advanced in age, having been born eighty-four years ago on the farm at Melville where he spent his life and where he ended his days. He was fairly active for a man of his age and during the morning of the day he died he assisted in doing some light work about the farm.

Stewart Waller Kinnear possessed many fine traits of character and by his uprightness and friendliness he attracted and held many close friendships during his long and useful life. In religion he was a faithful member of the United Church and when age permitted he took an active part in church work.

Mr. Kinnear never married and is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Rebecca Norton, Bloomfield, and Mrs. Lidia Carr, Picton; a niece, Mrs. Lewis Wallbridge, and three nephews, Messrs. Arthur and Chas. Kinnear and Mr. Raymond Norton.

J. CHARLES COLLING (Toronto.

Word was received in the city today announcing the sudden death of J. Charles Colling at his residence 141 Highbourne Road in Toronto.

He was the son of the late William and Emily Colling of this city and was born here 66 years ago. A member of the Toronto Stock Exchange, Mr. Colling conducted the brokerage business of Colling and Colling in Toronto, and was also president of the Colling Tire shop in that city.

Surviving are two brothers, Harry C. and Frank, of Toronto, two sisters Mrs. J. B. Ives and Miss Bertha Colling of this city, and two sons, Charles and James. The funeral will be held from the family residence on Saturday.

Belgian Gratitude For Liberation Great as Parisians

By MAURICE DESJARDINS
(CP War Correspondent)

Brussels, Sept. 7 —(CP Cable)— Belgian gratitude to British troops for liberating their capital has almost reached the frenzy with which Parisians greeted their liberators.

The Place de Brouchere, Brussels' main square, was a miniature Paris last night as crowds cheered the Tommies with enthusiasm undiminished after 48 hours. The crowds hooted and whistled as German prisoners in lorries passed. Dignified matrons milled around British soldiers begging for autographs.

In sidewalk cafes, beaming boulevardiers sipped beer, of which there was no scarcity. Near the royal palace a tall member of the R.C.A.F. service police directed traffic while a Canadian sergeant from headquarters, Frank Singer of Toronto, was handing out cigarettes to the crowd.

Across a small street there is a huge white banner with the inscription "Brussels Welcomes British, American and Canadian Soldiers." Belgian, British and American flags were everywhere.

On Boulevard Adolphe Max, named after the heroic Burgomaster Max who defied the Germans in the last war, Tommies walked along this main street of the capital with Belgian families who were taking them home for dinner.

"You think this is something," a woman told me in front of the Hotel Metropole. "You should have been here Sunday night when the first Tommies arrived at nine o'clock. Everyone of us rushed to the jeeps and trucks and tanks to embrace them."

BEURLING LEAVES R.C.A.F.

Montreal, Sept. 7 (CP)—Flt.-Lt. George "Buzz" Beurling, Canada's ace pilot, arrived in Montreal last night "to clean up personal matters" before returning to the United States where he has applied for citizenship.

Beurling, whose resignation from the Royal Canadian Air Force becomes effective next week, said he was planning to join one of the two U. S. air forces. He said he had talked with "army officials" about enlisting but had made no contact with the Naval Air Force.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 7. (CP) — Prices slumped generally in the early Toronto session today, led by the industrial issues with a drop of a point. The Golds lost .70, the Base Metals .54 and the Western Oils. 19. Turnover was heavier than in the previous session at 368,000 shares.

The Utility, Steel, Food, Paper and Liquor groups were down. Brazilian recovered moderately from Wednesday's slump. Fanny Farmer dropped a point and Loblaw A weakened 1-2.

Weak issues of the Gold group included Giant Yellowknife, Frobisher, Wright-Hargreaves, Madsen, O'Brien, Aunor, Cochenour Willans, West Malartic and Beattie.

Steep Rock slipped off 10 cents and Waite-Amulet lost 5 .

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 7 (AP)—A semblance of stability returned to financial markets today although real recovery stamina still was lacking for most categories. Mild bidding cropped up for selected stocks on the idea that yesterday's sharpest selloff in nearly a year had discounted a lot of postwar industrial travail. Belief persisted, however, that the finish of the Germans was in sight and many customers continued to hold Adolf or trim commitments.

While losses running to 2 points predominated, near the fourth hour, scattered gains were observed.

In the Canadian list, CPR eased 1-8 and Distillers Seagrams dropped 1-2. In the bond market, Canada 4s moved up 3-8.

On the offside most of the time were U.S. Steel, Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line, Goodrich, American Airlines, Chrysler, General Motors, Westinghouse, American Can, Philip Morris, U. S. Gypsum and Du Pont. Resistant were Standard Oil (N.J.), Montgomery Ward, Southern Railway and J. C. Penney.

Bequest Result Of Promise Made

Napanee, Ont., Sept. 7 (CP)— Mrs. Ida Mae McGuire said today a bequest she receives under the will of Mrs. May Marguerite Shaw of Moneola, N.Y., "was the result of a promise I made Mrs. Shaw a long time ago." The will, filed for probate at Mineola yesterday, provides that Mrs. McGuire will receive for life the interest from a trust fund of $100,000 providing she cares for 15 Pekinese pups.

"She was very fond of her Pekes, which she had on her estate in New York and I promised that if anything happened to her I would look after them as long as they lived," said Mrs. McGuire.

Most of Mrs. Shaw's dogs came originally from Mrs. McGuire, a breeder of Pekes for 18 years and owner of the Pekin Inn Kennels at Napanee.

"She bought some of them from me and others were presents," said Mrs. McGuire, adding: "We had been friends for many years and I visited her at least four times a year."

MISS LILLIAN DRUMMEY TO BE HEARD ON AIR

PANHANDLER ONLY EIGHT

Windsor, Sept. 7 (CP)—Windsor police are having their troubles with a panhandler—and he's only eight years old. On a complaint last week police went to Pitt Street to find a child begging money from passers-by. They took him to headquarters and gave him a severe tongue lashing and then drove him home in the police cruiser.

Priority System For Release Of U.S. Troops Plan

Washington, Sept. 7. (AP)—Plans for a limited start of demobilization of the United States army soon after the defeat of Germany—based in part on the solicited suggestions of soldiers—were announced yesterday by the War Department.

Because of the continuing war with Japan, releases of troops from service at first will be slow and small in number. The army cautioned soldiers and the public that the war with Japan will take "first priority" in military calculations and shipping.

Since demobilization has been fixed on an individual basis, some men will return from the Pacific as well as from Europe and American outposts.

Four essential factors, taken from suggestions gathered in an army survey, will guide the priority system of releases. They are: length of service, overseas time, combat credit and number of dependents. The bulk of the army's strength will be shifted to the Pacific.

The priority system will govern the release of the relatively small number of men to be demobilized under these conditions.

Liquor Stores To Remain Open Armistice Day

Toronto, Sept. 7. (CP) — Ontario liquor stores may remain open on the day armistice is declared, it was learned here Wednesday. The problem of whether beverage rooms will be allowed to stay open is being studied at present at Queen's Park.

Regulations concerning sale of alcoholic beverages of that day are being prepared by Attorney-General L. E. Blackwell and Ontario Liquor Commissioner V. T. Goggin.

FLYER RESCUED

Somewhere in Southern France, Sept. 7 (AP)—When FO. R. G. Fisher of the R.N.Z.A.F. was forced down near several German tanks when the engine of his Spitfire failed, he was rescued by Lieut. Paul Avery who flew his observation craft down between two trees to Fisher's plane, loaded him aboard and took off again.

If that constantly tired feeling has got you looking down in the mouth as well as acting that way—try Dr. Williams Pink Pills.

Persistent fatigue that finds you as weary in the morning as if you had had no sleep, that makes you too listless to eat, that stales your energy, is often caused by a lowering of the iron level in your blood. This condition may also have a further reaction on health, for without sufficient iron your body may not be able to get the full advantages of the vitamins and protective food elements in what you do eat.

Don't let this state of affairs go on and on until you are really sick. Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today from your druggist—see how good it feels when you pep up with more iron in your blood.

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie stayed at my house all night last night, and pop was suppose to go around to my sister Gladdis's with ma to play bridge, and he was smoking and thinking in his private chair waiting for ma to tell him it was time to get ready, and he said, Maybe you'd better go without me, Gladdis can always call on a naybor to make a fourth, and somebody had better stay home to see that these boys get safely to bed.

Well maybe. I wonder, ma said. Of course I know you'd pick on any excuse to get out of playing bridge, but perhaps you're right, she said, and I said, Aw G, pop, gosh, ma, we'll go to bed on time by ourselfs, wont we, Artie?

Sure, we'll go perfect, Artie said, and ma said, You sound a little too anxious, I think your father had better stay and make sure after all.

Well G, pop, do you remember the time you were suppose to make sure I went to bed on time, and you fell asleep in your chair and I finished my whole lyberry book before you woke up about 2 hours later? I said, and pop said, No, I dont think I remember it.

Well do you remember that other time when I went over to Peet's bowling alleys with you so you could play just one game, and I went to sleep in a chair and you forgot all about me and it was 12 o'clock at night before we got home? I said, and pop said, That's ancient history.

That's just the kind that repeats itself for land sakes, ma said.

And she made him go to my sister Gladdis's after all, and me and Artie kept our promise all right and went to bed on time, only we talked and argued and giggled for about 2 hours after we got there, being something we probably wouldn't of been able to do if anybody had stayed home.

TRIBUNALS SET UP

London, Sept. 7 (CP)—Radio France at Algiers said today that Lt.-Gen. Joseph Pierre Goenig, military governor of Paris and head of the French forces of the interior, has ordered military tribunals set up in Paris to try traitors and enemy agents. The broadcast said there would be no appeal from decisions by the tribunal, and that others would be established in liberated sections outside Paris.

John Bracken ToRuninNeepawa

Carleton Place, Ont., Sept. 7 (CP)—Progressive Conservative Leader John Bracken, who has been without a seat in parliament since he became party leader two years ago, has announced his intention of running as a candidate in Manitoba's Neepawa constituency in the forthcoming federal election if nominated.

Mr. Bracken made his announcement last night in an address before the Lanark County Progressive Conservative Association's annual meeting. He said:

"A number of largely-signed petitions have reached me from Manitoba, including one from Neepawa. Canada is still a democracy and one does not dictate to constituencies whom they should choose. If, however, the nomination convention in Neepawa should favor me as a candidate, I would be honored by such a choice and would accept."

Netherlands Govt. Returning Home

London, Sept. 7 (CP — Counting on a speedy liberation of the Netherlands by Allies armies, the Netherlands government in London officially took leave of Britain today before returning to the homeland.

Premier Pieter Gerbrandy declared that members of the present Netherlands cabinet would resign as soon as they reached Holland, leaving Queen Wilhelmina free in formation of a new government.

Mr. Gerbrandy said that if large areas of Holland were found to have been flooded by the Germans "then certainly we would demand territorial compensation."

At a farewell press conference for Gerbrandy, Information Minister Bracken urged the Netherlands not be relinquished any portion of their farflung territories after the war.

"Dutch rule," he said, has been a blessing wherever established."

Mr. Bracken's statement was made after Mr. Gerbrandy who is preparing to return to Holland, had been asked what plans had been drawn for self-government for the Netherlands East Indies.

The premier's reply was that there would be a round table discussion of that question as soon as possible. He stressed, however, that the "people in the Netherlands East Indies and that Netherlands itself have a right to express themselves on that. We cannot now impose a new regime on them."

ALLIED FORCES BREAK ALBERT CANAL LINE

Within 25 Miles Of Reich Frontier At Three Points

Enemy Putting Up Fierce Resistance on Moselle R.

(By JAMES M. LONG)
(AP War Correspondent)

London, Sept. 8. (AP) — General Eisenhower swung a hidden punch at the Siegfried line today as four Allied armies broke the Albert Canal defence and thrust menacingly at possible invasion spots along a 200-mile assault front, while Canadian forces hammered at German garrisons besieged in Channel coast ports.

The attack carried to within 25 miles of the German frontier at three places— north of the Canal, close to Liege in Belgium and at Metz in France—and the 7th Army moving up from the Mediterranean completed the line of threat by reaching Besancon, 50 miles from the Belfort Gap just above Switzerland.

While 2,000 British and American heavy bombers attacked rear centres of the Siegfried line and the surrounded Port of Le Havre, one objective of the 1st Canadian Army, British troops of the 2nd Army poured across the Albert Canal, where objectives had been seized within 10 miles of the Netherlands border and 25 miles of the German frontier.

Tight News Blackout.

Tonight Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters clamped a tight news blackout on developments, such as has screened sweeping developments in the past.

The Germans needed 40 or 50 divisions to hold all the Siegfried line strongly—forces which they apparently lacked — and Eisenhower's step was intended to take full advantage of the wide-open possibility of keeping the Germans guessing until too late to shift their reserves.

Whether the main blow would come across the level fields of the Dutch "appendix" province of Limburg, through the fortress chain around Liege, the Ardennes Forest, the Metz Gap or the Belfort Gap was left to the Nazi imagination.

The Germans, stiffening in apparent desperation along the whole buffer front before the Siegfried line and the Rhine, were putting up their fiercest fight since Normandy along the Moselle river where the U.S. 3rd army, battling into Metz, was reported 20 miles from the west wall.

Close to Dunkerque.

Canadian, British and Polish forces of the 1st Canadian army battered steadily against dwindling German garrisons pocketed along the channel coast. The Paris radio said advance Canadian units had pushed within half a mile of Dunkerque.

This report was not confirmed, and Canadian Press War Correspondent Ross Munro later reported the Canadians at Begues, five miles south of the port.

The British 2nd army crossed the Albert canal near Beeringen, 27 miles northeast of Leuven, and smashed on five miles to the area of Bourg-Leopld, 40 miles east of Antwerp and about 25 miles from the German border due eastward.

The U.S. 1st army captured Huy on the Meuse, after a new crossing of the stream in that area 18 miles northeast of Namur, then drove on almost 15 miles to the vicinity of Liege, 23 miles from the border and 25 from Aachen, German hot-spring resort and the seat of Charlemagne's Empire.

It was noteworthy that neither of these thrusts—one across the Albert Canal, first Great War defence line, and the other deeply into Belgium's greatest fort triangle—encountered more than medium resistance and no massive fortified positions.

This seemed to substantiate reports current weeks ago that the Germans had depleted much of their defence system in the Low countries by transferring their guns to the now-lost Atlantic wall.

Move Slowly Across the Moselle.

A field dispatch said the U.S. 3rd Army was moving steadily across the Moselle river south of Metz, although heavy German fire made progress slow and costly.

"An indication that the Germans are using all available forces in the Moselle Basin defence is the fact that Nazi officers from six different divisions have been captured in the U.S. bridgehead area south of Metz", the dispatch said.

The Germans were hitting back with all their might, keeping up the drumming artillery fire which earlier forced abandonment of a bridgehead the 3rd Army's first setback since the Normandy break-through.

By ROGER D. GREENE
(AP War Correspondent)

With the British 3rd Army Near the Netherlands Border, Sept. 8—(AP)—Lt.-Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey's army poured across the Albert Canal today, blazing a trail for the next phase of the Allied campaign as broken and by-passed German remnants fell back into channel ports and tried to escape into Holland.

All avenues of the enemy's retreat to the east and southeast have been cut off, and prisoners confess they are not eager to go back to Germany.

Lt.-Gen. Seyffert, commander of the German 348th German Infantry Division, captured with his entire staff north of Antwerp yesterday, expressed disgust with attempt to continue the war without proper weapons.

When an escorting officer commented that he had seen only two German planes since D-Day, the General said bitterly, "You've seen two more than I have."

Ugly Tempered Germans.

Ugly-tempered bands of Germans are still wandering along the back-roads, hiding in the daytime and trying to shoot their way out at night.

"There is a party of 6,000 Huns wandering around in one area," a British staff officer said.

Sizeable German pockets are resisting in the area northeast of captured Gent.

(The remainder of his dispatch was filed Sept. 6, two days ago, and was the first in several days from the blacked-out British front.)

British troops, resting for the moment, are ready to pour into Holland with more tanks and guns than the Germans ever saw before.

A headquarters staff officer today told the plan for the spectacular operations tomorrow, but all that can be said now is that by the time Canadian newspaper readers see this we shall be driving very far into another country.

There have been rumors that we have been cut off, that we have gone too far and that our supply lines have been severed, but neither the British nor the Belgian commanders are worried.

POST-WAR TRAINING PLAN

Vancouver, Sept. 8 (CP) — The Vancouver Province in an Ottawa dispatch yesterday said "a military army of 100,000 men with camp training periods of a minimum of one month per year is forecast here as ranking officials of the department of National Defence study post-war plans for the Canadian army".

R.A.F. Bomber Pilot Awarded V.C. Having Completed Over 100 Missions

London, Sept. 8 — (CP-Reuters) —The Victoria Cross was today awarded to Wing Cmdr. Geoffrey Leonard Cheshire, D.S.O. and two Bars, D.F.C., 27-year-old R. A. F. officer, who becomes the 100th man to receive the Empire's highest award for gallantry in this war.

Wing Cmdr. Cheshire has made four operationel tours as a heavy bomber pilot and completed more than 100 missions.

Known as "Chesh" throughout the Allied air forces, he has been called by some high-ranking air officers "Probably the greatest bomber pilot of any air force in the world."

At the end of his first tour of operational duty in January, 1941, he immediately volunteered for a second. "Again, he pressed home his attacks with the utmost gallantry," said an announcement today.

Berlin, Bremen, Cologne, Duisberg, Essen and Kiel were among the heavily defended targets which he attacked.

Wing Cmdr. Cheshire started a third operational tour in August, 1942 when he was given command of a squadron. "He led the squadron with outstanding skill on a number of missions before being appointed in March, 1943 as a station commander," it was said.

In October, 1943, he undertook a fourth operational tour, relinquishing the rank of group captain at his own request so he could again take part in operations. He immediately became the pioneer of a new method of marking enemy targets involving very low flying.

"During his fourth tour, which ended July, 1944, Wing. Cmdr. Cheshire led his squadron personally on every occasion, always undertaking the most dangerous and difficult tasks of marking the target alone from a low level in the face of strong defences," said the announcement.

Wing Commander Cheshire is one of R.A.F.'s most colorful characters. While still an undergraduate at Oxford, studying law and serving in the university air squadron, he hitch-hiked from Oxford to Paris with only 15 shillings (approximately $3.00) in his pocket to win a wager—a pint of beer. During the trip he worked as a gardener and printer and raised more much-needed funds by lecturing.

In the summer of 1941 he went to Canada to ferry back a bomber and on a visit to New York met and married Constance Binney, the American actress.

231 JAPS KILLED IN MUTINY IN AUSTRALIAN CAMP

Premier Curtin Places Blame for Trouble Entirely on Jap Prisoners

REPORT FURNISHED

Canberra, Australia, Sept. 8 (CP) —Prime Minister Curtin today placed the blame entirely on Japanese war prisoners for the bloody Aug. 5 mutiny in an Australian prison camp. He said the Japanese had followed concerted plans for a suicidal combat with Australian guards.

When the skirmish ended, 231 Japanese were dead from gun-fire and suicide or were killed by their fellow prisoners, and 108 were wounded. Australian casualties were "light."

More than 900 Japanese participated. A number escaped from the camp, but all were recaptured.

The Australian government, said the Prime Minister, has furnished a report of the incident to representatives of the protecting power for transmission to the Japanese government.

A military court of inquiry reported conditions at the camp fully accorded with international convention and the camp had been inspected frequently by representatives of the protecting power and the International Red Cross. The court reported no complaints about treatment had been made by or on behalf of the Japanese before the mutiny.

Conviction Grows Leaders Will Meet In Quebec City

By JAMES F. KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 8. (AP)—The conviction grew here today that Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt are planning to meet again soon—probably in Quebec—to plan the peace and bring to life a master plan for unleashing the whole Allied might against Japan immediately Germany is crushed.

With the final battle for Germany beginning, Hitler's satellites in open rebellion and a general feeling of Allied victory predominating, the following topics would naturally present themselves for discussion at such a meeting:

1.—Untangling the wreckage left by the Nazis in Europe, including the policing of Germany; division of occupational spheres among Britain, United States and Russia, and deciding upon the machinery through which liberated countries may choose post-war governments.

2.—Placing the final stamp upon military operations in the Pacific, consideration of the role Russia is to play, and the curbing of the demobilization fever expected to arise in Britain and the United States when Germany is defeated.

Probe Diplomatic Field.

While military operations are at their most satisfactory state of the entire war, the diplomatic field now offers multiple possibilities for disruption.

Romania, Bulgaria and Finland are suing for peace. Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt are certain to be kept informed of all developments before signed.

One of the knottiest problems facing the two leaders is presented by Poland. Both Britain and the United States are standing behind the Polish government in London, while Russia supports the Polish Committee of National Liberation, already set up in that country.

As the Allies close in on Japan the possibility of further co-ordination of all commands in the Pacific—even placing all under one supreme commander similar to Gen. Eisenhower in Europe—may be discussed.

U.S. TROOPS IN CHINA

London, Sept. 8 (CP)—The Berlin radio broadcast a D.N.B. Shanghai report yesterday that 30,000 American troops are now in Free China and "at least three American divisions have taken up positions along the Hengyang front."

TO FLY HOME

Ottawa, Sept. 8 (CP)—Princess Juliana of the Netherlands will fly to Britain as soon as news is received that her homeland has been freed of the Nazis, it was anounced officially last night.

ILSLEY TO SPEAK

Ottawa, Sept. 8 (CP)—A spokesman for the war finance committee said last night that Finance Minister Ilsley will outline plan for the forthcoming Seventh Victory Loan in an addres in Toronto Sept. 25.

CANADIAN TANKS REACH THE BANKS OF MARANO RIVER

Only Four Miles From Rimini but British Held Up by Nazi Thrusts

GERMANS HOLD RIDGE

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, Sept. 8 —(AP)— Canadian tanks and infantry of the British 8th Army fought forward another mile on the Adriatic coast yesterday and reached the banks of the Marano river, only four miles from Rimini, but 12 miles inland the Germans, counter-attacking fiercely with tanks, brought the British offensive to a standstill, Allied Headquarters said today.

Near the other end of the Italian front American troops advanced to within two miles of Pistoia, the last important city south of the Gothic line remaining in enemy hands.

Farther west patrols pushed well north of Lucca. Near the coast enemy artillery opened up with heavy shelling of American positions north of Pisa.

Massing the main weight of their tanks in close support of the infantry, the Germans still held the Coriano ridge four miles inland from the Adriatic and the San Savino ridge, 5½ miles from the coast, after several days of savage fighting.

Suffer Heavy Casualties.

Just south of San Savino German armor and infantry attempted a fierce counter-attack yesterday, but suffered heavy casualties when they were caught by concentrated fire of the 8th Army's tanks and artillery.

Equally sharp fighting raged along the sector extending inland 12 miles to Castelnuova and Pian di Castello, with enemy defences strongly bolstered by fresh reinforcements of artillery and motorized infantry.

The last ditch fight by the Nazis to hold the thin barrier preventing Lt.-Gen. Leese's armor from spilling out onto northern Italy's great plains was absorbing Nazi manpower at a fast rate.

Members of one veteran regiment in the San Savino fighting said they had never seen so many German dead as now litter the bloody slopes of the ridges.

Since Aug. 26 when the advance toward Rimini began, the 8th Army has taken 2,700 prisoners in the Adriatic sector, of whom more than 600 were Field Marshal Kesselring's crack paratroops.

NAZI GARRISON AT LE HAVRE HIT BY 2,000 PLANES

Chemical, Oil Plants In Siegfried Line Zone at Ludwigshafen Badly Battered

FRANKFURT POUNDED

London, Sept. 8 —(CP)— Almost 2,000 R.A.F. and United States heavy bombers attacked installations in southwest Germany and the besieged German garrison at Le Havre today.

The American bombers were accompanied by 500 fighters and battered chemical and oil plants at Ludwigshafen in the Siegfried line zone, an ordnance depot at Kastel near Mainz, and an armored car plant at Gustavsburg, southwest of Frankfurt.

All the objectives were in the upper Rhineland opposite the United States 3rd Army, massing in the Moselle river basin for a drive into the German fortifications.

The weather was the best in several days and the bombers were able to see their targets, except at Ludwigshafen where clouds were banked.

1,000 Planes Used.

More than 1,000 four-engined planes made up the American bombing force and almost an equal force of Lancasters bombarded the 5,000 Germans bottled up in Le Havre with perhaps 2,500 tons of bombs. The R.A.F. planes flew without escort.

There was no report of enemy interception.

The German radio still was shouting warnings of approaching bomber formations as late as 3 p.m.

Low-level attacks by French-based Thunderbolts yesterday destroyed 483 trucks, 217 horse-drawn vehicles and 20 pieces of armor. These operations were without interference from the Nazi air force.

R.A.F. Mosquito bombers loosed tons of bombs last night on the Rhineland city of Karlsruhe, in the German west wall 100 miles beyond where the U. S. 3rd Army is fighting in the Metz area. It was the second attack this week on the city.

Mosquitos last night also battered enemy lines north of Antwerp and Gent. Forty railway cars were shot up by cannon fire.

Many squadrons of fighters raced in the wake of the bombers this morning.

Thousands of Foe May Be Cut Off By Western Drive

Bulgars Permitted Germans To Sink 74 Ships in Port

Rome, Sept. 8 —(AP)— All main German escape and supply lines from Vienna and Budapest to Bulgaria and Greece are impassable, the U. S. 15th Air Force announced today while American bombers and fighters struck anew at railways and airdromes in seething Yugoslavia.

By EDDY GILMORE
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Sept. 8 —(AP)— The Red army slashed through the Balkans today in a three-pronged drive which promised to smash Hitler's fast-weakening hold on that vital area and trap thousands of his troops by cutting all communications with the homeland.

Advanced Russian units moved west toward a juncture with Marshal Tito's forces and Allied troops in Yugoslavia, while others advanced steadily toward the important road and communications centre of Sibiu in Transylvania.

Official sources were silent on military operations against Bulgaria and there was no indication of any response to Bulgarian pleas for an armistice.

(A German report said Russian troops fanning out across Bulgaria in a drive toward the Aegean Sea had reached the area of Demitika inside Greece on the Turkish frontier.)

The objective of the Balkan drive is to create a steel wall from the Black Sea to the Dalmatian coast and pocket all the Germans in Greece, Bulgaria and Albania.

Advance Northeast of Warsaw.

In Poland Red army forces edged forward northeast of Warsaw toward the southern border of East Prussia.

A Tass dispatch from Constanta said that in the Bulgarian Black Sea ports of Burgas and Varna the Germans were permitted to sink 74 Nazi vessels, including seven submarines, 32 minesweepers, 25 landing barges and four transports.

Tass said the sinkings took place between Aug. 26 and Aug. 28 and that from reports it had received the Bulgarian government not only failed to interfere with or intern the crews, but sent them to Germany.

The dispatch added there are 112 German vessels at the Danubian port of Ruschuk, 12 of large size.

Front dispatches from Transylvania said the Russians are meeting numerous Hungarian Alpine units which include men who not long ago were moving through these same mountains as tourists.

First Non-Stop Flight Made Between Capitals of Great Britain and Canada

Ottawa, Sept. 8—(CP)—A giant Liberator set down on nearby Rockcliffe airport today, completing the first non-stop flight in history between the capitals of Britain and Canada, 19 hours and nine minutes after leaving London.

The plane, an aircraft of the Royal Air Force Transport Command, carried among its passengers Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief of the R.C.A.F.

R.C.A.F. officials said they did not know the purpose of the trip and Air Marshal Breadner was not available immediately to newspapermen.

It was believed in some circles that he returned to Canada to discuss plans for moving the strength of the R.C.A.F. against Japan once hostilities in Europe cease.

His arrival followed London reports that Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt would soon meet in Quebec to decide how the armed forces now in Europe and others would be used in the Pacific.

The R.C.A.F. already is operating against Japan in some sectors, but not in the strength that would be possible once fighting in Europe ends.

Air Marshal Breadner attended the conference Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt held in Quebec last August. He was then Chief of Air Staff in Canada and he sat in on the conference with the military leaders of Britain and the United States while plans were drawn up for defeating the enemy in Europe.

Most of the other passengers aboard the plane were understood to be service personnel.

The aircraft was the famous Liberator Al 504, between known as The Commando, which has made scores of historic flights including the conveyance of Prime Minister Churchill to Moscow and other United Nations conferences. It was flown by Air Commodore G.J. Powell, C.B.E., Senior Staff Officer at Canadian headquarters of the R.A.F.T.C.

Although non-stop flights between Britain and Montreal have become almost routine, it so happened that never before had an aircraft continued on to the Canadian capital. When the Commando landed at Ottawa she had sufficient fuel remaining in her tanks to have taken her on to Winnipeg.

The time of the flight was considered remarkably fast in view of the fact that the flight — made at an average altitude of 6,000 feet—was against "very strong contrary winds" practically all the way.

Distance of the flight was 3,502 statute miles.

Seven weeks ago, another famous aircraft of the R.A.F.T.S.—the Marco Polo — made the first non-stop flight from London to Washington, carrying Lord Beaverbrook to the United States capital.

SOUTHMANCHURIA RAIDED BY U.S. SUPERFORTRESSES

Great Asiatic Arsenal Pounded With Anshan Industrial Centre, Principal Target

LAST RAID JULY 29

Washington, Sept. 8 —(AP)— A new Superfortress raid on the Japanese arsenal of Manchuria was announced today by the 20th Bomber Command, and the Tokyo radio reported more than 100 planes had taken part.

The U. S. army announcement said only that "important industrial targets in Japanese-dominated Manchuria" were the prey of the B-29s.

Tokyo quoted an army communique as saying:

"China-based United States air forces raided Anshan and Penhsihu about 1:30 p.m. today with more than 100 planes. At least three enemy raiders were shot down. Some damage was caused on the ground."

As in previous forays, the 20th Bomber Command withheld announcement of results pending the return of the bombers to their bases.

Antung, a city of 130,000, is situated on the Yalu river about seven miles from its entrance into the Bay of Korea.

Manchuria, sometimes referred to as Japan's "arsenal of greater East Asia," is the site of important munitions factories. The area was first raided by American planes last July 29, when a powerful force of Superfortresses blasted the key industrial city of Anshan in the Mukden region by daylight.

The announcement said:

MOUNTAIN VIEW TEAM DEFEATS ALEMITES

Mountain View baseball team, playing an exhibition contest with the Stewart-Warner-Alemite squad at the Alemite field on Thursday evening, defeated the local aggregation by a 6-1 count in seven frames. Ernie Smith hurled for the losers and after allowing the visitors four runs in the 1st frame settled away to pitch smart ball for the remainder of the pastime. Gordon Blue of the locals got two hits, while Smythe of the winners cracked the horsehide for three bingles. The return game will be played on Tuesday night at the Mountain View station. A total of $7 was collected for the bat and ball fund at the plant. The visiting team fraternized with the homesters in the canteen, where refreshments were served. MILKWEED PODS READY FOR PICKING

The time for picking milkweed pods has arrived, according to official reports from the Department of Agriculture in Ottawa. Matured milkweed pod floss is used to fill sailors' and airmen's life belts, now that the supply of kapok has been eliminated for this purpose by the capture of Java by the Japanese.

Today L. A. Kells, public school inspector for the city of Belleville, received official information from the Department of Agriculture in Ottawa indicating that milkweed pods in this district are now quite mature and students are asked to carefully pick and save these valuable pods immediately. Suitable mess bags for the collecting and drying of the pods for the Hastings and Prince Edward area may now be procured from any of the following: R. H. Macklen, Inspector of Public Schools, 211 Albert Street, Belleville; A. W. McGuire, Inspector Public Schools, Tweed, Ont., or H. L. Fair, Agricultural Representative at Stirling. Information regarding the method of picking and drying of milkweed pods may be obtained from the above persons or school teachers throughout the district, Mr. Kells added.

FO. 'Ted' Russell Injured When Bomber Crashes

Flying Officer "Ted" Russell, former member of the Ontario Intelligencer staff, is in a canvalescent home in England, recuperating from serious injuries received when his bomber crashed after an operational flight over the continent.

"Ted", who was recently promoted from the rank of Pilot Officer, received a serious injury to his right shoulder that necessitated several weeks in hospital. According to a letter received here by a friend, the Russell shoulder is a couple of inches higher than its counterpart.

The bomber that carried Ted and his crew successfully over enemy targets crashed as it was about to land. Although injured, he managed to free himself and rolled clear of the wrecked aircraft a few minute before it burst into flames.

On a previous flight, the same bomber narrowly averted mishap when it missed by inches the control tower of the landing field. "It was a close shave" Ted writes, "and we were a bit shaken up."

He expects to remain in the convalescent home for some time.

Located on Canada's remote northeast shoulder, Labrador is one of the most isolated areas occupied by the Canadian army. Canadians stationed at Goose Bay, however, have found they can swim there, and even with the barren, frosty tundra a way has been found to grow vegetables. Main communication with the "outside" is by plane and radio. Picture at top shows the unloading of supplies at Rigolet, most isolated outpost. Ships can't dock, so supplies must be brought ashore in a lighter. Lower left shows Canadian soldiers gathering vegetables from the acre of "raised outdoor beds" at the army's experimental farm at Goose Bay and lower right is Capt. M. Fitch, Montreal, the post's doctor, attending an aged Eskimo woman. Illness is an army rarity there and Capt. Fitch, who is a member of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, spends a lot of his time teaching the natives hygiene and personal cleanliness.—(Canadian Army Photos.)

Central Ont. Cheese Makers Will Hold Convention in City

Although there will be no British Empire Dairy Exhibition in this city this autumn, the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association will hold their annual convention in Belleville as usual, it has been anounced through its president Mr. Harold Henderson. Date of the convention at which cheese makers from the central district will convene has been set for December 5th and 6th.

In an effort to make the convention more interesting and to draw greater attendance of association members, officials have diverged from their usual program and have planned both a cheese scoring competition and an essay writing contest at which really worthwhile prizes are being offered.

Subject of the essay on which cheese makers will be invited to write is "The Effect of Cooking Temperatures in Relation to the Quality of Cheddar Cheese." The contest will be open to the province of Ontario with entries being limited to 500 words. Three prizes are being offered totalling $25. Entries are asked to be in by November 30th with a minimum of 25 essays being necessary before prize money will be awarded.

There will be two classes in the cheese scoring competition, an open class, and a special instructors' class in which group scoring will be in vogue. Eight cash prizes ranging from $8 for first, down to $1, are being offered in the open class while in the instructors' class first prize is $16, second $14 and third $10. Groups of three cheese makers will be chosen by instructors to contest in the competition. Cheese will be supplied by the Dairy Branch at Ottawa.

High ranking provincial and federal dairy officials will be invited to speak at the convention which will be concluded, it is expected, by a banquet.

Former Band Associates In England Meet Here Again After 40 Years

Forty years ago the late General William Booth, revered commander of the Salvation Army, paused at a small town in Staffordshire, England, on a tour through that section of the country.

During his brief stay, a Salvation Army band, composed of bandmasters and deputy bandmasters of the district, played a special sacred concert in his honor. Wielding the baton as director of this band was Bandmaster David Wardle, now conductor of the Belleville Citadel Band, and who then led the Chesterton, Staffordshire organization.

Among the bandmasters of the ensemble was Mr. Fred Ferneyhough, an outstanding Salvation Army musician.

The other day, the two Salvationists met for the first time since that day in Staffordshire in 1904. Mr. Ferneyhough is now bandmaster of the Salvation Army band at Glace Bay, Nova Scotia. He is now in the city and will assist in Salvation Army services at the local citadel over the weekend.

Ten members of the local band have joined the armed services and during their tour of duty in the Maritimes have played with Bandmaster Ferneyhough's band in Glace Bay.

POLICE COURT

Sherman Brady, Harold, Ont., was given a suspended sentence after being convicted on a charge of being found in possession of loose gasoline coupons when he was arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today.

Brady contended he found the loose coupons alongside of the road near his home and was apprehended on another charge before he could turn the coupons over to the proper authorities. Brady was called upon to pay the cost of the court. O. E. Butler, local barrister, appeared as special Wartime Prices and Trade Board prosecutor in the case, while R. D. Arnott K.C., appeared on behalf of the accused.

Stanley Wilson, North Bay, appeared on a charge of false pretenses and his case was further remanded until next week. D. C. Harman informed court another man by the name of Lepine was being held in Toronto as an alleged accomplice of Wilson's and would be brought to Belleville next week.

John Turcotte, Montreal, appeared on a charge of vagrancy and pleaded not guilty. Immediately Police Inspector J. C. Hayes rose to inform the court, police had evidence charging Turcotte with pan-handling on Front Street. "He also has quite a record", said Crown Attorney Donnan as he granted an enlargement until Tuesday in the case.

Eleven inebriates, including two women, were charged in the court and fines paid in all but two cases, when jail terms were meted out in default. One of the women faced a second offence drunk charge and was sentenced to one month in default of a $50 fine that was imposed.

Children's Aid Inspector T. D. Ruston successfully applied to have three Napanee children made wards of the Society.

NAZI GARRISON

Hungary have been destroyed and Yugoslavia's whole rail system is so devastated that organized resistance to the Russian thrust to the Adriatic from Romania will be impossible, Allied Mediterranean air headquarters declared today.

"At the same time a barrier has, in effect, been laid across the Balkans from the coast to Romania to prevent the possibility of any planned retreat back into Germany" said an official anouncement.

Rail traffic at present is impossible from Greece to Belgrade, from Belgrade to Ljubljana, from Sarajevo to Uzice, from Bihac to Sunja, from Karlov to Zagreb and from Fiume to Zagreb, the anouncement said.

Closing of these lines was attributed jointly to Allied air onslaughts and demolitions by Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Partisans.

In contrast with the speed and skill, which the Germans showed in the past in repairing rail lines, the enemy has done virtually nothing to patch up the most recent devastation of his communications, headquarters said.

R.A.F. planes armed with heavy rockets have proven highly effective in knocking out even substantially constructed bridges, the announcement said.

Despite bad weather light and medium bombers ranged as far east as Salonika and the Danube yesterday, blasting convoys of enemy vehicles and trains moving from Greece to Serbia. At least 25 enemy vehicles were knocked out and one attack left a 40-car train enveloped in smoke.

and other improvised weapons, the Japanese rushed the fences of the camp at about 2 a.m., after setting fire to their sleeping huts. The prisoners had prepared themselves with extra clothing, gloves and padding for passing through the wire fences.

Large numbers of the prisoners escaped through the outer fence. They attacked and killed an Australian machine-gun crew and attempted to storm the garrison quarters. The attacks were met by fire from Australian guards. During the search for those who had escaped, an Australian officer was murdered by a party of Japanese.

Incinerated bodies of Japanese were found in the burned huts. Twenty of the prisoners died by hanging or strangulation, inflicted on themselves or on each other. Nine committed suicide by stabbing themselves, and two threw themselves under a train.

Of the wounded, 16 showed evidence of attempted suicide.

Canada's Gross Cash Farm Income May Total $1,750,000,000 in '44

By JAMES McCOOK
(CP Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 8. (CP)—Canada's gross cash farm income in 1944 may total $1,750,000,000, a figure which would have seemed incredible in 1932 when it was only $383,500,000, Federal authorities estimated today.

Figures describing the income of farmers have been assembled for Agriculture Minister Gardiner who recently piloted through the Commons a Bill providing for the stabilization of farm prices, with the Dominion purchasing farm products, if necessary, to maintain prices.

Farm incomes have swung from peaks to valleys in the last 20 years, the survey showed. The average annual gross cash income during 1926 to 1929 was $970,500,000, in a period when agriculture was relatively prosperous and including the bumper year in 1928 when the income was $1,063,800,000, the highest level attained before the war.

Following drought and depressed prices, the 1928 income had been reduced almost by two-thirds four years later. After 1932 a slow pull upward began until in 1939, the last year of peace, it had reached $722,300,000.

Started to Climb in 1942.

Officials said the war did not immediately mean a spectacular gain in farmers' returns and it was not until 1942 the revenue from Canada's contribution to the food supplies of the fighting nations began to show plainly on farm income. In that year the gross income was $1,114,900,000, a record up to that time.

As shipments of bacon, cheese and other products increased the farm income soared. For 1943, it was $1,396,600,000 and returns for the first six months of 1944 have indicated that the increase for the present year will be at least 25 per cent.

The most impressive gains in income since the low year of 1932 have been made by Prince Edward Island with five times as much income in 1943; New Brunswick, up five times and Quebec, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, up four times.

Mr. Gardiner said study of statistics had shown how much farm income was affected both by production and price variations. The production variations were greatest in connection with grain crops, while the meat variations ran in cycles. It took about three years to increase or decrease the cattle population and about 1 1-2 years to increase or decrease the hog population. Dairy products figures of production remained more constant than any others.

WITHIN

Lt.-Gen. B. G. Horrocks, Commander of the British corps which made the spectacular dash to Antwerp and covered 206 miles in six days, said:

"Our flanks were a bit thin and at one time we had one division holding 65 miles, with the Boche trying to escape through them. I am proud of them. There hasn't been a single bellyache. There was a funny incident yesterday when a German Panther went to shoot up some of our leaguers (units camped along the route). You'd never guess what target the Boche chose. It was, of all things, an anti-tank regiment. In something less than 2 minutes it had 16 holes in it."

Gen. Horrocks estimated that 120,000 Germans were still caught in a trap in northeast France and along the Belgian coast.

Completely Disorganized.

"The enemy is trying desperately to get out, sometimes sneaking across our lines of communication at night sometimes shooting their way out, but they are completely disorganized", he added.

The commander said he had heard reports of Allied troops fighting in Holland, but declared, "we definitely are not over the Holland frontier yet".

Despite the long distance covered so rapidly from Normandy, the General said he was not worried about supplies.

"I am sitting pretty for another 250 miles", he said, "with plenty of ammunition, petrol and food".

(An advance of 250 airline miles from Brussels might carry British troops to Bremen or Hannover, 150 miles from Berlin.)

"As to the future, I think the Germans may have sufficient forces inside Germany to check us, but not hold us. All they have left now is the Duodenal Divisions—the old chaps with big stomachs.

Will See Novel Action.

"We expect some opposition on the Albert Canal, on the Siegfried line and on the Rhine, which is 600 yards across and has E-boats on it. When we reach the Rhine there should be a novel battle, and we'll see what E-boats can do against our land guns".

Only the S.S. is fighting bitterly to the end, he added.

"The S.S. must be killed off—all of them—or the same thing will be happening to our children 20 years from now", he said.

A Netherlands battalion has arrived in Brussels to act as guides for the British Army and Prince Bernhard, commander of the Netherland forces, is "somewhere about", Gen. Horrocks said.

BULGARS, NAZIS BEGIN FIGHTING ON SERB BORDER

Yugoslav Radio Says Serbs in General Revolt and Attacking Garrisons

200,000 NAZIS TRAPPED

London, Sept. 8 —(CP)— Fighting has broken out between Bulgars and Germans on the Serbian border, Cairo reports said today, and the Free Yugoslav radio declared a mass uprising "on an unprecedented scale" had started against enemy occupation forces.

The Yugoslav radio said the Serbs were in general revolt and attacking garrisons. The Nazis and collaborators were reported in panicky flight toward Hungary. Marshal Tito's forces were said to have tripled in size during the last few days as his partisans and the Russians on the east pressed tighter the jaws of a trap fashioned for the enemy in the southern Balkans.

The Bulgarian government sought peace with the Allies.

The Bulgar-German clashes were apparently on a small scale and not a part of any concerted Bulgarian campaign against the Germans. Military experts in Cairo said that developments in the Balkan country bottled up some 200,000 Germans in Greece and southern Balkan areas. There was no indication of a large-scale German withdrawal from Greece, but there was some evidence that the Germans were pulling garrisons from Rhodes and the Dodecanese Islands as well as from Crete and the Cyclades. These troops were reported being regrouped in northeastern areas to meet the Russian-Bulgarian threat.

Rail Routes Destroyed.

Allied Headquarters in Rome announced that rail routes along which the Germans are attempting to evacuate troops from Greece into Serbia and thence into Hungary have been destroyed and Yugoslavia's railways are so devastated that organized resistance to the Russian thrust toward the Adriatic will be impossible.

"A barrier has, in effect, been laid across the Balkans from the coast to Romania to prevent the possibility of any planned retreat back into Germany," an official announcement said.

Advanced Russian units slashing through the Balkans moved west toward a junction with Marshal Tito's Yugoslav partisans. Moscow reported that the drive was intended to pocket all Germans in Greece, Bulgaria and Albania.

Attempting to set its house in order and satisfy the Allies, the Bulgarian government announced the dissolution of the national assembly, banned all organizations having Nazi or Fascist tendencies and ordered the release of all Allied war prisoners.

American Countess Tells Canadians To Shoot Husband, Son--in a Hurry

With the Canadian Corps in Italy, Sept. 8 (CP)—Headquarters of the Ontario Tank Regiment of Oshawa won't forget in a hurry the night they bivouaced on the grounds of an Italian count situated between Foiani and Tuori on the road to Florence.

Partisans said the count married to an American, was responsible for having the Germans shoot and kill two British prisoners who had escaped.

So when the count appeared on the scene the Canadian Colonel ordered him arrested and at the same time "invited" his staff and himself to be the Countess' dinner guests.

Highlight of the evening came when the Countess' son was observed sneaking off with a heaping plate of chicken, apparently intending to take it to his father's cell. The Colonel, thereupon ordered the boy arrested.

Dinner continued. But it almost came to an abrupt end as everyone spluttered with amazement when the Countess interrupted with a volume of English.

Without mincing words she let it be known that she hoped that her husband and son would be shot—and in a hurry.

London, Sept. 8 —(CP)— The Paris radio quoted Madrid advices today as saying all Germans between the ages of 16 and 60 residing in Spain had been ordered to return to the Reich immediately. German Prison Guards Attitude Changed After Normandy Invaded

Trelleborg, Sweden, Sept. 8 —(CP Reuter)— The first train carrying the latest contingents of British, American and Dominion repatriates steamed into Trelleborg railway station today and a Swedish army band played them in with "Home Sweet Home" and "Swanee River."

Many of the exiles were on their way home after years in German prison camps and were visibly moved as they sang the old familiar tunes.

This contingent, nearly all servicemen, is expected to leave Goteborg for Britain Sunday. Their number approximated 1,700.

(In London, the Foreign Office said the number of British Empire repatriates being exchanged at Goteborg was not yet known.)

All of the men had been warned to be discreet in what they told reporters, for fear of reprisals, and were not allowed to disclose their names. Many said they noticed a definite softening in the attitude of the German guards after the invasion of Normandy.

An American lieutenant said: "Up to the second invasion week the guards were maliciously telling us how our troops would be thrown into the sea.

"Since then, and in increasing tempo, their attitude changed. Some became ingratiating, a very few were depressed and more brutal than before, but the majority were more apathetic and sheepish than ever."

A British sergeant asked: "The only difference between any of the Jerries I talked to in the course of the past two months was that some frankly said 'we are beaten and had better put down our arms,' while others said 'we have lost the war but are not beaten yet'."

Most of the men, however, were not optimistic regarding the prospects of a speedy German collapse.

A cautious note was sounded by a British major who said: "As far as I can judge the Nazis are completely determined to fight to the finish and they seem to have the army sufficiently well in hand to compel it to keep on fighting."

The general impression gained from conversations with officers and men was that the treatment of prisoners in the different camps, although dependent on the personality if the German comander and personnel, was "decent."

All agreed that apart from the isolation and sometimes the bad sanitary conditions the greatest deficiency was food. "We would be dead without the Red Cross parcels" they said.

Cornwall Feels Another Tremor

Cornwall, Sept. 8. (CP)—Cornwall experienced another sharp earth shock shortly after six a.m. today. The tremor was of brief duration and no additional damage was reported.

Today's tremor was severe enough to awaken slumbering citizens. However, police said there was no panic such as accompanied the first of a long series of shocks which started early Tuesday morning. Police headquarters reported only a few phone calls received concerning the mild quake.

Constable Calvin Mackenzie, Cornwall Township policeman, said today's tremor was the most severe since the initial shock on Tuesday which caused damages estimated at approximately $1,000,000.

"It began just like the first tremor", Mackenzie said. "I thought it was going to be bad, but it was very brief and there were no reports of any damage or great alarm".

The tremor was accompanied by a deep rumbling which sounded like muffled explosions in the distance. Many hundreds were awakened but did not run out into the streets.

Three tremors were felt here yesterday. Mild shocks were reported about 10 a.m., 3 p.m, and again at 9 p.m., but the tremblings were so slight they escaped the notice of many residents.

NO. 1 PROPERTY In famous Noranda-Rouyn mining district, lying between Waite-Amulet and Lake Dufault Mines.

Each of these properties is well located in adjoining mining areas where there are either producing mines or properties that have indicated possibilities of becoming such, see the quotations of adjoining mines on the financial page of this newspaper.

An aggressive development campaign now underway on these various groups should produce results of interest to shareholders.

The large acreage (approximately 4,100 acres) and the present widespread interest in development of gold properties makes the shares in this company a very attractive, speculative opportunity to those interested.

Favorable development news from any one of these four properties could result in a substantial market appreciation of Ordala shares.

We suggest that you get in touch with us immediately.

Guelph Can Do It, Why Can't We?

Many Belleville residents will applaud Guelph's action in passing an anti-noise by-law prohibiting blowing of whistles, ringing bells, setting off fire crackers and shouting calculated to disturb the inhabitants. The by-law also prohibits the blowing of train whistles at level crossings in the city.

Train whistling in Belleville is one of the nuisances that we have put up with for long years and only half-hearted attempts have been made to do anything about it. It is said the chief stumbling block is the fear the city will be held liable should an accident occurr. Well, if other cities can eliminate this nuisance then it is about time Belleville should follow suit.

There are so many crossings here that the engineer must keep almost a constant hold on the whistle cord right from the time he enters the city, particularly from the west. He must follow regulations apparently even though there is practically no traffic at some crossings at any time of the day or night but we are all forced to listen to screeching whistles and put up with it because most people think there is nothing that can be done about it. But something can be done and the council will earn the grateful thanks of a multitude of people if they can see fit to act firmly and with decision.

Recall Patton's Prowess

The Stockholm Aftonbladet recalls that Lieut.- Gen. George S. Patton Jr. was one of the American army officers who took part in the Olympic Games in the Stockholm Stadium in 1912.

In the modern pentathlon competition, which includes several forms of sport, he was in fact the only foreign officer who gave the Swedes serious trouble, winning fifth place.

The sports reporters at the time called his energy "incredible." In the distance running race, for instance, he returned to the Stadium completely exhausted but did not falter, though at the goal posts he fainted. In fencing bouts he was described as showing "unusual calm and calculation ,skillfully exploiting his opponent's every weakness."

Bon Voyage, Ernie

A large number of readers will regret that Ernie Pyle has found it necessary to leave the western front and return home for a much-needed rest. His articles have been informative and interesting. He did not write of the movement of war but only about day-to-day life of the boys at the front, something of what they think about, their reaction to the ever-present dangers and how they bore up under the continued monotony of the life with its dirt and hardships. He wrote only of American soldiers but if we had not read the names of those with whom he associated then, for all the difference, he could have been writing of Canadians.

Ernie had to return for a rest because he was getting the jitters, and we imagine any one who has spent twenty-nine months overseas and a year of that time at the front writing about a thousand words daily or a total of seven hundred thousand words or enough to make ninety full newspaper pages of solid type, has earned a right to a rest of some duration.

His column is syndicated in over three hundred newspapers and it is pretty well agreed that his column is the most popular of any war correspondent. Even the state of his welfare is of much concern to many of his readers, for they write to their newspapers to ask about his health and safety. In a recent article on him Time says that privates and generals recognize him wherever he goes, seek him out and confide in him. The U. S. War Department and the high command in the field, rating him a top morale-builder, scan his column for hints.

Recently the War Department adopted a suggestion long urged by the columnist that it revive the practice of awarding a sleeve stripe for each six months of overseas service. Congress has passed the so-called "Ernie Pyle Bill" to raise soldiers' pay ten dollars for combat service, and the right to wear the combat infantrymen's badge. In his second to the last article appearing in this newspaper on Wednesday he wrote that he thought the medical aidmen who work in the front lines should receive the same pay increase and the right to wear the service badge as well. He said these men were deserving of the honor and extra pay and so he proposed to Congress or the War Department that the ruling be altered to include medical aidmen in battalion detachments and on forward. The chances are more than even that his suggestion will be acted upon.

With such a champion it is no wonder that the soldiers regard Pyle with great affection. On his part is regret that he must get away from the grind to seek new perspectives and rest. We can all hope that Ernie Pyle will be restored soon to his former vigor, and that we all may have the pleasure of once again following the everyday life of the common soldier who gets so little publicity for the part he plays in the war but without whose help no war could be won.

Spare the Varnish

(New York Herald Tribune)

As the favorable reports arrive in ever greater volume from all the battle fronts they are bringing with them a new attack of that old and insidious disease verbitis. Verbitis is an ever more dangerous, if somewhat less familiar, form of adjectivitis; when the two appear together, as at present, they are a cause for alarm. Thus, in recent news dispatches Allied troops only rarely go forward; they "storm," "pour," "sweep" or "blast their way" forward.

They are also commonly "victorious" or "triumphant" troops, while the enemy is nearly always a "battered," "shattered," "reeling" or "disorganized" enemy. One can allow more or less for the adjectives, which are always with us. But the verbs, with their powerful emotional connotation, their evocation of inspiring and torrential action (usually far beyond anything by the sober language of the communiques) make a deadlier assault upon the mind.

They seldom correspond to what is actually happening on the ground. A G.I. Joe cautiously hugging the wall of a village street as he inches toward a mortar-position does not usually think of himself as sweeping or blasting his way over a reeling or shattered opposition; even the men of a tank column advancing rapidly through temporary vacant country probably do not feel as if they were an "armored torrent" victoriously "sweeping" everything before them.

The disease is serious because it conveys a distorted picture of events that would be stark and dramatic enough (though perhaps not quite so conductive to dreams of imminent victory) if they were told in straight, uncolored language, which the reader could sprinkle with his own verbs and adjectives just as easily and accurately as the correspondents or the copy desks. It is a disease to which the best of men and newspapers are, admittedly, subject; no one is perfect in this world. But it sometimes seems that it rises to its greatest virulence in the early afternoons, dying down only after the evening, radio programs.

Why Nylons Scarce

One reason for the nylon stocking shortage is glider towlines, says William H. Nicholas in The National Geographic. They are made entirely of nylon. One 350-foot stretch of 15/16-inch cable (normal towline length) is the equivalent of 1,620 pairs of women's nylon stockings.

Nylon has exceptionally elasticity. It can stretch one-third of its length without breaking. In addition, it contracts to its normal length gradually. As a result, when the moving plane overcomes the inertia of the standing glider and sets it in motion, the effect on the occupants is about the same as that on passengers in a street car when it starts to move.

When one plane tows two gliders, the second craft uses a cable seventy-five feet longer than the first, so that there is no danger of colliding in mid-air.

SOLDIER WISH

Oh, to walk about with men
Dressed in common garb again!
Done with medals, ribbons, stars,
Cap insignia, shoulder bars;
Back to suits of gray or blue,
Ties of plain or flaming hue!

When the world again is free,
Pure the sky, and safe the sea,
Done with horror, filth and mud,
Staining earth with human blood,
Very glad will soldiers be
In the garb of liberty.

Caked with clay and wet and torn,
Freedom's uniform we've worn;
Worn it with a strong man's pride.
Wearing it our best have died.
Where they fell some hill to storm
Now they sleep—in uniform!

When we've done with gun and sword,
Beaten back the tyrant horde;
When the furious cannons cease,
Ours the victory and the peace,
We shall dress, with warfare o'er,
As civilians once more.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

September 8th., 1924.

The memorial to the United Empire Loyalists, which stands near the entrance to Queen Victoria Park, was unveiled this afternoon by His Honor Henry Cockshutt, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario. A large crowd of citizens and many school children were present. Col. S. S. Lazier introduced the Lieutenant-Governor in a brief address. His Worship Mayor W. C. Mikel, K.C., delivered an excellent and informative address dealing with the coming of the Loyalists and the visit of Lieutenant-Governor Sir Francis Gore to this community in 1816, which was 108 years ago. He was accompanied by his wife, Lady Bella Gore. Belleville was then called Thurlow Village or Myers Creek and had a population of about 150 persons. That visit had a far reaching effect because at that time Belleville received its name which was chosen to commemorate the visit by adopting the first syllable of Lady Bella Gore's name.

The Rev. A. L. Geen and Mrs. Geen are today celebrating their golden wedding anniversary and are receiving the congratulations and good wishes of many friends.

30 YEARS AGO

September 8th., 1914.

Belleville Fair for 1914 opened yesterday with many exhibits in all departments. Mayor Wills in a brief address declared the fair open.

Conditions were most unfavorable for the regular weekly practice shoot of the Belleville Rifle Association; the wind was blowing a gale and the scores were consequently low. Following are the scores of the small number who took part: J. Douch 127, M. Carrie 106, H. Holton 102, H. Sn̈yd 100, E. J. Austin 70. Conditions were ten shots per man at 200, 500, and 600 yards. Highest possible score 150.

The following officers were elected at a recent meeting of the St. Michael's Branch of the Total Abstinence Society: President, F. Dolan; Vice President, J. M. Phelan; Recording Secretary, T. J. Barrett; Corresponding Secretary, T. J. Manley; Treasurer, J. V. Truaisch; Marshal, F. Walsh.

Canucks in Italy Get Some Timely Tips on How To Act When They Return

By CPL. RON POULTON
In The Maple Leaf

One day, soon or late, sergeants-major will appear in more resplendent roles as war museum caretakers and night club doormen. The guns will be dragged from their pits for the last time and planted in city parks. Newspapers will write of love and mayhem, but not a word of war. Help!

And across the Nation, First Born will look perhaps for the first time on their soldier daddies, and wail: "Ma! There's a burglar in the bedroom!"

From the scattered shores of many lands ships will embark, later to drop their anchors in Bedford Basin or the shelter of the Lion's Gate. You'll be back amidst the happy circle of friends you love to touch, back where you can buy a whole bottle of beer if you want it—if you can afford it.

In other words, the war will be over.

Bull sessions around the canteen will be replaced by shop talk at the Legion, only difference being that a call from the Dear Little Woman could interrupt the tale of how you won the Battle of Hyde Park or what you said to the MP when he asked for your name and number.

You'll become a member of the Royal Canadian Corps of Civilians. You'll be qualified by right of citizenship, if nothing else, to sit, perhaps, on Parliament Hill and clamor for pensions for soldiers prematurely aged or for an open season on zoot suiters.

Gladioli Special

The nearest thing to a troop train you'll encounter in that happy Tomorrow will be the Gladioli Special to Vancouver. The nearest thing to army life will be the monthly meeting of the Volunteer Fire Brigade or a Sunday night band concert in the park. It is only wise then to prepare for such an eventuality with a few DO's and DON'T's.

Many and weird are the intentions voiced by Canadese soldati of what will be their first action on demobilization. These range from killing the inventor of dehydrated cabbage to getting pop-eyed at the nearest pub. Admirable sentiments both, but barbaric in the eyes of the Nation. Strange are the ways of convention that they bar harmless sport of such a nature.

Yes, indeed. Strange are the ways of Civilians. Take the subject of food. It seems, according to those who have lately arrived from Canada, that its people subsist on all manner of strange delicacies. These include an elongated yellow fruit, usually found surrounded by jungles of ice cream, known as a banana. This is peeled by experts in two sweeping motions before eating. On no account eat the peel; it is indigestible.

Native Fare

Among the meats eaten by the natives, or "taxpayers" as they are sometimes called, is a tasty roast or chop obtained from the genus swine. Fowl such as turkey or chicken, are also reported to be in much favor, while breast of pheasant (not to be confused with peasant) and goose also grace the boards of the landed folk and those who have a butcher in the family. If given a bird upon your return to Canada make certain to pluck it before cooking. The feathers are not edible, but are used to stuff a contraption known as a pillow.

If you are asked to dinner you are not expected to provide your own cutlery and dishware. Neither do you retire to a mud puddle in the back yard at the beginning of the first course. Should you commit this error you will miss much since the whole meal is not put on the plate at one time.

Similarly, if obliged to ask anyone to dine, you do not require them to wash their own plates. Nor do you search your guests before they leave the table. Wait until they are ready to leave the house.

On such social occasions it is quite permissible n fact advisable, to use other than four letter words of habitual flavor. Beware of reminiscing in fruity language. Such talk would be best reserved for the company of ex-servicemen in the club to which you will undoubtedly flee at the first chance of escape.

Too Drastic

If it should chance that your hat has been misplaced in the house of a friend appeal to your host's honesty in a quiet and dignified manner. DO NOT take up a stand in front of the door and yell "Alright! Don't anybody move. Some monkey has lifted my lid!"

It is also a social obligation that you respect your friend's liquor. Under no circumstances, even at political rallies will you down the whole bottle at one fell gulp with the boorish observation: "Not bad Steam' We'll sell a pair of boots and buy another crock."

In fact, you DO NOT drink from the bottle at all. (This rule also applies to Ketchup). Aesthetic drunkards use a utensil known variously as a Tumbler, Glass, or Stein, into which and out of which the liquid is poured.

Check First

When confronted—as some undoubtedly will be—with the sight of your ex-fiancee on the arm of another man you do not haul off and clout him. You first ask: "Were you in the Army?" If he says "No" then you haul off and clout him.

On the arising in the morning or the afternoon or the evening, depending upon the state of your purse, you will not be expected to tear the bed apart or fold the blankets into complicated lumps. Such action would be regarded as a cardinal sin guaranteed to make an enemy out of a wife or landlady since, it is said, beds in Canada are made to sleep in, and not to look at.

Siliraly, you DO NOT hide your dirty laundry in the chandelier or under the rug. Bags are reserved for that purpose. When referring to a mattress it will perhaps be polite to refrain from the use of the word "Palliasse." Being unfamiliar to the bulk of civilians it might be misinterpreted.

It is learned that Civilian Law frowns upon the practice of taking an outdoor bath whether it be in your own or your neighbors' yard. To overcome the necessity of such an action known to Civil Law as "indecent exposure," science has invented a rectangular bowl. Usually enamelled to prevent a smooth surface in order to cause many accidents, it is large enough to contain a body of normal size. This admirable attachment, known as a Bath or Tub, is usually supported by four stubby legs much in the manner of a hippopotamus or Japanese tea table. It must not, however, be confused with either.

No Work Party

It is not necessary to command a work party to haul water for it. Nor do you have to lug water to it yourself. There is photographic evidence to prove that two knobs, usually found at one end and inside the Tub, provide all the water needed for even a body much begrimed These are called Faucets by the gentry. More commonly they are known as Taps. Said taps are labelled HOT and COLD, and, when turned counter-clockwise, water will issue from them—if the water bill has been paid.

Failure to pay the bill has resulted in the threat to "Cut your water off," which is now applied to a multitude of situations having nothing whatever to do with water. Having had your bath, as you sometimes will, it is not necessary to expel the water by bailing. Close examination of the tub's interior will serve to reveal a trap or outlet closed by a contrivance of chain and rubber. By yanking out this chain the water will disappear. Hence the saying "Pull the plug."

A word of warning against a strange practice called "picnicking" is perhaps not untimely here. This consists of a couple, or family, leaving the cool comfort of a parlor or veranda, and driving to a park or forest in an overloaded car. It is customary to give the ants and mosquitoes time to put in an appearance before beginning to eat that which could have been eaten in the vermin free confines of a porch or even basement. Spurn all such invitations or suggestions even at the risk of appearing rude. Only sticky little children and dogs have been known to enjoy them.

Avoid Bridge

Picnicking is only one of many queer civilian customs and pastimes. To name a few: The practice of getting up at seven a.m. in the morning; going to church, if and when they want to; murdering their wives (such occurrences are often caused by their habit of playing a rather vicious game called Bridge. Since the action of murdering a wife tends to promote martial discord it would be best to avoid the Bridge table).

Study this lesson carefully. Mark well its meaning. And after a few years of practice you will begin to understand and perhaps even enjoy the strange ways of that type of Human being known as a Civilian.

COFFEE AND HEART DISEASE

In the realm of King Hokum, a visitor from Mars might infer from what he hears on the air and reads in the magazines that in order to guard one's health, steady one's nerves, keep one's digestion in order, protect one's throat, maintain strength and vigor and hold one's job it is imperative that one smoke the right kind of cigarettes, chew the right kind of gum and drink the right kind of beer, wine and whiskey. However, if in spite of these precautions one gets that tired feeling or accumulates a lot of poison (nobody has ever identified it, but the quacks and nostrum mongers agree it is poison) in the blood or, not to stick our necks out, let us say in the system, then one may still be saved if one only has the sagacity or the good fortune to "eliminate" the hypothetical poison of poisons—not with pills, not with salts, not with mineral oil, but with a vegetable cathartic, no matter which old favorite hoss medicine one prefers, for with few exceptions all the more harmful purgative concoctions of great grandmother's day were and are all-vegetable physic.

If the man from Mars were not so gullible as the American Medical Association evidently assumes most of us dumb docs and most of the laity are (see p. 49 of the June 17, '44 issue of that humorous weekly, the Jour. of the American Medical Association), his un-American skepticism would be overwhelmed by the weight of such eminent medical authority — bought and paid for by—you may have one guess whom.

The notion that coffee is bad for the heart has been similarly nurtured. The truth is that coffee neither causes nor aggravates heart disease, when used in the ordinary way as a beverage. A cup or two of good coffee, hot or cold, with or without sugar and milk or cream, gently stimulates the heart, the cerebrum, the muscles, the general metabolism refreshes and relieves weariness, and this pleasant action is not followed by an appreciable depression or let-down.

Children under sixteen and some invalids should not take coffee—invalids should be guided by the advice of their physicians as to the use of coffee. Most persons are kept wakeful if they take coffee within four hours of bedtime. But it is silly to imagine coffee taken at breakfast or after dinner will disturb sleep more than four hours later.

The caffeine in coffee has one particular effect that is rather desirable in many cases of heart disease, especially coronary disease (impaired circulation through the arterioles in the heart wall). It tends to dilate these arterioles and so permit better blood supply to the heart muscle. That's all, brother. All it seems right to say here.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

What's Good for the Cattle

Here in our section of Florida it is necessary to add manganese to fertilizer to make plants thrive and cobalt to the feed of cattle to make cows and steers grow. Would it not be a good idea to add a soupcon of cobalt and manganese to our own food? Just how much is a coupoon?

(P. S. P.)

Answer — If chemical analyses have shown that the soil, fertilizer or feed in that section is poorer in those elements than is the soil in other sections where plants and cattle thrive, I should not hesitate to add a wee trace of both elements to the family's food. A soupcon is a very small quantity a taste, literally just a suspicion.

Gasoline for Ivy Poisoning

Some years after my graduation in homeopathic medicine I decided to try the old theory — passing through a sumac thicket I ate a young bud, with no appreciable symptoms. A week later I repeated this, still with only itching in the mouth when I took anything hot. Since then I have had only localized dermatitis now and then when exposed to poison ivy, oak or sumac. The most satisfactory first aid remedy in my experience has been immediate gentle mopping of the affected skin with ordinary gasoline. I suppose the gasoline dissolves and removes the irritant principle.

(——, M. D.)

Answer — Thank you, Doctor. Gasoline is one of the first aid remedies suggested in the pamphlet on Ivy Poisoning I'm glad to mail on request (no clipping will suffice) to any reader who provides stamped envelope bearing his address.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED

By GEORGE W. STIMPSON

Protected, 1944, by The George Adams Service.

ARE YOU THERE?

In Britain it is customary for a person answering the telephone to ask, "Are you there?"

In the United States the usual telephone salutation is "Hello!"

This salutation first appeared in the English language as "hollow" or "hollo," being generally pronounced with the stress on the last syllable.

In the 17th century the common form was hillo, which late in the 18th century was replaced by "hallo" or "halloo."

By the middle of the 19th century this latter form had been supplanted by "hullo."

The spelling "hello" does not occur in literature until about 1880, when the word became the common salutation over the telephone.

When the first experimental telephone switchboard and exchange was installed in 1878 at New Haven, Connecticut, the signal salutation used was "Ahoy! Ahoy!" This nautical hail is said to have been originally the dreaded war cry of the Vikings.

For a year or two persons answered the telephone by saying "Are you ready to talk?" or "Are you there?" In British usage "Are you there?" is still the customary telephone salutation.

Thomas A. Edison is believed to have been the first person to use "Hello" on the telephone. One day, his biographers say, the famous inventor picked up the receiver of a telephone and said "Hello." The word at once became popular and has been used ever since.

In 1941 the U. S. War Department ordered all its employees when answering interdepartmental calls to give their names. This, the department said, would eliminate considerable waste in time in making contacts over the telephone.

Years ago Dean Alford, author of "The Queen's English," offered a novel but far-fetched theory as to the origin of "Hello." In parts of England, he said, people used to salute each other at a distance by calling out "halloup!" He imagined that this was a survival of the old cry, "A loup! A loup!" that is "Wolf! Wolf!"

WEDDINGS

BLACHFORD—D'ESTERRE

St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, was the setting for an interesting ceremony on Thursday, when Miss Gena R. d'Esterre, daughter of Lt.-Col. and Mrs. John C. D. d'Esterre, was married to Rev. Kenneth F. Blachford, Trenton, son of Mrs. Blachford and the late Frederick A. Blachford, Toronto. Rt. Rev. John Lyons, Lord Bishop of Ontario, assisted by Very Rev. R. S. K. Seeley, dean of Ontario, officiated at the choral service.

Preceded down the aisle by the boy choristers of the cathedral, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Her graceful gown of blush ivory satin was fashioned with a full skirt; her long net veil was held with a Dutch cap trimmed with seed pearls, and she carried an all-white bouquet of gladioli, gardenias and bouvardi. There were no attendants, and the ushers were Rev. Robert P. Walker, Toronto, and Mr. Edward G. Elliott, Hamilton.

TRIPP—LUFFMAN

A pretty wedding was solemnized in Bridge Street United Church, on Sept. fourth, 1944, at three p.m., uniting Dorothea Luffman, only daughter of Mrs. Lucille Luffman, of Kingston, and Corporal Raeburn Tripp, of Sarnia, with Rev. A. J. W. Myers officiating.

The bride wore a street length dress of heaven blue crepe with black accessories and a corsage of Sweetheart roses. Attending the bride was Mrs. Wilfred Tulleyn, of Belleville. She chose a candy pink wool dress, with black accessories and a corsage of gladioli.

Mr. Claude Tripp assisted his brother.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mrs Agnes Paquin with about thirty guests present. The bride's mother received wearing mauve with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Later the bridal couple left for Toronto, Sarnia, Pontiac, Michigan, and various U.S. points.

Rawdon Couple Tendered Shower

Rawdon—Mount Pleasant Church hall was the scene of a happy gathering Friday evening when over one hundred friends and relatives gathered to honor the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Forde Stapley. The bride was formerly Miss Gladys Summers.

Rev. T. F. Townsend was master of ceremonies and in his address he paid tribute to Gladys who will be missed from Mount Pleasant.

A round of community singing was enjoyed with Mr. Don Campbell as leader and Mrs. Carleton Potts officiating at the piano.

Miss Betty McConnell contributed a piano selection. Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave a reading "The Cake That Mother Made." Mrs. Will Jeffs sang "On the Little Dream Ranch With You," with guitar accompaniment and she also contributed a musical number. Mrs. Don Johnson gave "Caleb's Courtship" as a reading. Rev. and Mrs. T. F. Townsend sang a Scotch selection and Mrs. Townsend gave a solo "Keep Smiling." Miss Eleanor Johnson read "Mrs. Murphy's Visitors." Miss Joyce Johnson read an address of appreciation to the newlyweds who were given seats of honor at the front of the hall, and it was signed on behalf of their Mount Pleasant friends by Marian Johnson, Lois McAdam, Eileen Demorest, Joyce Johnson, Edna Hubble and Susan McKeown.

Gladys and Forde both graciously replied and said thank you for the honor and gifts bestowed upon them. They opened the large array of gifts.

Misses Eleanor Johnson and Grace Dunham received the gifts at the door and placed them on the long table on the platform. Misses Lois McAdam and Marian Johnson assisted the happy couple in unwrapping the parcels.

The evening closed with the usual procedure and all extended best wishes and congratulations to Gladys and Forde.

MELROSE W. I.

Melrose, W. I. held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. S. Pascoe Sr. on Thursday, August the 31st. There was a large attendance of members and a number of visitors. A business period followed the opening exercises and the conveners of War Charities reported. Six cartons of honey have been donated and taken in to the local Red Cross. Generous donations were made at this time to the Salvation Army and to the Central Fund for prisoners of war parcels.

The convener of Agriculture and Canadian Industries took charge of the program and Mrs. R. C. English gave a paper on preserving of foods by dehydration known in grandmother's day as drying.

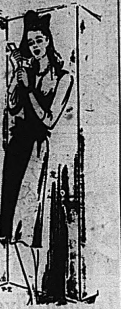
Mrs. G. McLaren gave a paper on "An Ontario Land Problem" which showed how neglected farms of Western Ontario's good grazing lands could be reclaimed by soldier settlers.

In the absence of Mrs. Osborne, an assistant on this program, Mrs. J. Milligan gave a timely reading emphasizing the value of sun ripened summer tomatoes compared to those ripened indoors in late winter and early spring. The latter were only about one-third as rich in vitamin C and one-half as rich in vitamin A. Homemakers will be wise to can a year's supply now, at least one quart per person per week for 10 months of the year is not too much to have on hand.

The Roll Call to which many responded was answered by a "Do you know fact." A number from the song sheet with Mrs. L. Weese accompanist on the banjo was the musical part of the program.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and lunch conveners and a social time enjoyed. Red Cross sewing was discussed and the display of finished garments and quilts repacked.

Wardrobe Wonder



Dark brown wool crepe basic dress.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

HERE'S a splendid specimen of that wardrobe wonder, the basic dress. It is of dark brown wool crepe and the velvet bows at the waist are removable. Shaped tucks define the waistline which is marked by a simple belt when the bows are removed. The neckline is a narrow V, which with the square seems to be the most popular line for general wear. A grand background frock for jewelry and other accessories.

Melrose

The funeral of the late Mrs. Murney Morden was held in the United Church here on Friday last. Rev. Mr. Lougheed conducted the service and the burial ceremony at the graveside in the Melrose cemetery. Miss Marion Blatherwick beautifully rendered "Some Day the Silver Cord Will Break." The sympathy of friends here goes out to the sorrowing relatives.

A number from here enjoyed Monday's field day in Trenton.

Mrs. A. W. McLaren of Belleville with her granddaughter Marcia Blatherwick spent the week end at Grant McLaren's.

The W.M.S. meets this week at the home of Mrs. E. M. Badgley.

Rev. Mr. Lougheed spent the dinner hour at the home of George Macfarlane on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Beatty of Belleville visited relatives over the week end and holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hall visited friends here on Sunday.

Mrs. R. C. English recently entertained to dinner Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bennett and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Macfarlane.

PICTON

Season's Crop Burned in Fire

Picton, Sept. 8.—Three buildings, which contained the season's crop, were destroyed by fire, during an electrical storm, yesterday morning. The owner, Thomas Alexander, who resides at Yerexville, three miles northeast of Picton, estimates his loss at $5,000, which is partly covered by insurance.

Lost with the main barn were 60 tons of hay, 1,600 bushels of grain, machinery and a calf. The henhouse was also destroyed with all the hens being burned. Ten pigs perished when the pig pen burned.

Mr. Alexander and his son ran to the barn in their night clothes and were able to release cows and horses before being driven out by the heat.

The wind was blowing directly toward the house and gave the volunteer fire fighters a difficult task to save. Buckets of water were carried from neighboring cisterns and wells. Lack of water in the farm's well, prevented Picton firemen from doing effective work, but chemicals were use on the house.

The fire attracted hundreds of people from many miles around.

It was the only damage reported as a result of the severe storm.

Anti-aircraft Camp at Point Petre Closed

Picton, Sept. 8.—The anti-aircraft camp at Point Petre has closed for the season. Reserve units from across Canada trained there. The officers and sergeants gave a dance and buffet supper at the arena pavilion, while the N.C.O.'s and sergeants held a dinner at the Legion Hall.

Two electric buoys have been placed to mark the entrance to Picton harbor, as an aid to night navigation. The Government steamer Grenville did the work.

Defeating Picton in three straight games, the R.A.F. here won the local softball league title when they defeated the town team 9-8 Tuesday night.

Double-Edged Exercising

By HELEN FOLLETT

CONFUSING and befuddling it is to the beauty seeker to be told that the same exercises that reduce fat calves will give fuller contour to skinny shanks. But there is nothing surprising about it. Muscle movements shake off fat cells. They stimulate the circulation in undeveloped fibers, and so make them larger. Exercise brings conditions to normal.

In the summer season there is swimming and there is tennis, both excellent exercises for normalizing the figure. Also, they are delightful sports that act favorably upon the mind and the spirits. Swimming, less strenuous than tennis, works more slowly. Tennis does the business because of the quick actions of the mucles of the legs as the player goes up on her toes after the ball or skips lightly over the tennis court.

Skating Good Exercise

In the winter season, there is skating, which also causes leg muscles to become highly energized.

Rhythmic dancing is offered to the woman who does not go in for outdoor fun. Besides putting the body in form generally and improving the silhouette, this pastime makes for grace of movement. Teachers of physical education recommend it for women who have too much spread amidships would take off a few inches from waist and thighs.

Rope Jumping

Rope jumping is the best bet for the feather weight whose legs scarcely cast a shadow. Jump six times on one foot, six times on the other six, times on both and repeat. We do not recommend this exercise for the forty-year-olds; it might prove to be a strain on the heart, but for the young fry it is ideal.

Massage is helpful, but takes its time to produce results. To delete fat cells, pick up the flesh, roll firmly between thumb and fingers. Use talcum powder when doing this, so the fingers will not slip. For developing, a stroking motion should be used, starting at the ankle working upward to the knee, pressing the fingers deeply into the flesh.

Saco Marines Take Advantage Of G.M. Errors To Register 14-7 Win in Softball Playdowns

Return Game With Oshawa Will be Played Here on Saturday

HEAVY HITTING

Taking full advantage of a flock of Oshawa errors and free passes to the initial sack, the local Saco Marines went one up on the General Motors intermediate entrant in the O.A.S.A. playdowns, when in the Motor City Thursday evening they pounded out a total of twelve safeties to come home on the long end of a 14-7 score. The second game will be played at the local exhibition park on Saturday afternoon when with any kind of luck the Marines should make it two straight.

Big Jim Hunter was a thorn in the side of the Oshawa nine all evening as up to the ninth inning he scattered six safeties to limit the losers to four runs until the dying moments of the game when with two aboard McGarry caught one of his Sunday pitches to put it over Phil Loft's head for a homer. In addition Hunter aided his own cause with a run producing single and struck out two, while he walked but three.

Had Trouble Finding Plate.

Opposed to Hunter on the hilltop was Oshawa's ace southpaw, Bennett, who had trouble finding the plate most of the evening issuing seven free passes to first base. Belleville got to him for a flock of runs in the early innings and coasted to victory in the later stanzas. Herbie Henn's first inning homer put the locals in good frame of mind and they batted all the way around both in the third and fifth innings to pile up runs.

Returning to his former position at short "Red" Carson played a smart game for the locals, while Jack Wardaugh at third also kicked in with a few nice defensive efforts, coming through in the last inning with a one-handed stop of Brudek's line drive to end a belated rally on the part of the homesters. Offensively the locals worked the bunt to advantage.

For the Oshawa nine McGarry at second base stood out on the night's play and was also a threat at the plate, accounting for three of his team's eight bingles.

ST. LOUIS BROWNS BACK ON TOP IN AMERICAN LOOP

Dizzy Trout Scores 24th Win by Shutting Out Cleveland

VOISELLE WINS 19TH

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

St. Louis was back on top of the American League today, tied with New York Yankees, after three days in second place, but infield jitters and the onrushing Detroit Tigers gave Manager Luke Sewell no peace of mind.

Detroit's idleness during an open date braked their advance for at least 24 hours but the error column was the Brownies' newest menace. In the last seven games, 14 misplays have been registered against them.

The Brownies almost missed their chance to tie the idle Yanks last night because of early-inning boots against Chicago. Three runs in the ninth inning, two off the bat of Mike Chartak who came through with a bases-loaded single, turned the tide 5-4.

Detroit pulled to within a single game of the deadlocked leaders on Paul (Dizzy) Trout's impressive three-hit shut-out of Cleveland, 3-0, for his 24th victory. His record showed 28 complete games and six shut-outs (tops in the American) for 297 innings of effort.

Stretches Hitting Streak.

Roger (Doc) Cramer stretched his amazing hit string to 24 safe blows in his last 44 times at bat as the Tigers raked Jim Bagby for nine singles and a double in his seven-inning stay.

The National presented an all-night program featured by St. Louis' 14th successive triumph over Chicago, 3-2. The Bruins had a 2-1 edge with two out in the ninth and appeared to be on the way to routing the Cardinals' jinx but couldn't make it. Don Johnson's error let the tying run in and Bob Chipman wild-pitched the big one home.

Bill Voiselle copped his 19th as New York trimmed Boston, 9-3, with the help of Mel Ott's 26th homer and Ernie Lombardi's ninth. Ed Heusser bested Fritz Ostermueller to give Cincinnati a shade over Pittsburgh, 2-1, in the first game of their series for second place. The Phillies came from behind in the late innings to down the Dodgers, 7-3 in their cellar series.

Voiselle now seems a cinch to become the first rookie pitcher to win 20 games in a season since Jim Turner and Lou Fette of the Boston Braves and Cliff Melton of the Giants did it in 1937.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—Of all the arguments for and against night baseball, the one likely to carry the most weight is seen in the following note which appeared in the Atlanta Constitution last Tuesday morning: "Due to a partial holiday in the Constitution's composing room yesterday there is no story on the sports page regarding the Atlanta Crackers-New Orleans doubleheader last night."....Lew Tendler, the old-time lightweight, has just become a grandfather for the third time....The Nazi radio reports that the Hungarian swimming association has barred a number of its best swimmers from competition for refusing to take part in an intra-Axis meet at Bratislava. Probably figured they wouldn't have a chance against the Germans, who have been showing great ability as tankers.

Silver Tongue Side.

Before the Bears-All Stars football game, Sid Luckman spent considerable time composing a speech to deliver in accepting the Joe Carr Memorial Trophy as the most valuable player in the National football season. Coach Luke Johnsos who listened to Sid's rehearsals until he knew the speech better than Luckman, had to stand by at the big moment while Sid stammered into the mike: "Thanks, er-er—everybody. Thanks."...."All that punishment I took for just that," Johnsos moaned afterward "And to top it off, they gave Sid the wrong trophy."

Trenton Flyers Win Baseball Title No. 1 Training Command Defeating Hagersville by 6-2

Contest Played at Maple Leaf Stadium at Toronto

ALWAYS ON TOP

Toronto, Sept. 8 (CP)—The Trenton Flyers won the baseball championship of the R.C.A.F.'s No. 1 Training Command, when they registered an easy 6-2 victory over the Hagersville Cheetahs at Maple Leaf Stadium here last night. The game was played before a regularly scheduled Toronto-Buffalo International fixture.

LAC. Lefty Jack Garton who limited the Cheetahs to five hits contributed a triple and a single to Trenton's 11-hit attack off FO. Pete Wright. Although he struck out 10 men, Wright contributed to his downfall by tossing three wild pitches with runers on base.

The Flyers, sparked by second-sacker LAC. Paul Raymond and shortstop Cpl. Eddie Geraldi, aided Garton's fine hurling performance with a good defensive showing, featured by three double plays.

Trenton solved Wright's slants early, notching single runs in the first three frames. In the first inning Flt. Lt. Mike Malka pushed a hit through the box, went to second and third on infield outs and scored when Wright uncorked a wild pitch.

Garton Hits Triple.

Garton smashed a long triple to the scoreboard to drive in the second run in the next frame, and in the third the Flyers gained their winning margin when Geraldi singled to right, stole second and crossed the plate on Cpl. Mike Dzuria's base knock to centre-field.

Just to make it more decisive they added a single marker in the sixth and two in the seventh on a double by Dzuria and singles by LAC. Jack Merpaw and Lefty Garton.

Hagersville entered the scoring column in the second inning on successive two-base wallops by FO. Jim Smith and Pete Wright. They scored their final counter when Clayton Crawford walked, stole second and third and strolled home on an outfield fly. However, Garton tightened up and set the Cheetahs down with one safety the rest of the route.

The Cheetahs threatened again in the eighth inning when Garton passed the first two men to face him, but he forced the next three batters to lift out.

LAC. Frank Liscombe capped off a fine performance at short for the losers with a pair of singles, while first baseman Clayton Crawford showed fine style around the initial sack.

SWACO LASSIES MOVE INTO FINALS SOFTBALL LOOP

Defeat Universal Girls 6 to 5 to Win Second Game of Series

MEET RELIANCE

With a barrage of extra base hits in the third inning that produced four runs the SWACO girls' softball team advanced to the finals in the Belleville Ladies' Softball League finals by eking out a 6 to 5 win over the Universal lassies at the Armouries Lawn Thursday night.

With their coach, Tommy Colden in hospital, the SWACO girls moved early to the front to score single runs in the initial two frames and practically cinch the pastime with a four-run splurge in the third, when Rene Colden and I. Meens hit successive doubles to be followed by Peg Rowbotham's home run.

After scoring single runs in the fourth and fifth, Skipper Alexander's Universals rose up in the top half of the seventh to place their first three batters aboard. Donaldson singled as did Zebedee to put two on base. Up walked Jean Corneal to drive one far over the Pinnacle Street wall for a home run and put Universal within one run of knotting the count. Rosie Reeves' subsequent double was wasted so Lois Calcutt took care of the final out to cinch her own win and advance the SWACO lassies into the finals for the gals' softball league championship against the Reliance girls commencing next Monday.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Worse

The wife of a sporting fellow prohibited her husband from backing horses. But he continued secretly.

One evening an old friend, unaware of the prohibition, dropped in and said: "Well, did you have any luck with Jeanette yesterday?"

Instantly the wife shot her husband an ugly look and went out of the room.

"You've torn it," groaned the husband. "My wife thinks I don't bet now. You'll have to square this with her."

In a few moments when the wife returned, the friend said breezily: "I say Mrs. Smith, I'm awfully sorry if I misled you just now. Jeanette isn't a horse, you know. She's a barmaid"

News of the Champ.

The following article appeared in the "Maple Leaf," a Canadian newspaper publication for the troops in Italy and was written by Cpl. Don Cowie, sports editor of the Maple Leaf.

Says Don: "He didn't exactly resemble the notorious killer they had read about as he clowned through three exhibition rounds of boxing at Lido di Roma this week but Sgt. Joe Louis, world heavyweight boxing champion, showed enough to satisfy some 2,000 American GI's and British soldiers he'd be "a nice guy to have on your side."

One Round Enough.

Just arrived back by plane from a Corsican sojourn, the Louis troupe lost little time in resuming its Italian tour. Several exhibitions were provided by American and British soldiers and members of the troupe and, though good boxing was in the minority, the show was well worth a look-see.

An American officer, Capt. Brodie, who had done some boxing back at University of Georgia, went one round with Louis and decided he had had enough, despite the fact Joe was merely clowning and passed up every opportunity of conking him. Detroit's Bob Smith, old pal and sparing partner of the champ, stepped in to go two rounds and it was then the on-lookers were given a slight sample of what might be expected if Louis were to start swinging in earnest.

The headgear-sporting Smith stepped right in and commenced to slug with Joe, who cuffed him with a few rights and his famous left until Smith was soon crouching and clinching and generally bewildered. It was anything but an impressive exhibition but the "fans" went away happy because "they had seen Louis."

Good Luck Lads.

The champion reiterated a previous statement to the effect he definitely would not be defending his title until the duration. It had been suggested Louis and Billy Conn might tangle again since the recent lifting of the ban on service bouts by U.S. military authorities.

Louis took time out to comment on the Canadians over here. "They sure are doing a swell job. Send them my best regards and good luck to all of them," he said.

Shooting at Record.

The Cardinals, who appeared headed for a variety of National League records this season, will have to step at a better than .885 clip this month to break the circuit's modern September victory mark.

The record was set in 1936 when the Chicago Cubs compiled 23 triumphs in 26 games for an .885 percentage, running off a string of 21 straight wins to clinch the title. The next best record of 21-4 is shared by the 1930 and 1942 Cardinals.

Other outstanding September drives by pennant winners were staged by the Braves, 1914, 26-5; Cubs, 1906 and 1938, 21-5; Dodgers, 1920, 20-5, and Cardinals, 1943, 22-6.

In 1916, when the Giants reeled off 26 straight victories in September to establish a new major league standard, their month's record showed 29 victories against five defeats.

Remember When.

Paul Dean came back to the St. Louis Cardinals in an endeavour to prove his once-disabled right arm had regained its power six years ago today. Paul, recalled from Dallas of the Texas League, failed to make good and was shipped back to the minor leagues with an outright release from the Red Birds. The Cardinals of 1944 don't need any of the daffyness boys to win National League laurels.

Helped In.

Despite the fact the Oshawa General Motors nine kicked in with a number of costly errors and otherwise presented the locals with runs at Oshawa last evening, local fans are not advised to sell the western club short on their return game here Saturday evening. The score of 14-7 is not representative of the relative strength of the two clubs. Oshawa's ousting of the strong Peterboro club from the playdowns, being an indication. On the night's play Belleville was undoubtedly the better club but 14 runners left on bases is not good softball in any man's club. It will be a good game here on Saturday and with a win already under their belts the locals have a big advantage to take the series.

By SYD THOMAS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Sept. 8. (CP)—At risk of being tedious, the text today again will be the familiar one of the National Hockey League presidency or, where is the thrice-blessed man? Everyone in the country seems to be definitely agog about the whole thing and will be until the decision is made public.

Connie Smythe of Toronto, seems to be gaining strength as a proposed candidate, and Andy (Toronto Star) Lytle reports at least three of N.H.L. governors are in favor of choosing him—Maj. E. W. Bickle of Toronto, Bill Tobin of Chicago and Lester Patrick of New York. If Detroit's Jim Norris will give his O.K. Lytle adds, Smythe will be as good as in.

All that is assuming the peppery little major will accept the job, which has reportedly been offered him through intermediaries. Connie likes excitement, and might not want to be tied down in the staid presidential chair.

Meanwhile, Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara, himself a nominee, wonders humorously what would happen if Connie gained the seat of authority over the governors, with many of whom he has had rather vitriolic relations betimes.

It would be an intresting experiment at that but O'Meara thinks Connie could rise to the occasion and make the governors like it, "in public at least".

Iron Man, Wooden Horses:

Ben Buffett of New Waterford, N.S., is just as hard on horses as he is on footwear. Buffett is the runner who twice entered the Boston Marathon and twice failed because he wore his shoes out. The other day, just to keep in shape, Buffet ran from New Waterford to Sydney, about 12 miles away, and back. He towed a horse on a halter behind him, changed it at Sydney and ran back with another one. Reports say the second nag was buckling at the knees when Buffet led it home, but the runner wasn't even breathing overly hard.

Just No Use:

The fans have been riding Mike Guzzell unmercifully when he umpires girls' softball play-offs in Port Arthur, so he decided to do something about it. Not wanting to flee ignobly he shaved off his mustache and went on the field in the next game, hoping to assume anonymity in a new identity. He fooled everyone until the seventh inning, when some hawkeye in the bleachers cottoned to his trick and bellowed:—"Well, I'll be hornswaggled if it isn't the same old goon".

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 475

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When your bridge is not proficient and no medals have you won, it is probably sufficient that you had a lot of fun. But when adept you get itching to be always in there pitching.

An opening bid of two no-trump shows a hand that contains the equivalent of eight no-trump tricks. They are high cards; aces, kings, queens. And there are only 12 of them in a pack.

If, therefore, you have eight and your partner has four, your pair has all the high cards. Consequently, you should be able to make a slam. If not a grand slam, at least a small slam.

If partner has eight and you have three, your pair has 11 of the possible 12 high cards. So, opponents must have one. But your pair may still make a small slam. Because of 13 tricks being in a deal.

Suppose your partner opens with two no-trump when you have this hand:

♠A 10 5
♥A 8 4
♦K 7 4 3
♣J 9 7

If partner has the eight he says he has, your three high cards are enough for a slam. So, instead of being content with only a game, you should aspire to reach a slam.

With two aces and a king, you can use the ace and king asking signal; the bid of four no-trump. In response thereto, partner must reply with a signal that shows how many aces and kings he has.

It is possible, of course, that the 12th high card not held by your pair is an ace. But it is more than likely that your partner has two aces if he has eight high cards.

Anyway, as soon as partner responds to your four no-trump bid, you will know the total number of aces and kings in your pair. Then is when you can decide whether to go to seven or stop at six.

What I am trying to impress on you is that there are only so many high cards in a pack. And a pair of partners can count them. Unless somebody has slipped in a pinochle deck.

AT THE CAPITOL

Gene Autry

"Henry Aldrich Swings It"

Swing or classical music — you can have your choice in Paramount's newest Aldrich family comedy, "Henry Aldrich Swings It," now playing at the Capitol Theatre as the added hit, with Jimmy Lydon as Henry, and Charles Smith, John Litel, Olive Blakeney, Mimi Chandler and Vaughan Glaser.

Fans will get liberal portions of both swing and classical, as a matter of fact, with an interesting combination of the two musical styles thrown in for good measure. A novel swing arrangement of Chopin's "Fantasy Impromptu" will be heard, as well as the first movement of Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" played straight, and part of Tschaikowsky's "Violin Concerto."

On the same program a color cartoon and the 12th Chapter of Captain America will also be shown.

AT THE BELLE

"You Can't Ration Love"

An earful of music and an eyeful of charm is promised patrons of the Belle Theatre tonight where Paramount's "You Can't Ration Love" is showing with a star-studded cast headed by Johnnie Johnston and Betty Rhodes.

Four catchy new tunes, "Love is This," "Ooh-Ah-Oh," "Look What You Did to Me" and "Nothing Can Replace a Man" hit the musical jackpot, the grapevine reports, while an old favorite "Louise", is rendered in a delightful horse-and-buggy scene. D'Artega and his All-Girl Orchestra offer some musical gems with "Scat" Davis, Marjorie Weaver, Bill Edwards, Marie Wilson and others adding to the general entertainment.

"The Navy Way," Comedy Film

It's hit the deck, boys, and down to the sea at the Belle Theatre where Paramount's "The Navy Way" opened yesterday at the Belle Theatre to salvos of applause and laughter from an appreciative audience.

This Pine-Thomas production really hits the mark as it combines drama, comedy and romance in a bright story about recruits at the Great Lakes Naval Station.

Bob Lowery, Jean Parker, Bill Henry and Roscoe Karns head the cast.

"The North Star" Romantic Drama

Dark and vivid Anne Baxter and eighteen-year-old Farley Granger, new Samuel Goldwyn "find," constitute the screen's newest romantic team. The pair furnish the love interest in Goldwyn's current production for RKO Radio release, "The North Star," which deals with the heroic resistance of the people of a little village in the Ukraine to the Nazi invasion and arrives at the Belle Theatre this week end.

Said to be one of the most dramatic films of recent years, the new offering presents an exciting story of romance and action to American theatre-goers. Dana Andrews, Walter Huston, Walter Brennan, Erich von Stroheim and Ann Harding are also featured in the picture, which was directed by Lewis Milestone.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Sensations of 1945"

Andrew Stone's new musical "Sensations of 1945" which opens at the McCarthy theatre on Saturday has everything one would want from a musical—and more. It has a splendid cast headed by Eleanor Powell (Miss Taps herself) with Dennis O'Keefe, W. C. Fields, C. Aubrey Smith, Sophie Tucker, Eugene Pallette, Mimi Forsythe, David Lichine in solid supporting roles. It has two of the top swing bands in the country, Woody Herman and his hi-de-honess of swing, Cab Calloway. It has some of the finest circus acts in the entire world and it has nine of the snappiest, gayest tunes a footloose jitterbug ever shook a foot to. Besides all of these attributes it has one we give special mention—girls, girls, girls.

Mr. Stone who apparently has his finger strategically planted on the public pulse has produced a film that sparkles with all of the "escapist" funning any audience could possibly desire. With a combination like W. C. Fields, Eugene Pallette and Sophie Tucker giving out with their inimitable routines, need we expound?

Unlike the average or "spectable" musical, "Sensations of 1945" boasts a top notch plot written by Federick Jackson, a writer of more than a score of hit musical comedies.

Miss Eleanor Powell, adding to her already established tap dancing reputation, runs off with top honors for her portrayal of a bright young press agent who will do anything—well almost—to hit page one of the nation's papers. In this pursuit the dancing lady gets the chance to reveal some really fine acting talents.

The story concerns one Ginny Walker (Eleanor Powell) a dancer who takes over the management of an almost defunct publicity office and blows the breath of life into it.

Her first step is to engineer the opening of a club called "Circus in the Sky." Here, miles above Manhattan, the best circus acts in the world, the Pallenberg bears, Mel Hall world's champion unicyclist, the Copelands, headliners of the roller skating world; Hubert Castle, daredevil wirewalker, the Johnson Brothers, Indian club swingers, and the Flying Cristianis, daring tumblers and teeter-board artists, the wonder horse, "Starless Night," perform for the blase habitues of cafe society. The club becomes world famous when Hubert Castle walks the high wire across the Royal Gorge in Colorado all for sweet publicity's sake. From that moment "Circus in the Sky" is an established institution and "Powell" a name to be reckoned with.

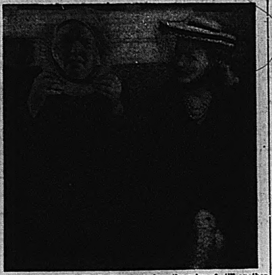
Following the success of "Circus in the Sky" Eleanor opens the "Old Plantation," featuring Cab Calloway and a host of other negro artists, most notably Dorothy Donegan, outstanding "boogie-woogie" pianist. Once more the enterprise is a phenomenal success and Eleanor leaves to find use for her talents at the "Gay Nineties Club" which stars Sophie Tucker. At the "Gay Nineties" Powell goes back to her first love and dances two terrific routines; one a "pin ball" number in which she dances on a tremendous pin-ball machine, complete with lights and "tilt"; the other a jitterbug dance with David Lichine.

The truest thing one can say about "Sensations of 1945" is that it lives up to its title—it is a sensation you must experience.

"She's a Soldier Too."

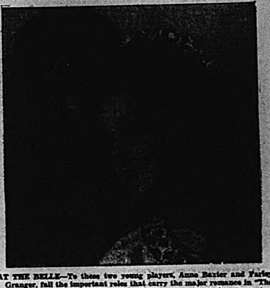
In "She's a Soldier Too" Columbia's home front comedy-drama which opens on Saturday as the second feature attraction at the McCarthy theatre, you'll meet the grandest bunch of gals who ever fought over a guy and turned the heat on an old maid's icy heart. Fighting the battle of production.. and the sexes..these swing-shift Susies are wearing the pants these days. They've got that boardinghouse reach..that reaches into the heart of America. But there's plenty of room for drama..room for laughs...room for excitement as they get their man and still rate raves for the battle they put into production of those vital war materials.

Included in the cast are Beulah Bondi, Nina Foch, Jess Barker, Lloyd Bridges, Percy Kilbride, and Ida Moore.



AT THE McCARTHY—W. C. Fields examines the ruins of still another straw hat in "Sensations of 1945" starting next at the McCarthy Theatre. The young lady is Louise Curry. Companion feature is "She's a Soldier Too" with Beaulah Bonol and Jess Barker.

AT THE CAPITOL—The above is a scene from "Ride Tenderfoot Ride" starring Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette, now playing at the Capitol Theatre. Also on the same program and starring Jimmy Lyden is "Henry Aldrich Swings It" a jam session of fun.



AT THE BELLE—To these two young players, Anne Baxter and Farley Granger, fall the important roles that carry the major romance in "The North Star". Samuel Goldwyn's greatest picture, featuring Dana Andrews, Walter Brennan and Walter Huston, arriving at the Belle this week-end.

ORIOLES REMAIN IN FIRST PLACE OF INT. LEAGUE

LEAFS LOSE

(By The Associated Press)

Baltimore remained in first place in the International League last night as the result of one of the strangest games of the season.

In coming up with a 21-10 decision over Jersey City, the Birds were handed 16 bases on balls and benefited by eight Jersey errors. The comedy started in the ninth inning when Walter Ockey who came on to relieve in the eighth, walked 11 men, six consecutively. Baltimore scored 10 runs in the inning on only two hits.

Newark hung onto second place, one percentage point away from Baltimore as they shaded Syracuse 4-3. Joe Page won his own game as he brought Joe Busas in with the winning run on a long fly.

Buffalo halted Toronto's third place drive as they went 10 innings to record a 9-7 triumph over the climbing Leafs. Combing three Leaf pitchers for five runs in the 10th, after Toronto had come from behind to tie the score in the last of the ninth, the Bisons pulled 1 1-2 games away from the fourth-placers.

Rochester's Glen Gardner racked up No. 12 as he subdued Montreal, 8-2. Moe Alderholt, just ordered up by Brooklyn, spoiled a shutout for Gardner when he poled a first-inning home run.

CHAPTER 14

I wondered where Pamela had got hold of "Reggie". That he had come back with her from London when the war began, I knew. I had puzzled a little about that at the time. Why had a healthy Englishman—I'd really thought he was English for Reginald seemed as British as tea and crumpets!—left his King and Country when they were engaged in mortal conflict? Why, in fact, had he been permitted to leave?

I turned back to Wayne Courtney's yearbook photograph, studied it a long moment, and re-read the biography carefully. I closed the book. There was something stirring in my head, something I wanted to remember, something of vital importance. . . I could see fragments glimmering for a second, then fading. I had felt like this once before: the afternoon I was dressing to go to Sandra's debut. The murder hadn't taken place then. Still, there had been something in my mind in connection with Pamela that I wanted to remember, something that was stirring then as it was now. I was furious I couldn't grasp that elusive something. . . .

Going into the kitchen and putting on some coffee to brew, I sat down at the kitchen table and sank my chin in my hands. I thought and thought and thought—but I couldn't remember. What was it?

My eyes moved unseeingly toward the window. I could see the Keith house, the Eustace house, Pamela's stables, gardens and swimming pool hedged in by tall boxwood. . . .Suddenly I did see something that close up would have been missed completely, as undoubtedly the police had missed it.

In a feverish haste I jumped up from the table, raced out of the apartment and down the red carpeted corridor to the B-Wing entrance. Pushing through the door, I swung left across the terrace to the circular-shaped rock garden.

The hotel's rock garden is a gorgeous floral spot in the springtime, set between large rocks seemingly having no order but which in reality had been carefully and artistically spaced: small complete circles, one within the other, and all enclosed by a wide outer circle. It was this wide outer circle that had caught and fixed my attention.

Close up like this nothing unusual was noticeable, but from the distance of my kitchen window a slightly yawning space, where a large rock had been, stood out like a missing incisor in a perfect set of teeth, spoiling the pattern.

I stood there gazing down at that space. I could see that the two rocks on either side of it had been moved together a little. The deep indentation where the big rock had been dug up had been carefully refilled and, to make sure this was so, I bent over and plunged my middle finger into the ground. The earth was soft, my finger sank in it.

I looked carefully at the other rocks then. Then I dug up one, and felt my heart beginning to pound. The rock in my hands was about the size and shape of the one exhibited at the Coroner's inquest.

I galloped all over the neighboring grounds then, looking at the rocks. All of these were smooth and rather small. In fact, only in that rock garden just east of B-Wing and directly in front of our kitchen window were the rocks big and sharp-toothed. . . .

And—murderous!

I went scooting back to our apartment, found the coffee percolating like mad, and gulped down a hot cup of it, hoping it would stop me from trembling. The cup rattled noisily on the saucer, my hand was so unsteady. I knew now where the murderer's rock had come from, and I knew by the distance between the scene of the crime and the rock garden that Pamela's death had not been an impulsive act as I had originally believed, but a premeditated murder, all details worked out in advance.

Again the premonition of personal danger swept over me again. Wondering if anyone—perhaps the murderer!—had seen me snooping around that rock garden, I found myself choking on each gulp of coffee, and glancing uneasily over my shoulder. That the murderer—he or she—was out to get me for my inquisitive interference in this case, I was as sure then as I was later that night. . . .

I stood perfectly still; then bawled: "Dad! Dad! DAD!"

He came loping down the hall, whirled into the kitchen, his face white with fright.

"What in blinkety-blank is the matter now?" he barked.

"I'm sc-c-c-ared", I chattered. "I just feel that the—the murderer's out to get me. That he's watching me right —now. I can—sort of feel his—eyes on me. Watching. . . watching. . . ."

"Rats!" scoffed Dad. And then, "Good Lord, Letty, you're shaking all over. Listen to your teeth".

"And l-l-l-listen to my kn-knees", I moaned.

Soon Dad ordered me off to my room for some sleep. But I could not go just then. Even now I can't bear to think of that night, and what happened when I finally did fall asleep. . . .

"Part of all this is nervousness", Dad declared. "It's all excited imagination. The murderer couldn't be looking at you. There's no one here, but us".

"Maybe", I said weakly.

And to reassure me, we went on a safari through the whole apartment, opening closet doors, looking in ridiculously improbable places like bureau drawers . . . We found Mother submerged in her bubble-bath and Dad said solemnly, "Say 'hello' to Letty, Mom, so she'll know you aren't Dracula".

Mother blew a couple of bubbles from her chin, demanding: "What the mischief is this? Why on earth would Letty think I'm Dracula. Who is Dracula?"

"Hitler's first cousin", answered Dad, and we barely managed to laugh.

In my room at last, I couldn't force myself to peer under the flounced skirt of my tester-bed. Dad got down on all fours, groaning as he did so, and stuck his head and shoulders under the ruffled marquisette.

"There's nobody hiding around here", he reported. "You take a bath, Miss Sleuthy-slacks, get into bed and sleep of the jitters".

Later, I phoned Sandra. She assured me that the Eustaces, Fanella and Luke Cramer were remaining home all evening and it would be perfectly all right if I didn't come over to her house. Then I reached for a book of poems and was up to my ears in stars plus moonlight when the phone rang.

I yelled at Dad to please tell anyone who called that I was out. But when the phone rang for the sixth time it occured to me that Father might tell Peter Gibson this fable, too.

I yelled out lustily, "Hey, Pop, if Peter calls, I'm definitely in!"

"He has called. Twice," Dad yelled back. I told him you were out".

I gritted my teeth, then decided that maybe it was just as well. A girl doesn't want to be too available even when she knows the matrimonial noose is about ready for use. . .

At about ten-thirty, my parents came to my door, Mother looking regal in black velvet and pearls, and Dad something to write home about in tails. My first reaction was: I'm going to be alone in this big apartment with its endless doors and windows, and its balcony which is near the ground: too near. But I checked that surge of fear flatly refusing to spoil my parents' evening.

I said as lightly as I could: "You both look gorgeous! If I had hand-picked my parents, I couldn't have done better."

"We like you too," beamed Dad.

Mother smiled her full approval and added: "Letty, turn out that light and get some sleep. I don't like the lines under your eyes. Twenty-one is too young for lines."

"If the Keith murder isn't solved soon," I said, "my face is going to look like a road map."

"Well, you're safe here anyway." said Mother. "And if you'll just quit snooping around, Dr Courtney won't bother you, too. Tomorrow I'm going to tell that young man, personally, that you know nothing about the case. Nothing at all."

"If you do that, Angelica," said Dad sagely, "he'll suspect you know he's the murderer. He'll be after both you and Letty."

"Oh, mercy!" cried Mother. "Oh dear. I hadn't thought of that."

"Lets all keep out of it," said Dad. "Lets pretend we didn't even know Pamela Keith. Frankly, I don't think the Doctor is a murderer. Too clean-cut. Too sensitive. Nice hands."

"Actually, we didn't know Pamela," rejoined Mother. "Of course Letty knows everyone, working on that paper the way she does."

"Oh, sure," said I lightly. "I know everyone. Now take Jack the Rip—"

"I meant social people," cut in Mother firmly.

"The people I write about? The people whose names I keep before the newspaper devouring public?" I laughed for just a week ago, Mother had gone into a long tirade about Washington society. She had said that, outside of a few Virginians who lived here, and a few native cave-dwellers who had married into famous Virginia families like her own—which excused them in a fashion for having had the bad taste to be born in the Capital! —Washington society was a horrible mess.

Mother and I disagreed on that point. Virgian though I am, I have adopted Washington as my own, fierce in its defense, blind to its faults when others criticize.

"So at last you admit there are some socially acceptable people in Washington," I remarked. "And whose great event of social magnitude are you off to now?"

"Kate Lote's said Mother.

"Ouch!" said I, remembering that Kate Lote arrived in Washington two years ago to take over a temporary appointment as a Senator. She marched right into the spotlight and had loved it — a short, fat, fussy little woman. Being rich she lived in solitary grandeur in an old mansion in the downtown business section, entertained important politicos lavishly and endlessly, and had coined aphorisms in her campaign for re-election: "GIVE LOTE THE VOTE!" Her opponenthad come out with: "GIVE KATE THE GATE!",

"If you're going to be a snob," I told Mother, "you ought to be consistent. Imagine your at that woman's!"

"Kate's great-grandmother was a Virginian," explained Mother, busily white-washing her new friend.

"There are Virginians—and Virginians," said I, remembering Reginald.

"Sometimes, Letty," stressed Mother, "it's difficult to believe you're my own daughter."

"It certainly is," emphasized Dad and, when Mother withered him with a look, he added suavely as any of the diplomats who've made such a hash of world affairs: "Letty'll never be as beautiful as you, my dear. Never!"

"Go on to your party, Mom," said I, having no way to know that one small thing Mother learned at that reception of Kate Lote's would be a vital link in solving the mystery of Pamela Keith's murder.

Dad was eyeing Mother with acumen. "Letty will never be as beautiful as you, my dear," he repeated earnestly. "Never."

Which is the truth at that, and on that loving last line, out they went, Mother's little prehensile train swishing proudly around her ankles.

I tossed the book of poems aside and began a lengthy one on the Gestapo that stood my hair on end. When I finally turned out the lights and fell asleep, my dreams were troubled with goose-stepping gocns who were busily trailing me everywhere. I was patriotically eating some secret papers that would save the world from Hitler when I awoke abruptly and lay there looking at a finger of silvery moonlight which was pointing diagonally across my bed. I was in that delicious stage of not being quite awake, nor yet asleep.

Then a tiny sound jerked me into rigid wakefulness. It came again. A floor-board creaking? A door being opened- I dared not move, or turn my head.

My eyes walled around in fright, probing the shadows of the room, trying to distinguish things thru darkness which was as thick as a velvet curtain.

I KNEW I WASN'T ALONE!

I knew that somewhere in those shadows was—someone. I strove to overcome my fear. I tried to raise my arm and reach for the little turn-button on the milk-glass lamp on my night table. But overcoming such fear is like trying to grasp a ghost by the throat. I lay there, perfectly still, perfectly rigid, except for nerves that jerked the length of one leg, nerves that tightened in my throat and long, cold fingers of nerves that clutched at my heart, squeezing it painfully.

My nightgown grew wet with perspiration: cold and soggy, making the fragile blue silk cling to me clammily. I lay rigid, eyes closed to slits, hoping the murderer—and I knew it was the murderer—would make some false move so I could leap screaming from the room!

Even in my panic a tough core of determination and instincts of self-preservation deep in my brain had figured out my route of escape: If he—or she—approached me from the right, I'd leap for the bath, slam and lock the door, and then howl bloody murder from the bathroom window. If I were approached from the left, I'd race for the hall, bat out of the door there and make for the lobby, nightie or no nightie!

And thus I waited, watching the shadows, swallowing with such effort I was afraid it sounded like a dud bomb falling. Suddenly I saw the shadows on my right move, just a fraction. . just a slight change in that dark pattern of velvety darkness. I heard the muffled sound of a board creak beneath the heavy pile of the rug. Then silence once more. A deathly, horrible, hideous silence.

My potential murderer was cautious. Already he or she—or a combination of he and she together—meant to avoid detection.

I wanted desperately to know what time it was, and if Mother and Father had returned home.

The shadowy pattern changed again, and for the first time I saw a shadow move within the shadows. It moved so swiftly, so gracefully, so stealthily, that I was almost certain it was a woman.

It couldn't be Earle Pines with his lumbering gait, nor Reginald with his heavy feet. . . .Other names went through my head: Wayne Courtney. Victor Corliss, Luke Cramer, Marvin Eustace, even Peter Gibson. . .Countess Fanella Castigena? Surely it couldn't be the waddling Fanella. Not stealthy like this. . . . Gladys Newcomb? Elsie Eustace? Sandra? Charlotte Cunningham? Which one? Which one?

The shadow slithered to my right, and I dared not turn my head to follow it. I knew I was going to scream and nothing could keep me from it—and screams might meant my insant death! I felt hysteria leaping in sudden bounds to my throat. There was no stemming it. . .

My mouth opened and with a horrible fascination I listened for those blood-curdling shrieks, that deluge of panic. . . .But not a sound passed through my lips—and I knew why: I was paralyzed with fear. It was like some horrible nightmare, wanting to scream for help and completely unable to. . . . I can't remember clearly just what happened next. One minute I was lying there, cold, rigid, wet with perspiration; then I was struggling to rise and run for my life. I remember I leapt out of bed. . . But the shadow was swifter than I.

Just before I reached the door that leads to the corridor, I heard a key scraping in its lock which meant that Mother and Dad were returning from Kate Lote's.

Then the weight of the world came down on my head. I didn't even hear the swish it made as it struck me.

I don't know how long I lay in that pitch black bedroom, but the sky was pale with dawn when I came to, and there was a little pool of clotted blood on the Chinese oriental rug wher I had fallen. And I had the granddaddy of all headaches. Moving my tongue hurt, and my lips were feverish dry. I knew that if I tried to get up something hideous would happen; so better lie quiet.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma came home late for supper and she ate it wearing her Gils uniform, Gils standing for Give Lifts to Servicemen, on account of just having been at a meeting of the Gils at Mrs. Hews's house, and pop said, How was the meeting, my dear, did you have time for a bridge game?

Well, a very short one, ma said. A very important point came up in the general discussion, and we had to argue it out very seriously, she said, and pop said, Is it a military secret, or may I hear?

Blantche Hipple brought it up, ma said. Blantche pointed out that according to all the signs and simbols our boys will all be out of uniform before very long now, and the thought had occured to her that our well meant efforts may be making things harder for them when they get back into unodorned civilian clothes in the hard school of life's knocks. In other words if they get into the habit of thinking that a free care ride is going to be served up to them on a silver platter every time they wave a languid thumb, they're in for a rude awakening when normal times return from just around the corner any day now, ma said, and pop said, What are you going to do about it, hand out a warning with every lift?

We finely hit on a practical solution, ma said. At first we thought of only picking up every 3rd serviceman who signals for a lift, and disregarding the others, but that seemed a little too drastic, so what we're going to do is pass them by with a shake of our head and then stop in the middle of the block and wave for them to come on, so in that way they'll get used to dissappointments and still get their customary lifts. Dont you think that's clever, William? she said.

Pop claiming he thought it was collossal.

German Doctor, Born in Canada, Says War Can Last Only Two Months

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in France, Sept. 8 —(CP)— Henry Meffert is a doctor in the German 7th Army. He is a tall, thin, bespectacled officer and 30 years ago he was born on a farm near Calgary.

When he was eight he went to Germany with his German parents. He became a doctor one year ago and was pressed into the German Army Medical Corps. He was captured by a group of Canadian soldiers from his native area.

Meffert has been through the terrible retreat of the 7th Army which now no longer exists as an army. He was with a field ambulance in the Caen sector and handled hundreds of casualties among the thousands the Germans suffered there.

He was at Falaise and fell back steadily with the German forces escaping to the Seine where he was taken prisoner. He has seen the German army meet disaster at Allied hands and speaking careful English he said "The war can only last two more months at the most."

"We stand on one line after another and are beaten each time," he said. "Our soldiers are asking questions now—serious questions. They are realizing that they cannot make any more stands worthwhile unless they have a new weapon, a new arm.

"There are V1 and V2 but they don't see them; they only hear about them. They need something they can see.

"They are hoping there is some truth in the story they are being told of a new German bomb—a liquid air bomb which will paralyze the enemy with cold when it is dropped among them.

"I do not know. I am just a doctor of one year in the army. But I have seen Germans suffer more than most. It is a terrible war."

BOAC Completes 1,000th Flight To Great Britain

Montreal, Sept. 8. (CP) —British Overseas Airways Corporation today announced the completion of the 1,000th flight between Montreal and Britain on its North Atlantic return ferry service following the arrival at Prestwick, Scotland of Liberator AL-597. The plane was piloted by Capt. William S. May, of Winnipeg, on the flight.

British Overseas Airways has operated this service from Montreal airport at nearby Dorval for exactly three years—the period in which the 1,000 crossings have been made. This represents a total flying distance of 3,500,000 miles.

The North Atlantic Service of B.O.A.C. is operated on behalf of the R.A.F. transport command and its chief functions are to carry government - sponsored passengers, diplomatic, troop and general mail and urgent war freight from North America to the United Kingdom. Its aircraft return to Canada with mail, cargo and, as principal passengers, the air crews of the R.A.F. transport command who have delivered Canadian and American-built bombers to the European war theatre.

On the 1,000 flights between Canada and Britain the return ferry service has carried 11,478 passengers, 596 tons of war freight and 372 tons of mail.

Regular Shuttle Service.

It is the only regular shuttle service—with at least one aircraft a day each way—which traverses the difficult North Atlantic route in the winter months.

Capt. May who piloted the craft has a varied career including barnstorming, instructing, managing Northwest Airways and piloting Imperial Airways aircraft between Britain and Singapore in the last 16 years. He now is one of the key men in B.O.A.C. and joined the North Atlantic Service more than two years ago.

British Overseas Airways were asked by the Secretary of State for Air to operate the North Atlantic Return Ferry Service in September 1941, at the beginning of the winter season when violent storms and ice reign from sea level up to 25,000 feet. The first planes were not designed for the task but the service had to be regular at all costs or otherwise a congestion of bomber crews would develop in Britain.

With the 1,000th Trans-Atlantic flight behind, B.O.A.C. is ready for its fourth winter of regular routine operation and has overcome the storm and ice problem in the North Atlantic.

IT'S WHAT YOU DON'T SEE THAT COUNTS!

This is a Goodyear Synthetic Rubber Tire!

Goodyear dealers have it . . . for eligible drivers only. It is the result of Goodyear's forty years' experience in tire-building plus Goodyear's specialized knowledge of synthetic rubber . . . gained through unceasing research and testing.

It's the knowledge, skill and experience which go into the building that make a tire great

● All tires, except for tread, look alike. But wise buyers never judge value on superficial appearance alone. They want mileage . . . performance . . . safety. That's why Goodyear is the popular choice in tires.

Goodyear believes, and rightly so, that it isn't so much the materials used, but how those materials are used, that make a tire great.

For example: all tires contain rubber, cotton, steel and other essential ingredients. But Goodyear tires contain the most important ingredients of all . . . the experience, engineering skill, craftsmanship, and research that for more than 28 years have made Goodyears the first choice of tire-wise motorists.

Into and under the tread of every Goodyear tire go the factors that provide the wide margin of superiority in Goodyears . . . the factors that make Goodyears first in mileage . . . first in trouble-free performance . . . first in safety.

Let the experience of the majority be your guide. If you are eligible for new tires use your permit wisely . . . for value-proved Goodyears.

TYPICAL PRODUCTS OF GOODYEAR RESEARCH

Rubberized Life Rafts, developed by Goodyear, save the lives of aircrews when planes are forced down at sea. These rafts inflate in seconds with chemical gas released by a rip cord.

Bullet-puncture-sealing fuel tanks for warplanes are another product of Goodyear research. When a bullet pierces the tank the puncture is automatically sealed, to eliminate the hazard of fire and loss of fuel.

AN EXTRA 2 PLY RESERVE TIRE INSIDE THE TUBE

LifeGuards, another Goodyear exclusive development, replace ordinary inner tubes, provide positive blow-out protection. If a blow-out occurs, the LifeGuard carries the load, allows the driver to steer to a safe, sure stop.

Dektred is a new Goodyear "war paint" that provides a flame-proof, non-skid, weather-resistant floor and deck covering for ships, trucks and aeroplanes. It has many potential civilian uses where safe footing is required.

ALLIES CLOSE IN FOR BATTLE OF GERMANY

Siegfried Line Within Artillery Range of Armies

British Hold 5-Mile Deep Bridgehead on Albert Canal

By JAMES M. LONG
(AP War Correspondent)

London, Sept. 9 — (AP) — Four Allied armies — the British 2nd and American 1st, 3rd and 7th — closed in for the Battle of Germany today and drove to within heavy artillery range of the Siegfried Line in the key sector around the German border city of Aachen, while to the west the 1st Canadian Army continued to mop up the isolated rocket-bomb coast of France and Belgium.

The British 2nd Army in the north held its five-mile deep bridgehead over the Albert Canal against increasing fierce resistance as the Germans battled to stem this flanking sweep toward the northern anchor of the Siegfried Line at Cleve, a German border town 65 miles southeast of Amsterdam.

(The BBC in a broadcast heard by NBC said that the British had forced another crossing of the Albert Canal 25 miles east of Antwerp and west of the original crossing in the face of increasing enemy resistance.

Army Positions

These were the positions of the American armies:

The 1st Army in Belgium drove beyond the captured fortress city of Liege to less than 18 miles from the German frontier in the vicinity of Aachen.

The 3rd Army had crossed the Moselle River in five places around Metz and Nancy in eastern France, and had crushed a large-scale German counter-attack.

The 7th Army which came up from the Mediterranean was driving the last 25 miles to the Belfort Gap north of Switzerland.

To the West British, Canadians and Poles of the 1st Canadian Army closed in on the last of the Nazi-held coast. They seized the Belgian ports of Oostende (Ostende) and Nieuport without a fight and hemmed the Germans into crammed pockets around the other coastal ports of Boulogne, Calais, Dunkerque and Zeebrugge near the Holland Line.

The Germans still are firing their coastal guns from Boulogne although Canadian forces have isolated the port. The guns fired spasmodically this morning, apparently at Allied shipping but the shells fell into the sea.

Planes Supply Armies.

The gasoline-thirsty United States 3rd Army to the south was supplied by a sky-train of C-47 transport planes which landed on forward air-strips. It was a lack of supplies which first slowed up the 3rd Army.

Allied Supreme Headquarters masked the exact positions of the forward elements of the four Allied armies, concealing from the Germans which columns were engaged in feints and which would deliver the smashing blow designed to breach the Nazi line and fan out into the interior of Hitler's final fortress, Germany.

The Germans were rushing reinforcements into the Siegfried line but new American Black Widow aircraft ranged into Germany at night smashing convoys.

Ostend Badly Damaged

Both Ostend and Nieuport were found badly demolished. The Canadians reached the French city of Bergues, five miles inland from Dunkerque, and the Poles pushed to the Ostend-Gent road, six or 7 miles south of the Belgian town of Bruge. There were unconfirmed reports that leading Canadian infantry patrols were in Bruge, 10 miles west of the Dutch border and 12 miles south of Zeebrugge.

The mop-up of the coastal area was slowed somewhat by extensive German defensive flooding of lowlands between Boulogne and Dunkerque.

In one of the last front line dispatches before the security silence went into effect Associated Press war correspondent Edward D. Ball said the Americans had won two new Moselle river crossings south of Metz where they already had one and made a second crossing in the Nancy area near Toul.

More than 100 miles to the north of this bulge the U. S. 1st Army pushed three miles southeast to Romsee after taking Liege.

Between Liege and Metz other 1st Army troops were pushing steadily through the Ardennes forest on a broad front toward Luxembourg to complete the close in on the German border.

These troops captured little villages by the dozen and reached Neuville En Condroz, 10 miles east of Huy; Maissin, 22 miles east of the Meuse river, and Haut Fays, 12 miles east of Givet.

East of Sedan the Americans reached St. Cecile in a 12-mile advance. These advances put the Americans 10 to 22 miles east of the Meuse.

Brest, Le Havre Still Holding Out.

British and American planes kept up the aerial battering of the German garrisons besieged in the ports of Brest and Le Havre. A pilot returning from Brest on the tip of the Breton peninsula said the whole town seemed ablaze from artillery and bombing.

After breaking across the Albert canal in Belgium the British 2nd. army was about 25 miles from the boundary of Germany. Along with the U.S. 1st army it was pointed toward Dusseldorf and Cologne.

Advancing through Besancon, U.S. 7th army units headed for the Belfort Gap. An Associated Press dispatch from the Swiss frontier placed them within 10 miles of the city of Belfort, guarding the gap, that leads into the Rhineland 30 miles farther on. This dispatch said Belfort was under artillery fire.

Thus, for the German command the biggest problem was to figure out a disposition of forces to meet Gen. Eisenhower's armies, which could strike anywhere along a front of more than 200 miles.

A guess that the main Allied effort would come along the northern end of the line was made by Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Nazi military observer. He declared in a Berlin broadcast that the whole weight of the battle in the west was aimed "undoubtedly at a break-through into the Aachen Basin."

Dr. Max Krull, a commentator for the official German news agency D.N.., conceded that German troops must retreat still farther before stabilizing a line.

One British column sped 20 miles east of Leuven (Louvain) to St. Trond, 20 miles northwest of fallen Liege. These British troops were only 10 miles from a junction with an American column which pounded up 10 miles north of Huy to the town of Faimes.

REQUEST GRANTED

Brockville, Sept. 9 (CP).—An elderly gentleman, dressed very neatly, arrived at the local magistrate's office with a request for a new liquor ration book. He had had no beer since June, when he had misplaced his old book. The request was granted without question. The applicant was 94 years of age.

THROUGH IT ALL BEFORE

Philadelphia, Sept. 9 (AP)—Peter William Holly, 18, went through the army induction centre here with a bored air. He'd been through it all before, nearly two years ago, when he registered at the age of 16, falsely stating his age, saw action with an anti-aircraft unit in some of the hardest fighting of the North African campaign before his true age was discovered in October, 1943

CANADIANS CLOSE IN ON BRUGES IN NETHERLANDS

LeHavre, Boulogne, Calaise, Dunkerque All Invested By Canadian Troops

ROADS DRYING UP

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in France and Belgium, Sept. 9—(CP Cable)—Canadian tanks and infantry today are closing in on Bruges, and unconfirmed reports said leading patrols had advanced into this town, 10 miles west of the Netherlands border and 12 miles south of Zeebrugge on the coast.

On the right flank of this advance, going forward under clear blue skies, Polish armor and infantry are in the Thielt area. The channel ports of Le Havre, Boulogne, Calais and Dunkerque are all invested by 1st Canadian Army troops. There is no important change in these sectors.

Roads Drying Up

While the roads and fields are drying after two rainy days, the areas along the coastal strip from Dunkerque to Bruges and into the Netherlands are low-lying, and with some of them flooded by the retreating Germans movement is restricted.

There is a maze of canals, dykes and controlled waterways in the Bruges district.

At Boulogne, Calais and Dunkerque the Canadians are improving their positions by endeavoring to isolate various defended gun positions.

Practically the entire French-Belgian rocket coast now has been overrun by Canadian, British and Polish troops of the Canadian army. It is estimated about 300 flying-bomb sites have been discovered in this advance, and probably more are hidden away in isolated woods which have not yet been investigated. None however can be used.

They are all "V-1" sites and there is no evidence yet of any "V-2" sites in this neighborhood.

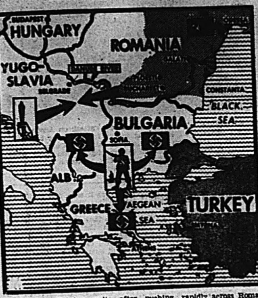
Occupy Ostend

The 18th Armored Car Regiment (12 Manitoba Dragoons) of Winnipeg occupied Ostend yesterday.

They were on dyke roads south and west of the port preparing to enter, when Maquis scouts told them the port could be taken over with a show of military strength. Some Germans remained in the town but they were only demolition parties. The Manitoba Dragoons raced into the port as the last Germans left.

This regiment was the first Canadian unit across the Seine in the advance from Falaise and the Trun Gap, and it has been carrying out a long-range reconnaissance from the Seine to the Somme and through the Pas de Calais to Belgium and Ostend.

REDS RUSH TO TRAP NAZIS



Hard-driving Russian units after pushing rapidly across Romania and crossing the Yugoslav border, are reported to be about to form a junction with Marshal Tito's patriots. This joining of forces would accomplish two important military aims at one stroke. It would quickly end the difficult isolation of the Yugoslav fighters and trap an estimated 25 Nazi divisions — 250,000 to 375,000 men — struggling to withdraw from the Aegean islands, the Greek mainland, Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia. Springing of the trap, military analysts predict, would bring a quick end to Nazi rule in the Balkans.

ITALIAN LINER REX SET AFIRE BY BEAUFIGHTERS

Believed Germans Were Preparing to Sink Ship in Trieste Harbor Entrance

51,000-TON VESSEL

Rome, Sept. 9 (AP)—The 51,000 ton liner Rex, onetime queen of the Italian merchant fleet and an Atlantic record holder, lay burning in the northern Adriatic Sea off Trieste today, after a blistering attack by rocket-firing Beaufighters.

More than 120 rockets hit the big liner, some below the waterline, and reconnaissance disclosed she was lying motionless with a 60-degree list to port.

An air force report said German naval experts were believed preparing to sink the Rex to block Trieste harbor.

Two days ago an R.A.F. plane crew saw the big ship being towed south of Trieste. She was listing slightly.

Yesterday, while she was at anchor, Beaufighters attacked just before noon, sending 59 rockets crashing into the target.

Later in the day more Beaufighters from the Balkan air force added the finishing touches with 64 rocket hits.

Fliers reported after the last attack that a 500-foot column of smoke rose from one end of the vessel, that two-thirds of her decks were submerged and flames were gushing from her entire length.

In August, 1933, the Rex crossed the Atlantic from Gibraltar to Ambrose Light, in New York harbor, a distance of 3,181 miles, in four days, 13 hours and 58 minutes.

SAVAGE BATTLE RAGES FOR RIMINI GATEWAY TO PO

Heavy Casualties Being Suffered by Both Germans and 8th Army

KESSELRING GAMBLES

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, Sept. 9. (AP)—A savage battle is raging for Rimini and the gateway to the Po Valley without substantial changes in positions and heavy casualties are being suffered by both the Germans and the British 8th Army, Gen. Alexander's headquarters announced today.

Gambling desperately to prevent a break-through that would enable the Allies to sweep into Northern Italy and envelop the whole Gothic line, Field Marshal Kesselring threw his infantry and armored forces into a series of counter-attacks yesterday. They extended along the Adriatic sector of the front from the coast to the village of Croce, 6 1-2 miles inland and nine miles southwest of Rimini.

These counter-thrusts were beaten off without loss of ground by the 8th Army and British troops seized and held Croce, which was the scene of prolonged day and night see-saw fighting.

Violent rain and thunderstorms hampered Allied attempts to press the attack, but the tempo of the fighting was not reduced.

Patriots Maintain Contact.

Along the coast, where Canadian troops fought to the banks of the Marano river, within four miles of Rimini's outskirts two days ago, the Allied command reported only that patrols were maintaining contact with the enemy. A heavy curtain of mortar and artillery fire was being laid down in the path of the Canadians' advance.

Palazo and the neighboring Hill 151, six miles inland, was seized by British forces who beat off determined tank counter-attacks.

The village of Menghio, 1,000 yards west of Croce, and the same distance south of Hill 151, was also retained by the British in the face of desperate Nazi lunges to regain lost ground. Two miles farther inland the battle raged in the town of Gemmano for the third day with unabated fury. The Germans still hold the western half of the town.

3,000-Foot Mount Taken.

Pushing against rear-guard shielding the Nazi withdrawal into Gothic line positions in the northern Apennines, Allied troops seized the 3,000-foot Mount Morello, eight miles north of Florence.

Americans of the 5th Army sent patrols north to within slightly more than a mile of Pistoia before they were halted by enemy fire.

Other American units penetrated the eastern outskirts of Montecatini Terme, 7 1-2 miles west southwest of Pistoia. On the west coastal sector American patrols crossed the Serchio river seven miles north of the mouth of the Arno.

Canadian Army Casualties 32,239 From Start of War Till July 31st

Ottawa, Sept. 9 —(CP)— Defence Headquarters announced Friday night that the Canadian army suffered 33,239 casualties from the start of the war up to July 31, an increase of 3,768 over the previously announced total of 29,714 which included casualties for all theatres up to June 30 and for the Normandy campaign up to July 20.

The announcement said the July 31 total was made up of 9,501 killed in action, 287 presumed dead, 1,308 missing, 3,800 prisoners of war and interned and 18,343 wounded.

The previous total, announced Aug. 21, was made up of 7,965 killed in action, 222 presumed dead, 1,726 missing, 3,731 prisoners of war interned and 15,827 wounded.

A comparison of the figures revealed that the latest statistics showed an increase over the previous ones of 1,601 in the number killed in action and presumed dead, a decrease of 418 in the number of missing, an increase of 69 in the number of prisoners of war and interned and an increase of 2,516 in the number of wounded.

Headquarters explained the figure of 3,800 prisoners and internees included 108 who had been repatriated or escaped. The decrease in the number of missing came about as result of soldiers being reclassified under other categories.

The new army figures brought the announced total of casualties for the three services to 50,162, with the air force having a total of 15,209 at June 30 and the navy 1,714 at June 26. Later figures for the air force and navy were not available.

The navy casualties did not include 78 prisoners taken after the destroyer Athabaskan was sunk last April near the French coast.

With issuance of the latest army figures, the breakdown of casualties for the three armed forces was as follows:

	R.C.N.	Army	R.C.A.F.	Total
Dead—presumed dead	1,159	9,788	9,475	20,422
Missing ..	335	1,308	3,250	4,893

RUSSIA BALKS ON VOTE PROCEDURE AT CONFERENCE

Will Not Agree To Bar a Nation In Voting on Questions Involving Itself

AGGRAVATED BY DISPUTE

By FLORA LEWIS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Russian delegation to the Dumbarton Oaks Conference still is withholding agreement with Great Britain and the United States on whether a nation should be allowed to vote in the world security organization on disputes involving itself.

This problem, which was disclosed today, may not be settled before the end of the deliberations among Russia, Britain and the United States on plans for an international agency to keep peace, and may have to be worked out by Messrs. Stalin, Roosevelt and Churchill themselves.

It is one point, it was understood, on which the Russians have firmly refused a compromise agreement.

The issue is deeply significant, because officials feel it is the one way of enabling the world organization to function in case one of the big four nations is an aggressor.

The agreed voting procedure on the council of the proposed agency is that the decision to use force against an aggressor must be made by at least a majority of the council, specifically including all the permanent "big power" members.

Thus, under the general voting procedure, any of five countries — Britain, The United States, Russia, China, and, eventually, France — could veto international action against itself.

However, there is an added provision barring participation of a nation in a vote on questions involving itself. This is not agreeable to Russia, and the main reason for Russia's hesitation is believed to be the Russo- Polish dispute, aggravated by the present Warsaw situation.

The Russians have shown considerable determination to settle their quarrel with the Poles without outside interference, rejecting an offer of good offices from the United States.

Allied Junction With Reds Would Trap 250,000 Nazis

Russians Only 128 Miles From Hungarian Frontier

By DANIEL DeLUCE
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Sept. 9 — (AP)—A Red Army offensive through Bulgaria, coupled with the combined operations of Marshal Tito's Partisans and Allied Commando units in Yugoslavia, appeared likely today to free the Balkan peninsula entirely of Germans in less than a week.

At the same time a Russian armored force driving from the strategic heart of Transylvania pushed within 128 miles of the flat open frontier of Hungary.

Bulgaria's declaration of war on Germany persuaded the Soviet Union to accept Sofia's request for an armistice, and Russian veterans who moved into Bulgaria from Romania on a 135-mile front greeted the Bulgars as brothers in arms.

Active Role for Bulgaria

Front dispatches said no hostilities jarred the Russian advance across Bulgaria, which followed the capture of two big ports, Ruschuk (Ruse) on the Danube and Varna on the Black Sea. Presumably the Bulgarian army, now a co-belligerent, will be assigned an active role in the Balkan clean-up.

The Kremlin through the press and radio, continued to call on the Hungarian people to follow Bulgaria in abandoning the doomed Germans and save their independence.

Bulgaria's outright participation in the war turned approximately one-third of the total area of the Balkans into Allied territory.

It transformed the German withdrawals from southern Yugoslavia, Albania, Greece and the Aegean islands into desperate action which might end in final disaster at any moment.

Small blockade runners slipping up the Adriatic Sea under the cover of darkness were the only hope of escape for Germans on the western side of the peninsula. On the east the Athens-Salonika-Nis-Belgrade railway was under severe air attack and was being raided ceaselessly by Yugoslav and Greek Partisans.

Block Escape Routes

(At the same time a Rome dispatch said Allied Commando units were striking into Yugoslavia from the Adriatic coast toward a junction with the Russians in an effort to close a trap on the 250,000 Germans stalled in the Balkans because bombing and sabotage wrecked all main rail escape routes.)

The Bulgarian divisions could cut the trans-Balkan railway in the vicinity of Nis within a matter of hours.

The possibility was seen that the German high command might leave some troops on Crete and scattered among the Aegean islands in order to delay the possible linking of Allied sea power between the Mediterranean and Black Sea as long as possible.

Turkey was given sharp notice by Russia during the last few days that she is expected to co-operate wholeheartedly with the latest developments. Russian troops rolling through Bulgaria apparently were headed for the Turkish border.

In the course of the entire Soviet offensive begun June 23 the Russians have taken 41 German generals, the Soviet communique said.

RUHR, RHINELAND TARGETS POUNDED BY 1,250 PLANES

Mainz, Mannheim and Dusseldorf Hit in Daylight Sweeps

NUREMBERG HIT

London, Sept. 9. (CP)—More than 1,000 American heavy bombers, escorted by more than 250 fighters, smashed today at industrial and rail targets in the Ruhr and Rhineland ahead of the advancing Allied armies.

The big bombers, striking targets in Germany for the second successive day in support of the mounting ground offensive, hit Mainz, Mannheim and Dusseldorf.

During the night R.A.F. Mosquitos smacked at Nurnberg again, rounding out a heavy day which saw Brest pounded twice and the Le Havre and Boulogne garrisons again battered by the big bombers.

Heavy bomber attacks were carried out yesterday against oil plants at Ludwigshafen, rail yards at Karlsruhe, and depots and factories on the outskirts of Mainz.

A constant patrol was kept last night over shipping around the Netherlands Islands although pilots reported seeing no concentrations which might suggest evacuation attempts.

Mosquitos set bridges afire in the Flushing area of the southern Netherlands where the Germans are trying to escape from Belgium by crossing the Schelde, and also in the Rotterdam vicinity.

Canada Expected To Maintain Larger Permanent Forces After the War

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Sept. 9 (CP)—While it is assumed Canada will maintain larger permanent armed forces after the war than the bare skeleton forces of pre-war years no definite decisions have been taken on their size.

Within the three fighting services, however, young men thinking in terms of a post-war career are wondering what the prospects are of continuing in uniform and official planners are pondering the various factors which will determine the size of the services.

The only authorized post-war establishment is 9,000 men for the navy. This, however, is an arbitrary figure which may not stand and Navy Minister Macdonald has indicated he would like to see a post-war navy of 15,000 men.

If the post-war army and air force bore the same relation to the pre-war establishments as Mr. Macdonald's 15,000 figure bears to the navy's pre-war 1,700 there would be an army of 40,000 and an air force of about 40,000 compared with 4,500 permanent force soldiers and 4,000 men in the permanent air force.

The navy's 9,000 complement was authorized by the cabinet a couple of years ago, when the sea-going force was planning a building program and asked direction as to what buildings should be permanent and what temporary.

Uncertain factors, which will influence the size of the post-war forces are the nature of the peace and arrangements made for maintaining it through international agreement, the attitude of the people and of future parliaments towards the spending of money, taxation and preparedness.

Certain factors are the vastly increased complexity of weapons and methods of warfare, Canada's increased vulnerability of attack by reason of developments in aviation, and Canada's all-round increased interest in world affairs as the most powerful of the smaller nations and a potential great power.

Both the pre-war army and navy were more in the nature of establistment to the training of reservists than actual fighting forces. The small permanent army was barely sufficient to provide staffs for National Defence Headquarters in Ottawa, the Royal Military College at Kingsston, the various military district headquarters and instructors for the non-permanent active militia now called the Reserve army.

Within it there were enough specialists to keep fairly well abreast of developments in methods of warfare and weapons. The number of specialists required after the war will be much greater, however, because of developments during the present conflict.

The same is true of the navy and the air force.

His thanks was sent to the National Billiards for the kindness in sending smokes. Jimmie Annis and George Paulos, the proprietors, have been sending smokes to the boys ever since the war started. Mr. and Mrs. Reid have two other boys, Roy and Ray, also serving in Italy.

There is no shortage of teachers in the public schools of the city nor in the Belleville Collegiate Institute, Board of Education officials stated today.

Fully qualified teachers are on duty in all of the institutions of learning, they added, and the roster of teaching personnel is complete.

Rural districts also are said to have their quota of teachers, and the county is in no way suffering from a shortage.

O.S.D. Will Open On September 20

The Ontario School for the Deaf will open its doors for the resumption of classes in its former surroundings on the Trent Rd., on Sept. 20, Superintendent W. J. Morrison stated today. Approximately 260 pupils will be in attendance for the fall and winter terms. While this number is large, it is not by any means a record of attendance for the school.

Workmen of the Department of Public Works, under the jurisdiction of Mr. William Pepper, are busy readying the buildings for the occupancy of the children. Work is expected to be near completion within the next two weeks.

Removal of teaching facilities from the city residences which housed O.S.D. pupils and staff during the tenure of No. 5 Initial Training School, R.C.A.F., in the original buildings is going on apace.

While a number of male members of the staff are on leave of absence and serving in the armed forces, adequate teachers will be available for the school opening.

Ladies Aux. to Canadian Legion B.E.S.L. Zone 13 Meets at Deseronto

The Annual Rally of Zone 13 of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion B.E.S.L., was held this year at Deseronto on Thursday afternoon, September 7th.

There were about 125 members present from Brockville, Kingston, Deseronto, Gananoque, Picton and Belleville branches.

The business meeting opened in the Legion club rooms by Pres. Mrs. Knight in the usual manner. She then welcomed the visitors after which the meeting was turned over to zone representative Mrs. V. M. Camken, who invited the presidents of the branches to the platform, namely Mrs. Coborne, Brockville; Mrs. Mooney, Gananoque; Mrs. Prescott, 1st vice of Kingston (taking Mrs. Bensted the president's place who lost her husband recently and so was unable to be present); Mrs. Knight, Deseronto; Mrs. Hedges of Picton. Miss LaRue Purvis of Deseronto was appointed secretary for the meeting.

Secretaries of the branches were then asked to come forward and give the annual report of their branches. Mrs. Jones of Picton; Mrs. Jeffs of Belleville; Miss LaRue Purvis of Deseronto; Mrs. McCullough of Kingston; Mrs. Mooney spoke for Gananoque as they have only just recently been organized they had not a report; Mrs. Warner, Brockville. All are to be congratulated on their splendid reports of the year's work they have done in their communities also with the much larger membership also receipts and disbursements were bigger this year. The presidents were then asked to say a few words after which Past President Mrs. Norley of the Provincial Command from Toronto was introduced by Mrs. Camken. She spoke to the members and congratulated the branches on their reports and telling of the vast amount of work being done by the Auxiliary all over Canada and that everyone will be amazed when the provincial annual report is given out at the convention at North Bay in October. She also stated the local Auxiliary did not publicize themselves enough and the work they are doing in their various communities. They were rather inclined to hide their light under a bushel as it were. She said the Toronto branches, especially now, were very busy meeting the convoys as they came in, also the service in the check room at the Union Station where all service personnel can check their baggage free of charge, the women work in shifts from early morning until after midnight.

She thanked the branches in this zone for the splendid work they were doing for she knew in small communities it was harder where there were so few to draw from for their activities. She wished Gananoque, who is the baby branch, every success in their work. She said she was pleased to be able to return to Deseronto, as she came down 8 years ago to organize the Auxiliary and was pleased to see the progress they had made.

Several motions were put forward and voted to be sent to the convention in October. The question box was then opened and all questions answered by Mrs. Norley very satisfactorily.

Mrs. Camken then gave her report on her year's work, thanking the branches for their kindness to her while in office, she was sorry to be leaving them, for she had made many friends in the district and would still take an interest in their work in the future, whoever her successor was to be, she knew she would carry on the good work receiving the same splendid co-operation from them, she hoped by the time the next rally was held the war would be over and all their loved ones would be home again, for those who had lost loved ones or had them wounded, she extended her sincerest sympathy, knowing God would bring them peace of mind and give them His blessing.

The election for zone representative was then held, those being nominated were Mrs. Coborne, Brockville; Mrs. Bradford, Belleville, and Mrs. Hedges, Picton. Mrs. Bradford thanked her nominators but declined to stand. Mrs. Hedges of Picton was chosen as the zone representative by ballot. Mrs. Coborne was the first to congratulate her on her election to that office and assured her of the support of herself and branch. Mrs. Hedges thanked the branches for their confidence in her and said she would fulfill her office as best she could.

The rally for 1945 is to be held in Brockville. The meeting then closed with the National Anthem.

A parade was then formed and the members paraded to the United Church parish hall where the ladies of the church served a sumptuous supper after which speeches were given by the three ministers present and also the high school principal who gave the Toast to the King.

The comrades then marched back to the Legion Hall where a social hour was spent before returning home, after spending a very profitable and inspiring time at the rally.

Peterboro Church Extends Call To Dr. Jas. Semple

Peterboro, Sept. 9. —Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church, in Belleville, Friday night received a unanimous call from the congregation of George Street United Church, Peterboro.

The vacancy was caused by the illness of Rev. H. R. Roberts, who three weeks ago submitted his resignation to the official board. Mr. Roberts has not been able to occupy his pulpit since early in the Spring.

George Street Church is the senior United Church in this city with a history of 110 years. It has a membership of over 1,200 and a seating capacity of the same. Dr. Semple is at present attending the General Council meeting of the United Church in London.

Smoking Impairs Keen Eyesight Needed by Fliers

St. Louis, Sept. 9—(AP)—Inhaling of the smoke of even one cigaret, the Aero medical association of the United States was told yesterday, impairs the keen eyesight needed at night by military fliers.

The sight loss is caused by carbon monoxide from the burning tip. This loss is nothing likely to be noticed in normal life, nor does it have any bad effects on health. But the impairment is important to night-fighting aviators working at the threshold of vision, the point where they can just barely discern enemies or objectives.

The report was made by doctors R.A. McFarland, M.P. Halperin and J. I. Niven of Harvard University.

Their investigation showed that inhaling three cigarets is equivalent to the loss of vision which comes at about 8,000 feet altitude. The loss of sight sensitivity at this height doesn't bother passengers. But it is important in war to avoid the slight change that military avite slight change that military aviators at night breathe pure oxygen from the ground up, the oxygen being a complete antidote.

GERMAN SHIP SUNK

Stockholm, Sept. 9 (AP). — The German transport ship Westfalen was reported to have hit a mine yesterday o Gothenburg, Sweden, sinking with the loss of more than 200 Germans and Norwegians. THROUGH THE DIAL SIGHT

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Services at Home and Abroad

By G. H. C.

A PARCEL FROM HOME

Oh, it isn't so much the chocolate bar
Or the package of chewing gum;
It isn't the smokes or the books of jokes
That cheers a man when he's glum;
It isn't a can of pork and beans
Though the taste is certainly grand:
Or the milk or jam, though they seem to a man.
A bit of Canada canned.

No, these are not the important things
In that parcel that comes from home;
That isn't the part that cheers the heart
Of a man when he's all alone,
When you come to camp where a parcel waits
From the folks far over the sea,
The feeling that stays through the endless days
Is "Someone remembers me."

Oh, a parcel from home just hits the spot
In a way you will never know
Till you've stood in a queue and you feel so blue
When the corporal says "No;
There's nothing today; I'm sorry Bud,"
And something within us dies
As we turn from our place with a saddened face
And the wind is hurting our eyes.

There's a lot of the boy left in the man,
So it isn't the gifts that you send
It isn't the cost of razor blades
Or the lighter or fountain pen;
It's just the thought that you're not forgot
In the time time that we've been away
Now I'll close and say "Do you suppose There's a parcel for me today?"

—Maple Leaf.

Open letter to Captain Ross Weese, 3rd Can. Armored Recce Regt., somewhere in the land of vino, soldati and signorinas.

"Thanks, skipper, for the nice compliment re the Dial Sight. It is as much fun pounding it out as it is for you to read it.

"Over here things are pretty much as usual. The bourgeouserie is enjoying a high state of morale which is still crescendoing as they read o fthe brilliant exploits you chaps are doing over there. Belleville is justly proud of you and hope it won't be long before you swing along the main stem with flags flying, people cheering and the well-earned results of victory within your grasp.

"We are glad to hear of Doug. Chant's award and that Victor Clapp is with your unit. You 'Three Musketeers' from Quinte are well able to take care of yourselves and don't let the Toronto lads get away with too much.

"Cheerio, soldier, and the best of luck."

Reserve Training.

With summer camp training well tucked away beneath their web equipment, Reserve Army units here are readying themselves for the fall and winter training. The Argyll Light Infantry rang up the curtain on Thursday night and the 34th Field Artillery will do likewise on Monday evening. New equipment has been added to that already here in both units and officers and training staffs are ready to take over the serious phases of winter training.

Battery personnel are ordered to attend their first parade at eight o'clock Monday and official advertisements have appeared in the press to this effect. Enlistments in active service units have taken a heavy toll of both reserve units here and specific efforts will be made to bring the units back to original strength.

Order of the Day To Canadian Girls

"Keep Your Fingers Crossed"

Dark-eyed signorinas, with raven tresses and "come-hither" smiles, not to mention those with blonde hair and accompanying accessories, are looming up as a potential threat to the Heart-Stealing from Canadians championship held by the British gals.

From the land of vino, sunshine, olive oil and flashing feminine smiles comes a story of the effect on Canadian hearts exercised by the aloe-eyed gals of Italy, who are free, and twenty-one, but still maintain the ideas about men, especially visiting Canucks in khaki, that have existed down through the centuries.

Receptions for Canadian troops became so "warm" that osculation was forbidden. Sergt. George Powell writes in the Maple Leaf:

"The huge banners—'Welcome to the Liberators'—still stretch across the broad streets, but unfortunately the local belles no longer throw their arms about each and every Allied soldier to plank a kiss on his liberating brow.

"However, there are other pastimes. There's a colossal collection of terrific temples, beautiful basilicas, portentious porticos, mammoth monuments and ancient arches. But the women!

The signorinas of the south don't hold a Roman candle to their sisters of the capital. There's no question about it—the girls of Rome are beautiful. Nor are they all these black-haired, dark-skinned beauties that are supposedly typical.

There are blondes, natural or not so natural, and redheads that are fugitives from Hollywood. Their clothes are smart, they look clean and neat, they are not stand-offish when addressed politely and they don't come running at a whistle. And they wear shoes. They're a sight for war-sore eyes.

"First glimpse will convince you that Rome wasn't built in a day, but Nero once had it burned down in nine so that he could put his personal reconstruction program into operation. Nevertheless, like London, the Italian capital is a confused conglomeration of roads and buildings without regular plan or shape. But what roads—and what buildings! But the women!

"The city has countless broad, tree-lined thoroughfares that are a treat to tread. They are flanked by buildings modern and ancient, representative of B.C., A.D. and the Anni Fascisti. To the soldier's eye, total absence of bomb damage will lend a pre-war appearance to everything. The National Gallery of Modern Art is wonderful; the Colosseum is magnificent; the Vittorio Emanuel II Monument is superb. But the women!

The locals still study shoulder patches and insignia, exchanging opinions with friends on rank and nationality of passing Allied servicemen. The name "Canadaw" brings an enlightened look into most eyes; there is Canadesi College, an ecclesiastical institution, on one of Rome's main streets. There are many horse-drawn vehicles, both public and private, the animals spirited and better groomed and fed than their scrawny brethern further south. The majority of Romans can speak either French or English.

"Vatican City is a sightseer's natural. The much-used and abused adjective, "awe-inspiring," is applicable in the case of the sight of St. Peter's with the imposing Piazza of the same name and its flanking Bernini colonnade directly in front. But the women!

"A trooper of the Canadian Armored Corps paused in his inspection of the stone figures dominating the cathedral. 'Yep, there's no two ways about it. Rome is sure worth seein'. And the women....'

"There seemed to be a concensus of opinion on everything.

"A 'must-see' is the immense park in the heart of the city—la Villa Umberta I whatever that means. Kids playing, green grass, ponds, trees, adults gazing unconcernedly on as adolescent boys swim a la nude. Peace, it's wonderful. But the women!

Medic Finds Some Use for Diaries

The discovery by a Mayo Foundation pathological anatomist at the University of Minnesota that the keeping of a diary may have some practical use after all, is not exactly the sort of thing that is likely to turn the world upside down while it is busy watching France, but it may bear some reflection anyway, says a New York Times columnist.

Dr. H. E. Robertson wants people to keep diaries and to note their stomachaches, their bad colds and any other symptoms that occur. "Every individual who consults a doctor," he says, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Minneapolis, "presents blank spaces in his health history which, if they could be filled in, would be of inestimable value in the diagnosis as well as treatment of the illness at hand." Many an obscure illness, or even sudden death, might be avoided if Big Brother, Sis, Dad and Mother had kept a diary. Dr. Robertson's remarks are even interpreted to mean that one may keep a diary and live longer.

It must be seen at once, by anyone with even slight imagination, that this suggestion opens up a prospect with wide ramifications.

The diary can be of no value, of course, unless it is read, and it will be no good unless it is the doctor who reads it. Where, then, will our privacy be? It can be argued with considerable logic that our doctors already know too much about us for our own good, and maybe for theirs. If they come to know all, by way of the memory book, half the population will have to avert their eyes when they see the doctor approaching on the sidewalk.

Recording Some Ills.

As a matter of fact, the doctors really have a meagre idea of how bad most of us are feeling a share of the time. The average man who set about the depressing project of noting down all his ailments from dawn to midnight would come out with something like this:

"Dear Diary: I sure got up feeling lousy this morning. I was coughing pretty bad, and it wasn't until about the third cigarette that I could get it stopped. I wonder what the dull pain is in the middle of my back when I first get out of bed? As soon as I could pry my left eye open I noticed that the right one seemed somewhat off color, so I mixed some boracic acid and tried the eye-cup, but it didn't seem to help much. It was about noon, I guess, before I seemed to get the right focus. These drugs you get nowadays don't seem to be up to pre-war strength.

"My wife says to me, 'What makes your hand shake so when you're drinking your orange juice, Henry?' I told her she must be seeing things; it couldn't have been shaking, because I was steadying it with my other hand. Otherwise how would I get it to my mouth?

"I must ask the doctor some time what that murmur is that I hear when I'm rounding the bend on that last block, walking to the station. You don't suppose that's my heart that loud, do you diary?

"I don't seem to have much appetite at lunch any more, somehow. And about 3:30 I get the funniest all-tired-out feeling, fluttery-like, with a kind of heavy ache in the region of the stomach. Maybe I ought to call up the doctor and ask him if I need a little tonic."

Depressing the Patient.

It must be highly questionable for anyone, old or young, to be setting down symptoms and ruminations of this character every night before he goes to bed, but if the doctor wants it, he's the doctor and he'll get it.

Of course, there will be a goodly amount of un-medical history mixed in, because no keeper of a dairy could maintain the cheerful outlook requisite for health if he restricted himself to aches and pains. Dr. Robertson apparently feels that it is all right for the girls to set down such a record as "met the boy friend" and "went canoeing with a swell G.I." These doubtless go under the classification of minor heart palpitations and have their medical aspect, if one takes the long view of things.

One can foresee, under the diary system, a complete change in the present method of diagnosing disease. In the early stages it will not even be desirable for the ailing patient to appear at the doctor's office. He will merely call up on the phone and say, "Doctor, be on the lookout for a gray truck. I'm sending my diaries along. Let me know when you've had a chance to skim through them, and I'll drop in."

The chances are good that many a patient won't even have to go to the office to have his tongue looked at. The doctor will merely return the books with a note saying (as he always does anyway): "You've reached the age where you'll have to take things a little easier; you're not so young as you once were, you know, and you'd better cut down to two cocktails before dinner and two packs a day."

The more we think about Dr. Robertson's idea, the better we like it.

NO AID TO ROMANCE

Clones, Eire. (CP)—Boys and girls who would a-wooing go in the local movie house will have to find some other place. Boys are required to sit on one side of the theatre and the girls on the other. Married pairs are exempted from the order.

BLITZ VICTIM A DUMMY

London, (CP)—Rescuers redoubled their efforts when they saw the head and shoulders of a woman in the debris of a hospital hit by a flying bomb. After the beams and masses of masonry were cleared they found the "victim" was a life-sized model of rubber and plastic.

The Country Fair

Decades ago, hardy pioneers of Hastings County hitched their horses to the buggy or surrey, loaded in the family and drove rutted trails called roads to the county fair. For them it was the day of days; the climax of the season's harvest; a period of well-deserved relaxation, and the opportunity to viey with more or less concealed pride the exhibited products of their labors.

There was plenty of good-natured rivalry in the old days. Competition was as keen then as it is now, despite the fact that exhibits were not shown in the color and agricultural glamor that present-day fairs boast. Uncle Ned's Percherons and Berkshire hogs vied with neighbor ones' exhibits. Ma's doughnuts and hand-sewing rivalled Aunt Tillie's for blue ribbon honors. "Doc." Smith's hackney proudly stretched an arched neck as he trotted ahead of the high-wheeled buggy endeavoring to catch the eye of chin-stroking judges. "Pa's" big team; coats gleaming from judicious currycombing and brushing, trotted by garbed in freshly dubbined harness. Sturdy cattle, rested from long foot journeys over country trails to the fair, placidly chewed their cud as they awaited the judges' verdict.

* * *

Forebear of the modern "exhibition" the country fair of those days was not without the color that is part and parcel of the present day model. Booted overalled farmers, eyed neighbors livestock with experienced eye. The flaky crusts of pies, home-made bread and cookies, were as tasty then as they are now. The kids revelled in taffey apples, and rode creaking merry-go-rounds to the cacocophony of wheezing calliopes. What if "Pa" did cast furtive glances in the general direction of the family, and if the occasion presented itself, quietly crept in the "girlie" show tent, or took a fling at locating the pea hidden beneath one of the three shells.

What if Junior, uncomfortable in high rubber collar, but aware of his new long pants and richly colored tan shoes, did cast longing eyes at the neighbors "new girl," while "Sis" tittered, blushed, and shyly nodded her head when the Clark boy asked her to have a pink lemonade. It was all in the day's fun.

Fundamentally the country fair has changed but little since the horse and buggy days. It was the agricultural show window of Canada then as now only presented in a less elaborate setting. In those days the farmer drove his livestock to the fair, a feed-laden wagon trundling in the rear, now it is mechanically transported. Gone are the boots and overalls and well-stocked lunch basket. He now dresses in the style of the times and pays for his food at a tented concession or a downtown restaurant, Junior is no longer the gangling bashful youth of song and story. He has outgrown that, and now has exhibits of his own to look after. "Sis" perhaps is the head of the community war-work group and is busily engaged looking after the show products of her club.

* * *

The country fair like other phases of national life has kept pace with the trend of the times. This gangling colt sired by National Pride, out of Rural Achievement, has grown into a thoroughbred that is now an established institution on the figutative tracks of Canadian life.

In the piping times of peace it was the barometer of the life and work of rural Canada. In these eventful days, it reflects to some extent the gigantic production efforts put forth by the farmers of Canada to meet the demands of an Empire at war.

A well-equipped sample room of one of Canada's greatest industries, the country fair is one of the indispensable ingredients of the nation's future. It is the eyeglass through which her urban population looks upon and wonders at the achievements of its rural cousin. It is part and parcel of the national life, and as such, should receive its rightful recognition not only from the public but those who hold the reins of government whoever they may be.

Is There Anything New Under the Sun?

(Port Arthur News Chronicle)

A few days ago The News-Chronicle carried what is known in the newspaper profession as a "filler," being a small item the principal purpose of which is to fill a small space, thus to help make up or adjust the columns of reading matter. This particular item read as follows: "The first magazine ever issued was the Gentlemen's Magazine, published in London in 1731."

A reader who noticed the item has brought to the editorial offices a bound volume of several issues of this magazine under date of 1752. The noticeable thing about this "first magazine" is that it makes its appeal to the reading public on much the same grounds as the present day popular literature. The various articles meant for education and entertainment are in many respects similar to those found in the current magazines. One in the rather large volume submitted to this newspaper for examination was an interesting description of Algiers, which would be particularly opportune at this time because of the presence of Allied troops in that part of North Africa.

Another article bemoaned the degeneracy of the decessors. Human kind, through its young people, losing its vitality and strength and ignoring the moral character and virtue of fathers, mothers and grandparents, was going rapidly to the dogs. Mothers were scored for refusal to nurse and care for their own children, instead handing those duties over to maids and nurses.

Another article dealt with the then new practice of inoculation with smallpox virus as a preventive of the dread disease. The discovery was hailed as of great benefit to mankind.

There were stories of travel and adventure and of the eternal triangle which seems always to haunt men and women and threaten their happy relationships. There were household helps and hints and a question and answer department. A recipe for making "cyder" from apples looked quite interesting. Although there was nothing about airplanes, radio or telephone there seemed to be plenty of other subjects with which to engage the attention of the reader. The printing, on pages about the same size as the ordinary book, was much like that of the present day, although made rather difficult to read through use of the old time "s" that looked like an elongated "f". The modern illustrations were also lacking.

Foolish Questions

"Hello," said the pleasant voice through the telephone, "this is the radio survey. Are you listening to your radio now?" writes Guy Finamore in a Chicago Tribune column.

"Not right now," I replied. "At this moment I am conversing on the telephone." There is a slight, exasperated pause, and then:

"Were you listening to your radio before I left myself wide open for the oldest gag in the history of telephony?"

"Oh, excuse me. Yes."

"Well, we are attempting to ascertain the relative popularity of the radio programs which are being broadcast in this half-hour period. Would you care to divulge the name of the program to which you were listening?"

"With pleasure. I was listening to Dave Rose, and he was playing 'Poinciana'."

"Dave Rose? Why he isn't on the air now. He is in the army."

"If you please, madam, I was listening to Dave Rose."

"I say Dave Rose isn't on the air, and I know whereof I speak."

"Have you ever heard of a little invention called the phonograph? I was listening to Dave Rose playing 'Poinciana' on my radio-phonograph."

"Why, you, you . . . you . . .!" The pleasant voice slams the receiver into place.

PLEA

When the last gun is fired
And London town,
Dusty and worn and tired,
May settle down;

When the last litter brings
Some soldier back,
And the last bomber swings
Low to attack;

When seas are safe to ride,
Temples secure,
No need in caves to hide,
Liberty sure!

When sorrow's tears are dried,
Peace ours again,
Henceforth, however tried,
God keep us sane!

The first gasoline tax in the United States was a one-percent tax levied by Oregon in 1919.

"The Riviera," the name of a stretch of beautiful Mediterranean shore lying in France and Italy, is derived from Italian "riva" (Latin "ripa"), signifying bank and literally means simply "the shore."

"Midshipman" in the sense of a naval cadet originated in the British navy more than two centuries ago. It arose from the fact that young men who were going through a course of training to become officers were assigned quarters "amidships" on the lower deck. Thus "midshipman" came to be applied in the British navy to cadets or line and executive officers of the lowest grade. When the American Colonies first organized their navy the British practice was followed in respect to this as well as other ranks. The cadets at Annapolis are still called midshipmen.

"Limited train" is now merely a stylish name for a fast train. This term was first applied to railway trains about the time of the Civil War. Originally the limiting feature of limited trains consisted of a limited number of cars and consequently a limited amount of seating space. Just so many and no more passengers were carried. Those who failed to get accommodations took another train or waited over. The limited train of today is not limited in accommodations, because extra cars, and even extra sections, are added in case of an overflow of passengers. It is merely a fast train that stops for passengers only at a limited number of important stations, as contrasted with a "local" train, which is usually slow and stops at the smaller stations.

Because of his withered left arm and deformed hand the last Kaiser of Germany ate in private with a utensil combining the features of both knife and fork, and he never ate in public at all, but sat through banquets before an empty plate.

Many people think that cows do not sweat. They do sweat, but perspiration in the bovine kind is not so noticeable as it is in horses and some other animals. In the case of the horse the sweat glands are distributed widely over the skin and the animal sweats freely all over the body. In the ox, however, the sweat glands are less abundant and are most completely developed on the muzzle. Consequently a cow will sweat freely on the end of the nose, while what perspiration appears on her body is usually slight and almost imperceptible.

Amendment V of the Federal Constitution provides that private property shall not "be taken for public use, without just compensation."

Walt Whitman, the American poet, had no schooling after he was about twelve years of age.

The English poet John Keats was buried in Rome at night because of a regulation that funerals of non-Catholics could be held only after nightfall.

George Washington was a soldier. His first three successors in the presidency were not.

There are authentic records of fish that have survived being frozen in solid ice.

Nearly everybody has observed that some dogs often turn around several times before lying down. Scientists attempt to explain this trait by the theory of evolution. They say our domesticated dogs descended from a species of wild dog or wolf. These progenitors of the dog lived in the forest or brush and in order to find a comfortable place to rest they had to trample down the grass and other vegetation. A relic of this instinct still survives in the dog that turns around several times before lying down.

"Bread and butter letter" is the popular name given to a brief note of thanks written by a departed guest to his host or hostess. The term is particularly applicable to to the letter of appreciation that a person is expected to write to a friend after having spent a few days under his roof. It received its name from the fact that the writer of such a letter has enjoyed his friend's "bread and butter," namely, his hospitality. Etiquette sharks say a bread and butter letter should be posted within two days after the guest's departure.

In legal phraseology an "act of God" is an overwhelming natural event, such as a storm or earthquake, which no human being could be reasonably expected to foresee or prevent. According to common law, no person is responsible for a loss or injury when it is caused by "the act of God of the enemies of the state." If a person is sued for breach of contract and can prove that non-performance is due to "an act of God," he has a good defence.

WHAT MAKES A MOUTH FILTHY?

"Probably no other country has so many dentists and such well trained ones as the United States", says Prof. Barnett Sure in his book "The Little Things in Life" (Appleton-Century, 1937) "Toothache, however, due to abscesses and caries is common everywhere; so are inflamed and swollen gums, which frequently are associated with pyorrhea that results in loose teeth. . . . Clinical observations, however, indicate that the activity and extent of dental caries (decay, cavity-formation) may be quite unrelated to the degree of mouth cleanliness. Relatively clean teeth may be extremely decayed, and filthy mouths may contain sound teeth and healthy gums".

Whatever the Professor meant by "filthy" is beyond my comprehension. But if you ask me, I'll take the "filthy" mouth and sound teeth and healthy gums and you may have the "relatively clean" extremely decayed teeth. Here Professor Sure is expressing in polite language what Weston A. Price, D.D.S. has so clearly shown in his classical study "Nutrition and Physical Degeneration" (Hoeber of Harper & Bros., '40) and I, in my best bull-in-china-shop style, have been trying for years to pound into the heads of dentists, doctors and people who read this column when they have nothing interesting or instructive to read.

If brushing the teeth regularly could prevent tooth decay the American people should have the best teeth in the world, for surely no other people use toothbrushes and dentifrices as much as Americans do.

In a talk to follow I'll describe what I consider a clean mouth and how to keep it clean. Here I merely confess I don't know what the dentist or the professor means by a "filthy" mouth, or what makes it "filthy", if it is not the presence of cavities in the teeth or atrophy, wasting, degeneration of the gums, I sincerely believe that decay of the teeth (caries, cavity formation) cannot be prevented by the most meticulous use of toothbrush or dentifrice. I believe it can be prevented by good nutrition, good dental treatment and good mastication.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

When Doctors Disagree

Our doctors prescribed green iron and ammonium citrate to increase the hemoglobin, which was found reduced to 65. My brother, a doctor in another state, says iron is not assimilated without copper, in which opinion Sherman seems to concur. He never prescribes iron without some copper. (S .P. M.)

Answer—It may be true that a minute quantity of copper is essential for hemoglobin formation, but generally there is enough copper present in various foods to fulfil the body's requirement—such foods as radishes, cucumbers, peas, tomatoes, oysters, cauliflower, celery, asparagus, beets, grapes, lettuce, kale, and watercress contain considerable copper. In the booklet "Blood and Health" (for copy send ten cents and stamped envelope bearing your address—do not send a clipping) I tell how to make up a homemade iron tonic containing a wee bit of copper.

Mild Tincture of Iodine

You had better look up the formula of Mild Tincture of Iodine, U. S. P. XII. It does contain dilute alcohol. (S. K., Registered Pharmacist).

Answer—I hope the printer has not made me say what you imply I have said. Of course Mild Tincture of Iodine contains alcohol. I said Weak Solution of Iodine contains no alochol.

Succedaneum for Digitalis.

I am 53 years of age, and have been taking digitalis for rheumatic heart, but it does not seem to help me. (P. M. E.)

Answer—Of course I have no idea what your condition or requirements may be. But let me say that an optimal daily ration of vitamin B-complex ,say three spoonfuls of a potent syrup of B-complex which contains also a little iron gluconate and manganese, along with digitalis, or as a succedaneum for digitalis, often acts as a real heart tonic.

Help For Alcoholic Addicts

Please send your booklet "Dipsomania". I want to help my son, aged 30 years, or help him help himself. (Mrs. E. W.)

Answer—Best help for any alcoholic addict is to get in touch with an Alcoholic Anonymous group in his or her community —perhaps postoffice address of a group may be found in the Classified Section. If you provide stamped envelope bearing your address I'll send the booklet on alcoholism.

Fred Meehan was born in Marmora Township and spent his boyhood days here, later moving to Niagara Falls, N.Y.

"A veteran of one of the outstanding missions of the Eighth Air Force, Technical Sergeant Frederick O. He went over with the first wave of bombers on D-Day and took part in the St. Lo offensive, the drive that culminated in the conquest of the Brest peninsula.

His narrowest escape, he related, was on a mission to oil refineries at Brux, Czechoslovakia. A flak shell went completely through the bomb bay of his plane without exploding, missing the bombs by about four inches and then exploded after it went out through the top of the plane.

A chemical operator at the DuPont plant, Niagara Falls, N.Y., before entering the army, he also holds the Air Medal with Three Oak Leaf Clusters and wears the Presidential Unit Citation.

WEDDINGS

HALL—RAY

On Wednesday, September sixth, 1944, at two-thirty p.m., St. Paul's Anglican Church, Roslin, was the scene of an interesting early Autumn wedding when Mavis Gwendolyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ray of Halloway, was united in marriage to James Donald Garfield Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hall, of Plainfield.

The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. F. C. Beazer.

The church and home were suitably decorated for the occasion with baskets of gladioli zinnias, asters, snapdragons and sweetpeas.

To the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin played by Miss Phyllis Beatty of Halloway, cousin of the groom, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. Her wedding dress was of white sheer, with lace bodice and peplum, and she wore a finger-tip veil of silk net, and carried a bouquet of red roses.

Miss Merle Ray, of Ottawa, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, wore a floor length gown of blue brocaded taffeta.

The bridesmaid, Miss Audrey Hall, of Plainfield, sister of the groom, wore a floor length gown of pink taffeta.

The attendants wore Juliet caps matching their gowns, and carried nosegays of pink Briarcliffe roses and scabiosa.

LAC. Lee Ray, stationed at the West Coast, brother of the bride, acted as groomsman.

The ushers were Mr. Clarence Carleton, of Plainfield, and Mr. Earle Ray, of Halloway, brother of the bride.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. A. F. Hall, of Plainfield, sang a solo "Through All the Years".

The Hymn, "The Voice that Breathed O'er Eden", was sung during the service,

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother received the guests gowned in a blue crepe dress with matching accessories and corsage of scabiosa. She was assisted by the groom's mother, who chose a gown of black lace and sheer, with corsage of scabiosa.

A buffet luncheon was served to about sixty guests. The waitresses were Irene Lazier, Dorothy Boulton, Phyllis George, Frances O'Shaughnessy, and Jean Badgley.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Hall left on a wedding trip to Toronto and points west. For travelling the bride chose a blue tailored suit with navy accessories.

On their return they will reside at the groom's home in Plainfield.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Would Domestic Rules Adhered to, Be a Solution for Happy Marriages?

A Chicago couple who just could not stand each other another moment were restrained from going through the divorce mill by the thought of their three children.

The wife charged her husband with cruelty in a bill for divorce. Yet she told Judge Joseph Sabath that she didn't like to see her family broken up, and produced the great solution for keeping the home together for the three little boys, aged 4, 2 and 4 months.

The solution was ten rules which she had prepared, and her attorney presented a typewritten list. They are as follows:

Rule 1. Wife to run home. 2. Husband not to hit wife or call her names. 3. Husband to allow wife more money for food and home expenses. 4. Wife to have an allowance for her personal use. 5 Husband to keep yard and outside of home clean. 6. On his off days, mow the lawn. 7. Wife to have every other Tuesday off to attend her Club. 8. Husband to take wife out once a week. 9. Husband to give kisses and affection to wife. 10. Husband permitted to keep $10 per week spending money.

The husband said he would agree to keep these rules but he would like a few "freedoms" of his own. Judge Sabath told him to write them out. He wrote six as follows: 1. Wife not to break or destroy property in the home. 2. Wife to count fifty before doing anything. 3. Wife not to get angry because she can't go out every time she wants to. 4. Wife not to tell husband how much better neighbors and clubwomen live. 5. When wife goes to store she's to buy all she needs, so she won't have to make ten trips each day. 6. Wife to set table completely so she won't have to be getting up and down ten times every meal.

Reading over the "freedoms", demanded by this couple it would seem to be a case of 50-50. Some of the wife's demands seem reasonable, such as sufficient money for food and home expenses, and to have an allowance for her personal use, and to have one day off in two weeks to attend her club, and for the husband to take wife out once a week.

As she demands kisses and affection she must still love her husband. Also she petitions that he will stop calling her names and striking her. Some of the husband's freedoms are reasonable enough too, such as not to break or destroy property in the home, not to tell her husband how much better the neighbors and her clubwomen live, and to avoid making ten trips to the store where one would do. Also she should set the table completely to avoid jumping up and down.

Perhaps this Chicago couple have stumbled on a splendid solution to avoid broken homes which seem to be the cause of much of our youth delinquency.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Weak Ankles

If spiked heels are a girl's pet frenzy, if she wears them from the time she crawls out of bed until she falls in again she may eventually pay a penalty in the form of weak ankles. Of this trouble she may be only slightly conscious at first, as there may be no definite pain or discomfort. All she knows is that she doesn't care to skate in the winter time, she hates to walk more than a block, and dancing is not a thrilling joy, it should be.

Because of the narrow bases of spikes, her foothold is uncertain. The slightest misstep and the ankle turns. Also the ankle sways from side to side, a movement that is not natural.

When the heel is lifted beyond a certain point, and the foot pushed forward into the toes of the shoes the ligaments of the ankle and the leg become strained and weakened, lose tone and resiliency. The first thing to do is to relieve that strain by wearing shoes with lower heels. One must make the change gradually. To discard spikes and to put on extremely low heels is too much of a comedown to the structure of bones and ligaments that have assumed an unnatural position.

Ill-fitting, badly-designed shoes cause foot deformities, and the ankles suffer, too.

Support of knitted rubber bring comfort and relief. Also, the ankles can be bandaged. Use three inch heavy bandage fabric, winding it on fairly tightly. Before putting on the bandage, bathe feet and ankles with cold water, and friction for several mintues.

No girl should be conscious of her feet. They were perfectly designed to carry the weight of the body, and will fulfill their mission unless they are abused or mistreated. The body may be fatigued after a long walk, but normal, strong, healthy feet will show no evidence of weariness, especially if they are encased in well-fitted shoes that afford proper support of the waist of the foot.

Exercise will strengthen relaxed muscles of the ankles and legs. When tendons are more or less impaired and tissues exhausted, it is necessary to exercise in moderation.

Remove shoes and stockings. Lift slowly on the toes, come down slowly. Let the body rock forward and back. Do that for a short period twice a day. After a week or so, stand on the toes while you count five. No quick, jerky movements.

Sit in a low chair, put one knee over the other. Lift and lower the toes of the foot that is uppermost.

Walk on tip-toes. As ankles get stronger, rope jumping is recommended to keep them in normal condition.

The Experts Say

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Sept. 9. (CP) —COLD COMFORT: There's no chance that electric refrigerators will be released for domestic use for some time to come; hospitals have a priority on new ones. Now says the Prices Board, there are only 225 left in stock in Canada, the number produced in one day in normal times. If you have an electric refrigerator take the best possible care of it, for when firms return to civilian production it will be from six to nine months before the refrigerators appear in the stores again.

EXTRA GOODIES: The little extras—cake, cookies and doughnuts—are appreciated by factory and office workers and school children for whom lunch boxes are packed, nutrition services say. And every lunch box should include either meat, fish, eggs, cheese or dried beans, plus a fruit, vegetable, other than a potato, and milk. The nutrition experts point out that cold or hot milk drinks or cream soups carry well in a thermos, and milk puddings and custards pack milk into the lunch box too.

APPLE A DAY: Here's a recipe for apple ice cream that is certain to please six persons, for whom the serving is planned. It requires two cups of grated apples (four medium apples) one-half cup of fruit or fine granulated sugar and half a pint or whipping cream.

Grate the unpeeled apples, and after grating a small amount of apple measure and sprinkle with part of the sugar to prevent discoloration. Continue grating until two cups of apple are measured. Whip the cream, fold into the apple mixture and freeze.

The same recipe may be used for apple charlotte, but the charlotte requires one and one-half tablespoons of gelatine, soaked in one-quarter cup of cold water dissolved over hot water, folded in with whipped cream. The charlotte should be chilled until firm. It will serve six to eight people.

CONSERVE CAREFULLY is the word these days, and here are a few hints on how to practise it. Don't throw the oil in a tin of fish down the drain. You paid cash for good food value, so why throw it away. Again, don't buy more than you need, and use up what you buy.

Be sure "bargain" foods are really bargains. Don't leave what you have to spoil—there's a place to store everything and it's not always the refrigerator. Leave the cold air for foods that must be refrigerated, and don't throw out leftovers; think of an interesting way to serve them again.

Fashion Flashes

COMING BACK strong is the fur cape which has won applause at every collection this season. A beauty is of black Persian lamb, with a back dipping cut, the front worked in stole fashion with the skins handled in circular stripes.

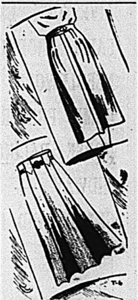
A new high is reached by many of the new chechia or fez hats. Black felt, irregularly draped and very high in back, is used for a handsome fez trimmed with blue and rose stone embroidery and black braid that forms large button-like motifs.

Clever detail enlivens many of the new dresses. A brown sheer wool dress with high round neckline, has big leaves, padded and cord-embroidered to contribute shoulder importance and ornament. The leaves are applied like a bertha, semi-detached and caught in at the armhole.

Dignity and grace mark many of the evening frocks designed for the mature women. Over a slim sheath of black crepe, one designer poses a long, back-dipping tunic of black lace lighted with sprays of black sequins. Deep V neck and short sleeves.

Soon enough cold winds will start to blow. Against this contingency one house is showing small hats with attached draperies fashioned out of Paisley shawls, the lovely colors highlighted by tiny colored beads and sequins. Essentially for evening wear.

Big season ahead for the restaurant suit. A smart number is of light weight warm brown woollen, embroidered all over in tiny iridescent coppery beading done in an intricate scroll design, except for a narrow panel down the front on which are bronze colored metal buttons.



Wool Crepe and Shetland Wool Skirts

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

SEPARATE skirts to go with a blouse wardrobe or to accompany a topper are featured by every shop this season. The first skirt is of wool crepe with concealed fastening. Tucks from the waist soften the front. The belt is cut in one with the skirt. Other one is a Shetland wool skirt and is a good companion for sweaters and wool blouses. It achieves a box-pleated effect via the stitched down gores. A leather belt slips through the top.

The Marry-Go-Round

Letter to a WAC, Overseas.

Dear Peg:—

So you've had a spat with the Captain—and are sending me an S.O.S.! Well, here is a prompt reply to your distress-signal. My answer is emphatically, DON'T! Don't marry him just in order to take the EGO out of him. It is probably indelible and won't come out anyway.

Of course, marrying a man is sometimes a woman's way of revenging herself on him. But it is always an awful boomerang. Taking, the ego or conceit out of a man is about the cruelest and most foolish thing a woman can do. For while his conceit may be the cause of many of weaknesses, it is often the source of most of his achievements.

Sometimes a man may have too MUCH ego, as in the case of Hitler; but most of us suffer from the Old Inferiority Complex, which holds us back. Most of us need MORE ego, more self-confidence and more self-esteem than we were born with. Even the cockiest of us. Unconsciously, most of us marry in order to get an admirer and a cheer-leader who will help us pep up our ego. And it's a bitter disappointment to find yourself tied to an extinguisher who feels that it's his or her great life work to squelch your "conceit" and flatten you out.

Besides, don't you know that it's through a man's ego that many a woman has flattered him into accomplishing big things, and making a success of himself? The more a man's wife helps him to hold onto the vision of himself, as a big financier, a great political leader or a deep and brilliant thinker, the surer he is of becoming the success he thinks he is. That's plain psychology. Ego sometimes turns out to be just plain courage and self-confidence.

A little flattery at the right moment will spur a man on to do or be anything a woman wants him to be. It is his ego which prompts him to cultivate the arts and graces and inspires him to keep the polish on his boots and his manners, so that he may look prosperous.

It is sometimes his vanity and self-esteem which drive him on to hard work and the ambition to achieve, so that he may be a success in the eyes of the world. And it is more often vanity than love which causes a man to lavish money, jewels and ermine coats on his wife. She's his best 'show window'.

So if your Captain's "ego" or conceit or whatever you may call it, is the right kind of self-esteem, for Heaven's sake don't trifle with it —just encourage it. It may prove his greatest asset.

Rob a man of anything else—but leave him his SELF-ESTEEM! Particularly if you are thinking of marrying him. Be his cheer-leader. Keep his pride and self-confidence intact—and his love will take care of itself!

I am writing you this in all seriousness, because if you and the captain have reached the scrapping stage, things are getting serious. As long as a man is just pleasant, he may mean nothing; but when he begins to get dictatorial, he means business!

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Menu For an Informal Dinner

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I have recently been married. We have a small apartment, my husband and I both work, and I also do all of our housekeeping. We're blessed by having many dear friends, and they entertained us with so many parties before our marriage that now we want to plan to have some informal dinners for six, perhaps on Saturday evenings, when I will have more time for preparations. Will you please suggest a simple menu that would be easy and appropriate for such dinners?

B. E.

I suggest you choose a first course that can be on the table when you summon your guests to dinner . . . for example a fruit cup looking extra-festive with a few pieces of mint leaves or crushed candy mints; or oysters on the half-shell, in a bed of shaved ice; or shrimp or crabmeat cocktail. Then, for your main course, you'll be a wise lady to make some kind of casserole your specialty. . . easiest to plan for and to prepare, easy to be kept hot, and relished by everyone is a chicken casserole, with the chicken cut in convenient-to-serve pieces, and containing all the necessary "accompanying" vegetables. Serve relishes with this too, if you wish, and small, hot finger-rolls. Then feature your salad by making it a separate course: a green salad, perhaps hearts of lettuce, with heated crackers, and cheese. For dessert, ice cream (made in the big tray in your ice box), and thin sweet cookies. Coffee, served either at table, or more leisurely, in your living-room.

Very important it is for you to plan the serving so that you will have to do the minimum of "jumping up and down". Beside your place at table, have your tea wagon or other small serving table. After the first course is finished, have the dishes passed along to you, and tack them on the lower shelf of the serving table. Or take them quickly to the kitchen, and bring in the casserole dish. The last two courses can be all ready to be served pronto the crisp salad ingredients being chilled in the salad bowl, waiting only for the addition of the salad dressing, the ice cream at your service in your refrigerator; and the coffee ready in the percolator.

Use your side-board or buffet as a good companion to your service: on it, have such items as the covered dish with the rolls, the cheese dish for the salad course (space for crackers to be added), the dish of cookies, the tray equipped for the coffee service, and if perchance you want to show off those finger bowls you got as a wedding present, these, half filled with water and with perhaps a flower floating in each.

Traveler's Checks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

What are "traveler's checks"? I've never heard about them until lately, and I'm wondering how they differ from one's personal checks.

Wilma.

You can purchase traveler's checks in your bank, in varying denominations. These you sign when you buy them, but they cannot be cashed until you sign them again in the presence of the person who accepts them in exchange for the amount of money stamped on the check. They are an extremely convenient way to take money with you when you travel, for while then you may find it difficult to cash a personal check, a traveler's check requires no identification but your signature And generally merchants or other individuals, as well as banks, will cash them.

Collecting blood here to save lives over there
FORD V-8 ENGINE

It's always dependable!

IN THE QUIET of a little Canadian town a Ford "Red Cross" truck pulls up in front of a hall, school or church. Trained technicians hurry sterile equipment into the building, and soon the townspeople and folks from the surrounding farms are giving blood to save the lives of the boys overseas. Then, right on schedule, the truck is on the way to the next town or village. This is the Mobile Blood Donor Service of the Canadian Red Cross, which collects the blood of thousands of eager donors living far from the permanent clinics in the big cities.

To the deafening roar of our artillery, our men advance behind a protecting wall of fire. Close behind them come Ford military ambulances, pushing forward along shell-torn roads on their missions of mercy. Swiftly the wounded are given first aid, or snatched from the jaws of death with life-saving blood serum from Canada.

Whether on the battlefront or on the home front, these trucks must get through on time. Their drivers have complete confidence in the famous Ford V-8 engine. It's the engine proved by millions in peacetime . . . tried and proved again by war's cruel tests on the frozen fronts of Russia, in the swirling sandstorms of North Africa, in the mud and mountains of Italy and the battlefields of France. More than 300,000 Ford military vehicles, serving under every Allied flag, have told the same wonderful story of the Ford V-8 Engine . . . "It's always dependable!"

YANKS NOW FULL GAME AHEAD OF ST. LOUIS BROWNS

Detroit Tigers Only Game and Half Away From First Place

DODGERS ON TOP

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Yankee Bats, copping 10 of their last 11 games, boosted the New Yorkers into undisputed possession of first place in the American League today, a full game on top of St. Louis and a game and a half ahead of idle Detroit.

Weekend action, involving three road games for the Yanks at Boston while the Browns and Tigers engage in three game sets with the White Sox and Indians, may alter the situation but the 1944 version of famed Murderer's Row was busting the league open.

When the McCarthy clan collected 13 safeties in easing out a 7-6 victory over the Red Sox in 12 innings yesterday, the totals for the last 11 games went to 132 hits in 403 at bats, producing 91 runs, better than eight a game. Twenty-one doubles, 11 triples and 12 homers during that stretch upped the "slugging" average to a robust .524.

St. Louis hopes soared when Bob Muncrief went to the firing line after passing up his starting turn for 12 days due to elbow trouble but Chicago spurted in the late innings to knock the Browns out of a tie for the lead, 9-5.

Mickey Haefner shut out Philadelphia A's with five hits, 4-0, last night in earning his 10th for Washington with the help of Gil Torres who drove in two runs and scored another on Russ Christopher.

Brooklyn won the only tilt listed in the National by a 4-3 margin over the Phillies despite Buster Adams' 15th homer. Les Webber was the relief winner over Ken Raffensberger.

BALTIMORE STILL IN FIRST PLACE OF INT. LEAGUE

Both Orioles and Newark Bears Defeated in Games Friday

LEAFS WIN

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

A mathematical hairsbreadth separated the first place Baltimore Orioles and the second place Newark Bears today as the International League entered its final weekend in the closest race since 1928.

Both the Orioles and the Bears lost yesterday to leave the tense situation unchanged. As the clock runs out, the Orioles are in the better position, for should both contenders fare alike in the remaining three games, Baltimore will be the official champions.

Only one other time in the 61-year-old history of the League did a team win the championship by a single percentage point, when the Rochester Red Wings of 1928 won its first of four straight pennants, .549 to .548.

The Bears came close to wrestling the lead from Baltimore, yesterday, when they broke a tie with Syracuse, scoring once in the 13th, only to have the Chiefs tally twice in their half to win 4-3. A double by Chuck Fitzgerald with two out and two strikes on him scored runners from first and second to win the game for the Chiefs.

The Orioles couldn't take advantage of seven Jersey City errors and eight walks by Pitcher Ken Miller, as they dropped a 4-3 verdict to the Little Giants.

Toronto clinched a playoff berth and moved to within a half-game of the third place Bisons by defeating Buffalo 5-2. Woody Crowson won his 12th game, holding the Bisons to seven hits.

Jean Pierre Roy pitched and batted the Montreal Royals to a 3-2 victory over the Red Wings in 14 innings. Roy gave up only eight hits, striking out 12, and singled in Stan Andrews with the winning run in the 14th.

President Frank J. Shaughnessy announced that the 12th annual Governors' Cup series will open next Tuesday night, with the top team meeting number four and the second place team meeting number three. Each series winner must take four games of seven and the two winning teams meet to determine which will represent the league in the Junior World Series.

SMYTHE OFFERED PRESIDENCY OF NATIONAL LEAGUE

Teams Allowed to Dress 14 Men and Each Club Will Play 50 Games

REFEREES NAMED

Montreal, Sept. 9 (CP)—Maj. Connie Smythe, who was wounded while serving in Normandy with his Sportsman's Battery, yesterday was offered the presidency of the National Hockey League at a meeting of the governors here. It is understood Smythe's injuries will keep him on the invalid list for some time.

In the meantime, Mervyn (Red) Dutton will act as President with Lester Patrick of New York as General Manager.

Among the rule changes adopted was one which would bar any player from the league who has been deferred under Selective Service regulations either in Canada or the United States for any reason other than physical disability. Thus, a player, who is in a callable class and deferred because of jobs in war industry would not be allowed to play in the league or affiliated bodies.

It was decided that teams be allowed to dress 14 players for each game, three forward lines, four defence men and a goal tender.

A slight change in the rules governing the red line drawn at centre ice last season provides that the puck may not be iced from anywhere behind the line. Last season, the players were allowed to shoot the puck forward from their blue line.

The governors drew up a schedule which opens Oct. 28 and continues until March 18, 1945. However, it is not yet ready to be released. Each team will play 50 games.

Bert Hedges of Toronto and Georges Gravel of Montreal were named referees to replace Norman Lamport who resigned, while Frank (King) Clancy and Bert Chadwick will continue as officials.

A committee composed of representatives of the N.H.L. and the American Hockey League was formed which has full powers to conclude any deals. The league also extended for a year the protection granted players of the disbanded American Hockey Association.

Sport Shorts From Britain

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 8. (CP)—It was a sunny Sunday afternoon on the squadron playing field when the Canadian Nighthawk fighter squadron scraped together 11 baseball-minded volunteers and challenged a Royal Air Force team to a game—of cricket. From then on it was chaos.

To begin with (and it's a sad commentary on this polite English game) most of the Canadians were taking their first crack at a cricket match, and, of all things, one of the Nighthawks was allowed to keep score. The scorer was FO. Joe Clarke, a navigator from Banff, Alta., who insisted on calling "balls" and "strikes" and did a little umpire-baiting (strictly not cricket, old boy, on the side.

Despite the huge R.A.F. handicap of having Clarke a scorekeeper—he was frankly puzzled by the absence of spaces for hits, runs, errors, etc., on the score-sheet—the Canadians lost to their English brethren by 15 runs. The Nighthawks were all out for 69 while the R.A.F. declared with five wickets down—if you non-cricketers can figure that out.

Awestruck and sometimes horrified groups of spectators, mostly Britons, shuddered at some of the Canadians' antics and at some of the questionable advice thrown at the English umpire by hecklers in the field.

Best for the losers was FO. Marty Kent of (103 Roxborough St., E.) Toronto, who besides bowling well slapped out nine runs. The squadron medical officer and onetime softball catcher, Flt. Lt. Jack Young of Edmonton, showed well behind the wicket but popped out on the first pitch at bat.

It was said that after the game FO. Hal Whipp of (357 Old Orchard Ave.), Toronto, crawled off to bed without partaking of tea. Whipp, squadron intelligence officer, played a strong outfield but was loud in his protests at calling "over" after every six balls.

He claimed that every time this happened he was the principal in a long hike to the other corner of the pitch.

All this cricket talk reminds that the Canadian Military Headquarters team played 45 cricket fixtures this season, including a losing match against a Lord's XI at world-famed Lord's. Now that the cricket season is on the wane, C.M.H.Q. have turned to football and 27 games have been arranged.

Average age of the footballers is 35. Military duties do not allow time for training, nor have the team a ground. Sweaters and shorts were presented the players by the English Football Association.

Captain and centre half for the Canadians is L. Cpl. Alex Archer of Winnipeg, who made a big name for himself in the English pre-war sports field as an ice hockey star with Wembley.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Sept. 9 —(CP)— Association football, or soccer, may be due for a new burst of popularity after the war if enthusiasm being whipped up by Britishers in this country carries into the post-war scene. Many former players in British professional leagues have sojourned in Canada long enough to organize soccer games in the different services and create new interest at many points where the game was at a low ebb.

One of them, Sgt. Bill Whitehead of the R.C.A.F. at Picton, Ont., thinks Canadians could develop into classy soccer players if they had the chance. Talking with Bill (Niagara Falls Review) Geynon, the former Sunderland and Rotheran star said he had seen some "mighty promising young Canadian soccer players," but that expert instruction was needed to bring them to the top.

He suggested this could be remedied by bringing in younger soccer players from Britain after the war to coach the Canadians and act as referees so the game could be played with Old Country thoroughness. One thing wrong with the game in Canada now, he said, is that the old-timers would rather keep on playing themselves instead of taking the youngsters in hand and coaching them.

Was He Mad!

International relations were slightly strained at Peterborough, Ont., in a recent "rasslin" match. Dr. Len Hall of San Francisco went away fuming after the referee disqualified him most unjustly during a bout with Killer Katan. The Killer cooled the ref with a snappy uppercut to the jaw, and when His Nibs woke up a few seconds later he blamed Hall for the knuckle Mickey Finn and disqualified him.

Incidentally:

Officials of the Montreal Interscholastic Football Group plan to make several rule changes that will Americanize the game a bit more. They will introduce unlimited substitution, remove the 24-player limit and stiffen the penalties for rule infractions, clamping down especially on the dangerous "piling on" practice . . . Pte. Fred Metcalfe, former Regina hockey coach, is with the U. S. forces in the South Pacific now . . . Bunny Morganson of the Toronto Telegram says President Pete Campbell of the Toronto Maple Leaf baseballers has been thinking of introducing sandlot baseball games as a preliminary to regular International League games at Toronto. It might be a project for next season. . . .

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

This item in a small North Carolina country newspaper attracted our attention:

"After the ceremony, Smith declared he visited the home of his father-in-law, John Jones. Thereupon his mother-in-law hit him over the eye, blacking it, struck him on the nose, drawing blood and then his father-in-law fired at him twice with a shotgun. The police believe the Jones family objected to the marriage."

This and That.

Fifty-six seems to be a magic number in sports....Joe DiMaggio hit safely in 56 consecutive major league ball games....Ben Logan finished in the money in 56 straight golf tournaments....Walter Johnson hurled 56 consecutive scoreless innings for the Washington Senators....Greg Rice won 56 races in a row....Wonder what's happened to the proposed sponsoring of a junior O.R.F.U. in Belleville.... There is an idea that would pay off, after all there is little or no autumn sport here for the general run-of-the-mill fans in Belleville from the time softball ends until hockey gets under way the next year....And the best part of it is the fact there is a wealth of material for a coach to work with ....Larry Gilbert, Nashville manager, says his star southpaw, Boyd Tepler, who has struck out 119 men in 100 inings, would be a bargain at $50,000 if placed on the open market....Tepler, a Chicago boy, is on option from the Chicago Cubs' Los Angeles farm.

Softball Siftings.

There seems to be some difference of opinion regarding the return game between the T.A.S.A. winners and the Belleville Squires, who meet in the first game of the junior O.A.S.A. playdowns at Perth Square in Toronto today....The parent body ordered the second game to be played at Belleville next Wednesday, but the Toronto moguls say "nay, nay"....They want the return match played a week from today because some of their players are working boys....The other half of the junior O.A.S.A. semi-finals, Hamilton and Windsor, is being played today and Wednesday, why not the Belleville-Toronto series also?....Jack Doran will be in charge of the Squires in Toronto today and doubtless will start Don Boyle holding Bob Bunton in reserve as a relief hurler....While on the subject of softball Secretary Eddie Schrieder of the local ladies' softball league, announced today that league finals between SWACO and Reliance would commence Monday evening at the Armouries and continue Wednesday, Friday and possibly next Saturday afternoon as well. It is a best-in-seven series.

Not Last Out.

When Brooklyn was mathematically eliminated from the pennant race, August 20, the Dodgers were following a custom of National League tailenders in recent years in dropping out of the running for the flag in August. The Giants were a little later last year, bowing out on August 29.

The Phillies probably established a record in backing out of the picture as early as August 14 in 1942. In the previous year, they were eliminated on August 19.

When the Cubs made their runaway race in 1906 to win the pennant with the largest number of victories in the history of the majors, the Boston Braves scraped along the bottom with a mathematical chance for the flag until August 21, a day later than the Dodgers were eliminated this year.

Bargain Day.

Apparently "Lefty" Dudgeon, the Mountain View Bombers' pitcher from Vancouver, had a little too much on the ball for Everett Dickey's Alemites the other night. However, after the "east-enders" got over a bad case of shakes, when the Bombers scored four in the initial frame, Ernie Smith settled away to battle Dudgeon at even terms to give the fans a tidy baseball battle.

It will be "bargain day" at the Alemite Field tomorrow when a doubleheader of baseball will be played. The curtain-raiser sees a new ball entry meet the St. Mike's kids in the C.N.R. "Nationals." There was a day when the Nats. were a powerful threat in baseball circles. What the "railroaders" have to offer in the line of baseball will be disclosed tomorrow. Following this sees the Alemites meet "Doc" Empson's Latta nine. Incidentally Russ Collins, who is home on leave from the navy, will be out playing with his old diamond buddy Jack Empson, and cavorting about at second base in the nieghtcap. Russ has been stationed at Newfoundland for the past couple of years.

Remember When.

World heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis, training for a bout with Lou Nova in New York, was classified 1-A by his draft board at Chicago three years ago today. Louis now is a sergeant in the United States Army. Nova is also in the army. Recently Louis made a tour of the American and Canadian camps in Italy staging exhibition boxing bouts to entertain the Allied troops at the front.

Promoters' Dream.

Promoter Frank Tunney didn't have to burn too much of the midnight oil to discover he had a top-ranking bout in matching Frank Sexton and John Katan. "This is bigtime stuff. Any American promoter would give concessions to get Katan and Sexton in the same ring at the same time. It isn't often I personally recommend a bout, but this one is tops, you need not be afraid to go all out on it," Promoter Tunney assured W. Gerow when he announced the Katan-Sexton meeting yesterday.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO.

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The no-trump opening bid family is the easiest group of signals to distinguish. The higher the opening no-trump bid, the more no-trump tricks it shows.

An opening one no-trump shows a minimum of five and a maximum of seven. An opening of two no-trump shows a maximum of eight and a minimum of seven. An opening three no-trump shows nine.

A no-trump trick is a high card. A high card is any ace or king or queen. So, an opening of three no-trump shows nine high cards of ace-king-queen quality; enough to make a game in no-trump.

If the opening is one no-trump, partner should pass if he has not more than two tricks. In answer to an opening two no-trump, partner should pass unless he has at least one high card.

But an opening of three no-trump is already at a game contract. So, partner should pass unless he has enough help to make a slam in either no-trump or some suit.

Consequently, if the responder does not pass, he admits having help for a slam. And that is so whether the responder replies with a takeout to some suit or uses a no-trump bid.

How does responder know if there may be a slam in their pair? Simply by adding the number of tricks he has to the nine no-trump tricks shown by the opener. It is as easy as that.

You see, there are only 12 aces and kings and queens in a pack. If opener shows nine, partner adds his own to them. The total will tell how many they both have. Opponents will have the balance.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of three no-trump and you have this hand:

♠ A 9 5
♥ Q 6
♦ Q 8 4 2
♣ J 7 5 2

You have three high cards (no-trump tricks). With the nine shown by partner, your pair has 12. You see a slam. Go to it.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Sensations of 1945"

Imagine the best comedy stars, the best dancers, the best pianists, the best bands and the best circus acts in all the show business in one picture. Imagine a cast which includes Eleanor Powell in a starring role, Dennis O'Keefe, W. C. Fields, C. Aubrey Smith, Sophie Tucker, Eugene Pallette, Mimi Forsythe, David Lichine, the bands of Cab Calloway and Woody Herman all in one film. And imagine this cast enacting the story of one of Hollywood's top directors. You don't have to go into the realm of imagination to find this picture. It really exists. It is Andrew Stone's "Sensations of 1945" which opened today at the McCarthy theatre through United Artists release.

Mr. Stone, a veteran producer and director of big musical productions has thoroughly scoured every aspect of show business—from swank night clubs to the circus ring—to bring to the screen the finest and biggest musical yet to come out of Hollywood. But not satisfied with merely parading his fine stars on the screen in a feeble story, he has assured that everything that happens is tied up in a good solid plot written by Frederick Jackson.

Star of Sensations is the dancing star, Eleanor Powell. But besides her usual dancing role, Miss Powell enacts a quick-thinking press agent whose stunts are good for page one copy, and plenty of entertainment for a motion picture audience.

Every act in the picture is one that Eleanor is trying to promote. Her success, as well as the romance developed between her and Dennis O'Keefe depends on the way she handles these acts. And what acts. Besides the headliners mentioned above they are: The Pallenberg Bears, Hubert Castle, the Cristianis, teeter-board daredevils, and "Starless Night" wonder horse—all from vaudeville. From the world of swing Stone recruited Dorothy Donegan, current rage of the East and Midwest who jams the classics, and Gene Rodgers, who sticks to straight keyboard jive. Out of vaudeville is a headliner roller skating act; the Johnsons, whose forte is juggling, and Mel Hall, world's champion unicyclist expert.

She's a Soldier Too.

Because of countless publicity stories, everyone knows what scene stealers babies are. But when we say that the infant playing a prominent part in "She's a Soldier Too", currently showing as the second feature attraction at the McCarthy theatre, doesn't steal the show, it's no reflection on the youngster's glamour or acting ability. It's a bouquet to the cast of young players who, together with the veterans, Beulah Bondi and Percy Killbridge, give such a sterling bright and completely entertaining film fare.

AT THE BELLE

"The North Star"

(Romantic Drama)

More than a year in preparation, five months before the camera at a record outlay, Samuel Goldwyn's production, "The North Star," comes as a significant milestone in the development of motion pictures. This appealing romantic drama opens an engagement at the Belle Theatre today, Saturday.

Producing from an original screenplay by Lillian Hellman author of "The Little Foxes," "These Three" and "Watch on the Rhine," Producer Goldwyn, without regard to expense, assembled a cast and staff of most impressive quality. Down to the last bit player with one line to read, he insisted on actors of recognized ability and standing. There are more than 100 speaking parts and more than 13,000 checks were written for extras and day players. Some 260,000 feet of film were exposed.

Directed by Lewis Milestone, who made "All Quiet on the Western Front," the cast of "The North Star" includes Anne Baxter, brilliant young actress who was a standout in "Five Graves to Cairo," "Crash Dive" and "The Pied Piper"; Walter Brennan, Hollywood's only three-time winner of the Academy Award; Walter Huston, fresh from a triumph in "Mission to Moscow"; Ann Harding, in a sensational comeback after five years' absence from the screen; Dana Andrews, who followed up his original hit in "Ball of Fire" with "Crash Dive" and "The Ox-Bow Incident"; Dean Jagger, who was recalled from the Broadway theatres for his role; Erich von Stroheim, who has in two world wars been "the man you love to hate"; and Jane Withers, who after seven years of stardom as a comic imp does her first serious role.

The picture also marks the debut of Farley Granger, handsome 18-year-old six-footer, rated Goldwyn's most sensational find since Gary Cooper. Granger and Miss Baxter have the romantic leads.

"Commando Duck" is the title of a funny Donald Duck cartoon to be presented on the same program, with the Belle News of the Day. Continuous shows will be presented today.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Jamboree"

(First Belleville Showing)

Fans are given the opportunity to see the stars who are only known by their voices over the air, in Republic's sparkling new comedy hit "Jamboree" which starts at the Capitol Theatre Sunday midnight. The cast of the picture includes such famous personalities of the airways as Freddie Fisher, and his Schnikelfritz Band, Ernest Tubb and his Texas Troubadors, Don Wilson famous announcer, Isabel Randolpy (Mrs. Uppington), Shirley Mitchell, Rufe Davis, George C. Shug Fisher and the Music Maids.

Lovely Ruth Terry, singing starlet, has the leading feminine role in the sprightly comedy, which brings the best in western mountain and swing music to the screen.

Playing opposite Miss Terry is handsome George Byron, Republic's recently discovered young leading man.

Shirley Mitchell, who is known to countless radio fans as the Alice Darling of the Fibber McGee and Molly show, and the Leila Ransome of the Great Gildersleeve program is seen for the first time on the screen in "Jamboree."

(Super Thriller)

A powerful and absorbing melodrama combining some very amusing comedy incidents, Paramount's "The Uninvited" due at the Capitol Theatre Sunday midnight as the added hit promises solid entertainment all the way through with stars Ray Milland, Ruth Hussey and Donald Crisp as a very capable acting trio.

Also to be seen in her first feature role is a delightful young actress, Gail Russell, whose charm and beauty have captured the hearts of fans who have already seen the picture. Milland and Hussey as the sister-brother team have made-to-order parts, it is said, and play them to absolute perfection. In the story, they purchase a haunted house, (not knowingly of course), from Donald Crisp, grandfather of Gail Russell in the film. The latter strenuously opposed to the sale, looms as the centre of attraction when weird goings-on turn the house into a place of horror.

Events move swiftly, thereafter, and as the tension of the plot increases, it is said the suspense is at such high pitch that gasps and even muffled screams from audiences is not uncommon.

Noted as a rugby player, bicycle and automobile racer as well as rower, early in the century, James Boswell, 70, died yesterday at his home in Winnipeg. He was credited with being the co-inventor of the tube skate.

KATAN, SEXTON IN MAIN BOUT

"These men claim never to have been defeated in a Belleville ring," prompted Promoter Frank Tunney as he signed Frank Sexton, the Pacific Coast wrestling champion, to meet John Katan, the Palermo Panther in the main bout of next Wednesday's all-star wrestling bout at the Hume Arena.

"On a few occasions Katan has been disqualified in Belleville for unnecessary roughness, but he contends he has never been actually defeated in the Hume Arena. Of course Sexton makes no denial of the fact he hasn't lost a bout in two years. Some promoters in the United States say Sexton is the perfect wrestler and we all know Katan with his panther-like attacks is no push-over in any wrestling ring so we give the fans Katan and Sexton for what I consider one of the best matched bouts ever to be staged in Belleville. It is big-time stuff," remarked Marse Tunney as he announced his main go to Arena Manager Walt Gerow.

To support this great battle Tunney added a return match between Pierre DeGlane and Nanjo Singh after the mad Hindu protested over last week's disqualification while to open hostilities it will be Bunny Dunlop versus Abe Zvonkin, the Hamilton rugby football star.

Futurity Finals Raced at Stratford

Stratford, Sept. 9 (CP)—Dillon Mc Jr., won the final heat of the $3,000 3-year-old Futurity trot and Goodwill Bill the final heat of the three-year-old Futurity pace here yesterday. Babe Grattan had captured the first two heats of the pacing event but finished fourth in the third yesterday. Goodwill Bill had finished third in the first heat and second in the second.

AUTHOR DENIES RUMORS

Paris, Sept. 6—(Delayed)—(CP)—P.G. Wodehouse, British humorist, who was severly critised for talks he made on the German radio in 1941 after his release from a German internment camp, declared yesterday that any reports that he had lived in luxury in Berlin and had been treated with favoritism by the Germans were "Pure lies."

SINKS ONE-MAN SUB

With Canadian forces in France, Sept. 9 — (AP) — Spitfire pilots smashed and sank a number of one-man midget submarines recently in Normandy coastal waters near the mouth of the Orne river. One airman said: "Apparently they cannot go below the surface for more than a minue or two. They bobbed up and down like porpoises."

BATTING TITLE NEARLY SEWED UP

New York, Sept. 9 (AP)—Mayo Smith, veteran outfielder of Buffalons, appears to have the International League batting championship sewed up.

After running neck and neck with teammate Eddie Kobesky for more than a month, Smith pulled away to a 13-point lead .334 to .321.

With only five games remaining, it is doubtful if Kobesky can overcome Smith's margin.

The other eight members of the big 10 were barely over the .300 mark, with Syracuse's Chico Rodrigues third with .308, Stan Benjamin of Baltimore and Jim Tyack of Toronto tied for fourth with .306, Castano, sixth with .305. Howard Moss of Baltimore seventh with .302, and Bobby Maier of Buffalo, Blas Monaco of Baltimore and Al Lakeman of Syracuse tied for eighth with .301.

Maier, Moss and Kobesky are running one-two-three in total hits with 171, 170 and 169 respectively. Monaco held a 10-run edge on Smith with 130 tallies to 120. Moss led Kobesky in runs batted in, 135 to 127, and was tied with his R. B. I. rival in home runs at 26.

Ken Brondell of Jersey City led the pitchers with a 13-and-5 won-and-lost record. Al Jarlett of Toronto and Walter Wilson of Buffalo have won the most games, 18.

LEAFS TO OPEN TRAINING OCT. 10

Toronto, Sept. 9 —(CP)— Toronto Maple Leafs will start their annual pre-season training for the National Hockey League Oct. 10th, it was announced last night. Venue of training headquarters, however, was not announced.

For several seasons Leafs have conducted pre-season workouts at St. Catharines, Ont. An official of Maple Leaf Gardens said announcement of the location "will come from the community acting as host to the 1944-45 training squad."

Coach Clarence (Hap) Day said "at the moment" the only member of last year's club definitely lost to Leafs is Jackie Hamilton, who is in the Canadian navy. He added that Dave (Sweeney) Schriner, of Calgary, former star with Leafs, would return this season to bolster the team.

CHAPTER 15

But I couldn't for long. Something hard and sharp was sticking me in the rear. I thought. I've been stabbed, too—and of all places! I gave a great heave and wrench, rolling over and away from whatever was prodding me, and sat up. I began to feel around in back of me for a knife. But there was none. My fingers closed instead over a sharp-toothed rock! I did not pick it up.

Stumbling blindly to my feet,I staggered down the long corridor, knees buckling at every step. I landed against Mother's and Dad's door, my fingers found the knob blindly—and I almost fell into their room. Mother instantly awoke, sprang up in bed—and then leapt out of it. Her face was fright-white over her chin strap. Dad had me in his arms the next moment, and mercifully I fainted.

It was almost eight a.m. when I came to and was able to tell my parents and the hotel's physician—Dr. John Redmond—what had happened.

"Dad and I looked in on you at one-thirty," Mother remarked miserably. "You were sleeping like a babe."

Father said: "From now on, until this horrible mess is cleared up, we'll all sleep in the same room. Why the intruder didn't finish you off, Lord knows! But, thank God, you're still living!"

"And thank our next door neighbor, too," I put in. "You know how that liquor-loving gent gets on a binge a couple of nights each week, always misses his door, and tries his key on ours. I think that's what he was doing last night, and the sound of his key in our lock scared the murderer away. When I heard that key I thought it was you and Mother coming in from the party But since you were already home, it couldn't have been anyone else but our neighbor—Lord bless him!"

"Letty, was the slugger a man or a woman?" Dad asked.

"I haven't the faintest idea. I'm inclined to think it was a woman, though. That shadow was so silent, so stealthy—and in a way, graceful. Yes, I think the murderer is a woman."

Dr. Redmond began to be morbidly technical then, saying that if I had been struck a little more to the left, a little bit lower at the base of the brain—in fact, if I'd been struck almost any other place—I would have been served up to the newspapers this morning as the latest Public Corpse.

"But you don't even have a concussion," he declared. "A day in bed, quiet, something to steady nerves, and I'll guarantee you'll be yourself again."

"I don't want to be myself again," I said, and felt the screaming meemies returning. "I want to be.... someone the murderer isn't after! Then I added,"Dad, I was hit with a rock—just like Pamela!"

"I know, Letty," he said. I found it in your room. We haven't touched it. Finger-prints, you know. Look dear, do you feel strong enough to talk with Sergeant Hornblower? I think he ought to know about this attack."

Sitting up in Mother's bed craning my neck toward the window, I agreed, and sank back on the pillows weakly.

The Homicide specialist came over instantly, and for the first time I think he was almost convinced that I wasn't the murderer. But only after Dr. Redmond told him patiently and repeatedly that my head wound couldn't have been self-inflicted. It was a physical impossibility.

"But if this young woman was in cahoots with a confederate—a brain doctor or someone else who knew just where to hit her on the head to knock her out witout killing her. That's possible, isn't it?" the Sergeant inquired.

"Well, yes," answered the doctor "I suppose so. But it seems a bit farfetced."

"Not if the hot seat was waiting for them and they knew it."

"The hot seat, sir?"

"The electric chair." explained Hornblower.

"Oh, I see. Well I still say it's farfetched. Perhaps it could have been like that," said Dr. Redmond nervously. And right there before my eyes I saw Sergeant Hornblower mentally listing the wizened little gray-haired doctor as a suspect.

"Live here at the hotel, Doctor?" he asked, showing all his piano-key teeth in a wide smile.

"Yes, I do."

"I've seen you over at the Keith house a lot lately, haven't I?"

"Yes, I have a patient over there: Mr.Luke Cramer. He had the flu, strep throat. I treated him and, though his temperature is now almost normal, he has definite symptons of rheumatic fever; stiffness in his joints, in the base of his neck. His pulse is rapid...."The little doctor tried to make us understand that he'd done his best to force Luke Cramer to realize that bed was the only place for him which accounted for his frequent visits to the house.

"But he won't stay in bed," Dr. Redmond finally said and waved his hands in a gesture that dismissed any responsibility for his patient's future health. Then he wiped his brow shakily with a handkerchief, obviously hoping he'd convinced the Law of his legitimate connection with the Keith house.

I believed the doctor, and I think the Sergeant did, too, when he dismissed him politely.

"Now, you, Miss Randolph," Hornblower began, drawing up a that bed would be the only..'o-lumberously...and in the next five minutes I was to learn something that would be electrifying.

"Now, Miss Randolph," Sergeant Hornblower began, "suppose you tell me everything about that attack on you last night or rather early today. Every detail, please."

When I'd finished, some plainclothes men came in, asked where my room was, and went down the hall to take pictures and dust for fingerprints. When they finally departed they had the rock with them, and I knew somehow, that it would be as free from incriminating prints as the other had been. I told Hornblower that, and he said, "Yep, I guess you're right. I made a mistake. I should have had someone watching that rock garden. I might have guessed the murderer would strike again, and that he or she might use a rock."

"You — you KNEW where the rock that killed Pamela came from?" I asked, eyes wide.

"Sure! That's how I knew it was a premeditated murder."

"Oh," I gulped and wondered what else the police knew.

"I'll have someone watching that rock garden from now on, you can bet your life," he stressed, and immediately looked as if he wanted to recall his words.

I said quickly, "Sergeant Hornblower, I'm NOT the murderer. I won't tell anyone you're having the garden watched."

He gave me a look which said quite plainly: Tell anyone, young lady, and I'll tear your ears off! Then he turned and left me.

I got out a pad and pencil at once and checked the names of every suspect in the case.... After a half hour or so I decided it was no go. I put the chart under my pillow, closed my eyes and let the sedative do its work.

After my nap I realized that I simply had to learn what the police knew about Pamela Keith's murder. But how to do that? How? I thought of Clem Barkley on the Tribune. Clem is a rough-and-ready, hard-working guy with a mop of crew-cut, bristling red hair freckles and a wide mouth. He was born down in Washington's Foggy Bottom and doesn't give a hoot who knows it. But he's got printer's ink in his blood, digs up and writes news with zest and skill of a big-time reporter. Remembering that Clem had often worked hand-in-glove with the police and, judging from some of the stuff he was writing now about Pamela's murder, I decided Barkley was back in he old role again. Still, it would be like prying up the Washington Monument with a toothpick to get Clem to talk about news he was developing himself. But I might try....

Friday is Clem's night off, so at four-thirty I phoned him at the paper and said very, very sweetly: "Clem, I miss you! "I'm never going to take another vacation."

I could hear his big feet clattering down off the desk and hitting the floor.

"Say-y what is this?"

"I've missed you, Clem" I cooed. "Missed you terribly."

"So what's this line?"

"So-o-o-o, I want to see you, Clem."

"Well, I don't want to see you, red-head! And don't start hollering around town about how you miss me. Get it?" he snapped — and clapped up the telephone.

I got it. I stood there counting to a thousand before calling him back and starting in all over again. This time Clem was less hard-boiled. Soon he asked, "So you want to see me, eh?"

I nearly fell through the telephone saying yes. Then I told him that Ginny Both was having a supper at eight tonight, and I thought it would be simply swell if we tooted over to the affair together. Clem thought so too....

We arrived at the pary at eight. And at midnight, what with fish-house punch and dancing, things were going swell. Half of Ginny's guests were being noisily sociable, and the other half, quietly intimate, I thought it was time Clem and I quit being noisily sociable if I were to get anywhere with my investigaion.

We were dancing at that point to the tune of Frenesi near the French doors leading to the sun-parlor, I stopped and said, "My it looks cosy out there." It did look cosy. Too cosy!

I caught Clem by the hand and lured him out on the porch. In front of a wicker sofa, I gave him a coy little push and down on the chintz cushions he sprawled. I plunked down beside him, spreading my satin skirt fanwise so he wouldn't get too close, or too quietly intimate. Then I began, "Clem, this is — marvelous! I've missed you so-o-o-o."

"Say-y, you're really all right, Letty," said he beaming. "You're tops! Funny, but up until tonight I'd detested you for the dizziest little damsel in the social register."

"Guess I'm not just one of those men-chasing girls," I demurred softly.

"Yeah? Then you're Exhibit A, very rare," said Clem. "Nevertheless, you'll marry, Letty Randolph. Maybe you'll even marry me."

That thought having entered his flaming head, he reached out an arm and drew me close to him.

"Maybe," I said, wistfully, "if I live long enough. I'm worried about that. You know, Clem, the murderer of Pamela Keith is after me. I'm afraid he—or she—thinks I know too much."

Barkley was all news-alert at that moment. He listened to my tale of the bedroom attack and called Roger Hornblower a low-down, double-crossing, son - of - a-Nazi. "That dumbo didn't mention any of this to me," snorted Clem.

"I guess he doesn't mention much to you, does he?"

"What-do-you-mean? We're just like—Frank and Winnie!—pardon that simile if you must."

"More like Adolph and Mussy," I countered.

Clem lifted the back of his hand as if o slap me. Instead, he touched my cheek gently and murmured, "Say-y, you are cute! Pretty too. Funny but up until tonight I never noticed how pretty you are."

Never before had Clem and I been together in such quiet intimacy. Never before had he been with me when he'd been testing the potentest fish-house punch ever poured. ...I decided I'd better start cruising our romantic barge down another stream.

"Who do you think murdered Pamela Keith, Clem?" I asked, not as if I were really interested but just wanting something to talk about.

"Want me to tell you?" he said.

"Surely I do," and held my breath.

"So you want to know who murdered Pamela Keith eh?" Clem asked again. "Well, it could have been any one of a number of people. Marvin Eustace or Earl Pines. Victor Corliss."

"All of them together?" I gasped. "You mean a murder syndicate?"

"Nuts!" growled Clem. "I mean, take your choice."

"But why?" I asked.

"Well take that Eustace guy. I read a letter he wrote to Pam Keith on the Thursday before she was killed, It went something like this: ALL RIGHT. GO AHEAD AND DO IT. I SUPPOSE I CAN'T STOP YOU. BUT IF YOU DO, I'LL KILL YOU. REMEMBER THAT. I HAPPEN TO LOVE MY WIFE, YOU KNOW."

"What in the world was that all about?"

"Wouldn't you like to know?" said Clem mysteriously, and I doubted if he knew himself.

"And Earle Pines?" I probed.

"Pamela Keith coughed up twenty-five grand to Pines, then stopped payment on the check. If a dame did that to me, I'd be tempted to—nearly kill her."

"Was he blackmailing Pamela, do you think?"

"I don't think. Your guess is as good as mine."

"And—Victor Corliss?"

"Vic was seen telephoning someone from the lobby of The Charlton-Arms. A bellhop coming on night duty around ten saw him. Saw him go out of the back door of the hotel, too. Maybe along with Sandra Keith to help, Vic did in Pamela. Vic swears that neither he nor Sandra killed Pam, which is natural enought. But it's a mighty fishy set-up. Vic and Sandra were separated from each other at the country club for over an hour and a half. Either could have murdered Pam. Or they could have done it together. Who's your choice, Letty?"

"Oh-h, Dr. Wayne Courtey, I guess. Mother and I both think he did it."

"What you base it on?" asked Clem.

"Intuition. Woman's."

"Bosh!" exclaimed Clem. "If courts were run on intuition everyone would be hanged electrocuted, jailed or shot. Oh, Justice, when banished from other habitations, make woman's intuition the dwelling place."

Clem and I talked about the suspects then. Two colored housemen had supported Reginald's alibi of the murder, And Elsie Eustace, Gladys Newcomb, Luke Cramer Peter Gibson, and Countess Panella Castigena were out of the picture, according to Clem.

"That Gibson guy was Hornblower's suspect Grade-A for a day or two," Clem went on, "But Gibson had an alibi, too. He had dinner with a local lawyer at the Charlton-Arms at seven o'clock and, when finished, they went into the cocktail lounge, had a couple of drinks while they wound up some business deal. The lawyer left just as a Miss Stellita Carlisle came to keep her date with Gibson, and Miss Carlisle and Gibson sat there drinking until a little after eleven. Gibson took the dame home, came back to the hotel and was strolling about the grounds, smoking, when he heard your screams. Iron-bound alibi for murder time. Checked by police. All in order. Barman, dining-room waiters, bellhops, cigarette girl, the lawyer and Miss Carlisle. He couldn't have done it.

"Same wiht the Cramer fellow. He was in Philadelphia, sick in bed all day Saturday with the flu. Got up and dressed at five-thirty, planning to catch the six o'clock plane for Washington. Made it as far as the taxi-stand in front of his hotel took the taxi to the doctor's instead of to the air-port. Had his throat mopped up and went back to the hotel to bed. Got to worrying about letting Pamela Keith down on his promise to spend the weekend in Washington, thought he'd make an effort to go. Got dressed about nine-thirty, planning to take the ten o'clock plane, made it as far as the lobby, called Pam, told her he was just too sick to travel and beat it back to bed. Acutely sick about midnigh, doc came over and gave him a hypo to make him sleep. He was just drifting off when Sandra phoned.... Alibi checked all around. Same with the Countess. No motive, and besides she's not fleet enough of foot."

Lady Carson Dies in Kingston

Kingston, Sept. 9 (CP) — Lady Carson, the former Dorothy Brownfield, wife of Sir Frederick Carson C.B.E., M.C., Kingston, died in the hospital here Friday after a brief illness.

She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Brownfield, the former manager of the Bank of British North America. She accompanied her husband to India after his graduation from the Royal Military College and remained there until 1940 when she returned to Canada, while her husband took over war duties with the British army.

Sir Frederick was knighted by King George VI in 1941 for distinguished service with the North Western Railway, India, of which he was the general manager at the time.

Lady Carson upon her return to Kingston was active in community work. She was Regent of Prince Charlie Chapter I.O.D.E. and was associated with the activities at St. George Cathedral. She is survived by her husband, three sons, all graduates of R.M.C., who are now on active service, with the Canadian and British armies.

Capital Closeups

By JAMES McCOOK

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 9 —(CP)— Although Ottawa is far from scenes of derring-do in war it read with a touch of envy the news that the lights are going on again in the United Kingdom.

The capital has been under a dim-out for nearly two years, with no more street lights than are essential, the main purpose being power conservation rather than the fear of enemy attack. There is little prospect of the restrictions being lifted soon.

The city had prided itself on the standards and searchlights which made the best of its towers and monuments, but at one dismal stage, when there were suggestions hostile aircraft might try suicide raids on Canada, even the lights on Parliament Hill were blacked out.

On wintry evenings members of parliament made their hesitant way down the long icy steps leading to the main entrance of the buildings. They did not like it, and soon some of the lighting standards and the face of the clock on the Peace Tower came back to life after dark.

Ducky-Wacky.

A major lunching in an Ottawa restaurant lost a trace of his army calm when he was served with a restaurant cup of coffee bearing the rhyme: "Little Bo Peep has lost her sheep and doesn't know where to find them."

The restaurant explained that a shortage of cups made it necessary to use those usually reserved for children, and they couldn't do a thing about it.

Nobody's Fault.

The expert gardeners and farmers at the Dominion Government's Experimental Farm cannot speak of the lawns there without blushes. Usually they are an example for all the world to see, green and rich. This year they are a tired brown and the imposing array of flowers sometimes looks wilted.

In January the 25,000-gallon water tower at the farm was destroyed by fire and normal water services have been insufficient to maintain the pressure required to cover all the farm. But now money has been voted for a 100,000-gallon tank.

CANADIAN GENERAL LOOKS PLEASED

Lieut.-General Guy Simonds, Commander of the Second Canadian Corps, has the smile of victory on his lips as he watches his Canadian armor make their first tank crossing of the Seine. With him is A.D.C. Capt. Larry Stearns, Toronto.—(Canadian Army Overseas Photo.)

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop and ma went to a party last night, and this morning at breakfast ma said, Well William, to give credit where credit is due, I must admit you looked distinguished as compared to the rest of the men present last night, not that I want to make you feel self conscious.

Spread it on, my dear, I flatter myself that I can take an honest tribute in my stride, pop said. I dont set myself up as a second Lord Chesterfield or a third Sir Walter Rawley, but I think I can say without blushing that I can hold my own in any ordinary mob of common people, he said, and ma said, Well I should say you can, and besides. you were so much cleverer and more witty than those other men. Why, you made the rest of them sound like mere parrits without cages, she said.

Oh, you noticed it? pop said. I've often been told that I should of been a professional after dinner speaker, one of those chaps that just stand up without notes and sparkle for a half an hour without stopping, he said, and ma said, I was thinking to myself last night as I sat there watching those people being impressed by your grand words and manner, what a dissappointing shock they would of had if they knew you couldn't even permorm such a simple little act as shaving yourself without leaving the bathroom in a perfect shambles.

Mere superstition, pop said. Any man neeter than I am must be a born old maid, he said, and ma said, Oh dear, a man can swallow the heaviest compliments without moving a mussel, but at the lightest criticism he brissles all over.

You wrong me, I only brissle around the ears, pop said.

Meaning the only places where his hair is still staying on, and proving ma was right about him saying smart things.

Pte. A. LaBarge Fought in Italy And Sicily Drive

Bancroft, Sept. 9 — Private Archie LaBarge, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank LaBarge of Faraday Township, spent a few days this week with relatives and friends in Bancroft. Private LaBarge enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in the spring of 1940 going overseas in September 1941. He trained in England up until the time of the Sicilian invasion when he was attached to the vehicle transport of the regiment. From Sicily he went into action into Italy on September 3rd, 1943, and was in action on the Italian front until June 26th, 1944. During his term of action in Italy he particularly recalls the battle of the Moro river, in which many of the Bancroft boys took a part. It was in this skirmish that he slid down an embankment from his motorcycle in order to miss enemy shell fire and as a result was laid up in hospital with torn ligaments to his legs. Private LaBarge, now, makes his home in Toronto where his wife and two children welcomed him on his return from Italy on August 19th, 1944. He has a thirty-day leave and on its expiration will return to his regiment overseas.

CHURCHILL AND ROOSEVELT ARRIVE IN QUEBEC
BRITISH ARMOR CROSSES INTO HOLLAND

Meet on Station Platform Before Going to Citadel

Both Look Fit, Cheerful As They Chat About War

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Sept. 11 (CP) — President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill met on a station platform at historic Wolfe's Cove today as their staffs made ready for the second Quebec war conference.

Both looked fit and cheerful as they chatted enthusiastically about the trend of war events, Mr. Roosevelt sitting in an open car and Mr. Churchill leaning in the door, foot on the running board and cigar in hand.

After a short informal chat they drove off to the citadel where they will live and work for the duration of the conference. The Earl of Athlone drove with the President and the British Prime Minister and Prime Minister Mackenzie King followed in another car.

Mr. Churchill looked fit and cheerful despite a few days' sickness crossing the Atlantic.

Mr. Roosevelt disembarked from his special train—which had spent a few hours waiting on the siding—a few minutes before Mr. Churchill's train pulled in. During their conversation Mr. Churchill was heard to mention "France" and to remark that things were "lovely."

Informal Welcome

It was a hearty and informal welcome the two leaders received from Quebec City and Canadian officialdom at Wolfe's Cove as bright sunshine bathed the overhanging cliffs which Wolfe's British soldiers climbed by night to fight and win Canada in the morning.

Chiefs of staff of the Canadian armed services, representatives of the King, cabinet ministers and newspapermen mingled in a crowd on the station platform. Sir Eugene Fiset, Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, and Premier Maurice Duplessis were there. So were Air Minister Power and Justice Minister St. Laurent, Quebec City's two representatives in the Federal cabinet.

Mr. King, with the Governor-General and Princess Alice, went aboard the presidential train. Shortly after they came out and Mr. Roosevelt emerged to enter his automobile which was waiting on a specially-built ramp. A cheer went up.

Churchill Has Familiar Cigar

As Mr. Roosevelt took his seat in the automobile a second long train steamed slowly in and Mr. King hurried over to enter Mr. Churchill's car at the rear. He came out with Mr. and Mrs. Churchill and another cheer went up.

Mr. Churchill wore a blue pea-jacket, peaked cap and a bow tie. Mrs. Churchill wore a dark grey suit. A freshly-lighted cigar was in Mr. Churchill's mouth and he puffed hard to keep it going while giving a "V" sign with his hand.

Then he strolled across a couple of railway tracks, stepping carefully on the rough ballast to the president's automobile.

The Earl of Athlone came up and shook hands and the Prime Minister interrupted his talk with the President. He was heard to say there were three beautiful days on board the troopship which carried him to Halifax but that he had been "frightfully sick."

The Governor-General told him the sun would do him good and he agreed. Despite his illness Mr. Churchill seemed healthy and appeared stronger than when he met with Prime Minister Mackenzie King and other Commonwealth prime ministers in London last May.

Help Photographers

Mr. Roosevelt wore a soft Panama hat, a dark blue suit and a bow tie. Both he and the British Prime Minister smiled, joked and readily complied with the shouted instructions of press photographers who crowded around.

Members of Mr. Churchill's staff said the Prime Minister remained in his stateroom practically all the way across the Atlantic and spent much time working. He saw little of the few civilian passengers and the servicemen who travelled with him.

He made himself popular with American servicemen, however, by intervening with the President to get them an extension of leave.

(MEET—Page 2)

Churchill Given Warm Welcome At Halifax

Halifax, Sept. 11 — (CP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill sped toward Quebec and his new conference with President Roosevelt today, after receiving a Halifax welcome that outdid anything seen here since the Royal visit five years ago.

Hundreds of Haligonians cheered and serenaded a happy prime minister and his wife for an hour yesterday afternoon as they waited at the dockside for a special train to pull out after arriving here from Britain aboard a big troop-laden transport.

Puffing away at the inevitable big cigar, wisecracking with the crowd, leading it in one song after another, Churchill apparently enjoyed himself thoroughly in the welcome after waving aside the scores of guards who were on hand to keep the throngs away.

The sea-loving war leader, looking pink-cheeked and fit after his ocean voyage, grinned with pleasure through the reception, acknowledging salvos of cheers with wide smiles and a continuous series of V-signs or waves from a cigar-laden fist.

In response to a call for a speech, he talked briefly to the gathering, saying that he had been here before but never "when the skies were brighter or when the invincible march of our forces has been more swiftly and inevitably directed toward its goal."

The crowd delighted in it. They even cheered the bulky prime minister when he sat down on a train step, pulled out his horn-rimmed spectacles and read the first newspaper he had seen since leaving Britain.

DOVER SHELLED FOUR HOURS

Dover, England, Sept. 11 —(CP)—German long-range guns on the French coast shelled this area for four hours during the night. The Nazis trapped in the Calais and Cap Gris Nez area kept huge searchlights playing over the Channel, as though they were expecting an Allied assault from the sea.

Actual Winter Conditions Are Used To Test Clothing and Equipment

Ottawa, Sept. 11 (CP)—As a result of experiments conducted last winter under the supervision of Canadian scientists, the clothing and equipment of Canada's armed forces will be more comforting and more serviceable in sub-zero weather.

The experiments were carried out at four different points in Canada in an attempt to determine the value of every possible item of equipment.

About 1,000 men from the Canadian forces were used in many of the experiments, and in one of them a group of soldiers broke the ice on the Saskatchewan river to test what type of boot would best repel the cold and damp.

The men stepped into the numbing water on a day when the temperature had dropped to 25 below zero. They paddled ponderously about and then stood inactive on the shore for an hour before resuming a 15-mile trek to Prince Albert, Sask.

Their reactions told the committee more about the type of clothing and equipment necessary for comfort and serviceability in sub-zero weather than a thousand experiments conducted in an artificial ice-house, the army said in press release.

Other experiments will be carried on this winter, the army said, even though the Russian army was the only Allied force in this war to have to fight in severe cold.

CORVETTE ALBERNI REPORTED SUNK; 31 SURVIVORS

Sunk on Invasion Duties and is 18th Warship Lost By Canada in War

59 MEN MISSING

Ottawa, Sept. 11 —(CP)— The corvette Alberni, veteran of the battle of the Atlantic and the invasion of North Africa, has been sunk while on invasion duties with four officers and 55 ratings missing, Navy Minister Macdonald announced today.

There were 31 survivors—three officers and 28 ratings—including Lt.-Cmdr. Ian H. Bell, Vancouver, who commanded the battle-tried warship during the last two years.

Mr. Macdonald's announcement gave no details of the latest naval loss which came three weeks after it was announced that the corvette Regina went down while on invasion duties.

The Alberni is the 18th warship and the eighth corvette lost by the Canadian navy in this war.

An action-filled career of more than three years lay behind the Alberni when she slipped to the bottom in invasion waters. During that time she had been officially credited with one "probable" U-boat sinking in the North Atlantic and had been present at numerous other sub hunts.

One of the first Western Canadian corvettes assigned to escort duties, Alberni was built at Esquimalt, B.C., in 1940 and was commissioned Feb. 3, 1941.

Along with other western built corvettes, she was transferred to the east coast in the spring of 1941.

She was on duty in the Atlantic during the height of Germany's attempt to cut the northern lifeline to Britain.

U-boats savagely attacked the convoys but they fought back and saw U-boats sunk. The worst night of all, however, was in the fall of 1942, according to the ship's executive officer, Lieut. Malcolm S. Grant, Brockville, Ont., now reported missing. During that night the heavy thud of torpedo explosions was heard a half dozen times and ships went down on all sides.

Alberni saved 92 men from the tossing seas. The weather was too rough for a lifeboat to be lowered and survivors were helped up from rafts, boats and wreckage by using scramble nets.

Months later, the Alberni again picked up survivors, but this time it was on a calm, clear night near the entrance to the Mediterranean. Boats were lowered and with the aid of searchlights 54 merchant seamen were saved.

Alberni's probable marine sinking came during the first years of her service. She attacked a U-boat and depth charges brought up oil and debris, but the sub did not surface and no prisoners were taken.

She was present on three occasions when sister ships made definite kills. Her crew, when she was in the Mediterranean, saw Ville de Quebec bring a U-boat to the surface with depth charges, rake it with gunfire, ram it and sink it—all in nine minutes.

Welcome to Canada

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL

SAY GOERDELER LEADER IN PLOT AGAINST HITLER

Nazis Declare Plotters Had Planned to Make Him Chancellor

CONVICT GOERDELER

By JAMES F. KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 11. (AP)—Dr. Karl Friedrich Goerdeler, 60-year-old former mayor of Leipzig, was identified by the Nazis today as a ringleader in the plot to assassinate Hitler last July 20 and the man selected by the plotters to become chancellor of a new German government.

The announcement of Goerdeler's alleged part in the plot was made in a Berlin broadcast disclosing that he and six other "politicians" have been convicted by a people's court and sentenced to death. An indefinite number of alleged conspirators—including some high-ranking military men—already have been executed.

The six convicted with Goerdeler were named as Ulrich von Hassell former Nazi ambassador to Rome; Count Wolf Hendrick von Helldorf, former police chief in Berlin; Trott Zu Solz, former secretary in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; Paul Lejeune-Jung, a former deputy; Wilhelm Leuschner, former Hessian Minister of the Interior; Josef Wirmer, an attorney.

Goerdeler, former German minister of Economics, "worked out the plans of treason and it was he who formed the bridge between the militarist traitors and political conspirators", the German News Agency Transocean said.

Goerdeler Captured.

Goerdeler was captured after a price of 1,000,000 marks (about $400,000) had been placed on his head.

The conspirators intended immediately after the assassination to set up a dictatorship "which would have immediately capitulated to the enemies of Germany", the Agency said.

Leuschner played with the idea of overthrowing Goerdeler and making himself Reichschancellor", the Agency added.

Von Hassell was reported to have confessed that he knew since the spring of 1943 that an attempt was to be made on Hitler's life.

Wirmer was "violently opposed to Hitler and National Socialist Germany and continually pressed Goerdeler to speed up the action", Transocean asserted.

Zu Stolz was said to have made frequent trips to Germany "for the purpose of discussing German military secrets with enemies of Germany", and all seven of the accused were declared to have had "connections with foreign powers since 1942".

Count Helldorf was described as a "liaison man between Goerdeler's political group and the military faction led by Col.-Gen. Ludwig Beck, one of the generals reported to have paid the death penalty for complicity in the plot. Helldorf as head of the Berlin police directed many of the repressive actions against the Jews in the early days of the Hitler regime.

NAZI RESISTANCE ON GOTHIC LINE HOLDING ALLIES

5th Army Forces Reach Gothic Line Farther West Due to Withdrawals

NEARING PISTOIA

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(A.P. War Correspondent)

Rome, Sept. 11 (AP) — Fierce German resistance is holding the British 8th. Army offensive against the Gothic Line to a standstill, Allied headquarters said today.

Taking advantage of the enemy's preoccupation with large-scale, bloody fighting to stem the 8th. Army's drive for Rimini and the avenue into the Po Valley, Allied 5th. Army forces followed a German withdrawal north and northwest of Florence and reached the Gothic Line farther west.

On the five-mile front between Coriano and Gemmano, a short distance inland from the coast, the fighting in which the 8th. is engaged is still "heavy and bitter, with casualties on both sides heavy," a headquarters statement said.

Field Marshal Kesselring was still striking back with frequent counter-attacks, but failed to knock the British or Canadian forces off any of the ground won at so great a cost in the past weeks.

Indians Capture High Ground

South of Gemmano the British drove the Nazis from a 600-foot peak and Indian troops captured other high ground 1,000 yards north of Piano Di Castello.

Some 5th. Army units, headquarters said, reached Uselle, 17 miles northwest of Florence and only 35 miles south of the great Po Valley industrial city and communications centre of Bologna.

Further west American troops pushed well into the outskirts of Pistoia and occupied high ground dominating the town from the northeast while other elements reached the Gothic Line defences at Zazzera, 6½ miles northeast of Lucca.

Presumably content to wait until they get back into the northern Apennines, where the terrain is ideal for defence, the Nazis offered scant opposition to the 5th. Army although some enemy shells fell on patrols which took Monte Mignano, 13 miles due north of Florence.

CHURCH PAID POSTAGE

Daytona Beach, Fla., Sept. 11 — (AP) — Rev. C. E. Jackson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here, closed his Bible yesterday and told the congregation to "Preach your own sermon." Writing material was furnished and each member of the congregation was asked to spend 15 minutes writing a letter to a serviceman overseas. The church paid postage.

150,000 LANDED FIRST DAY

Paris, Sept. 11 — (AP) — The first day of the Normandy invasion 150,000 men were landed, Navy Minister Louis Jacquinot disclosed yesterday. The French navy now has 53,000 men and several hundred warships, including two battleships, six modernized cruisers, four light cruisers, 100 torpedo boats and 20 submarines and will end the war as a formidable force, he declared.

130 HUN PLANES SHOT DOWN IN GREAT AIR BATTLE

Luftwaffe Comes To Life When Thousand Bombers Hit At Germany

LE HAVRE SHELLED

(By HOWARD COWAN)
(AP Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 11. (AP) — United States fighters escorting 1,000 heavy bombers attacking oil plants in Germany today shot down 130 enemy planes in the greatest air battle ever fought over Germany between American fighters and the Luftwaffe.

Only yesterday, the American fighters destroyed 125 German planes but 119 were caught on the ground in Western Germany. Today's bag made the two-day total 255.

It was the fourth consecutive day in which 1,000 or more American bombers had attacked Germany. The Continental skies were saturated by R.A.F. and United States planes rising from bases in England, Italy, North and South France.

Le Havre Hit.

A great fleet of R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavy bombers smashed at Le Havre, just before that vital Channel port came under assault by British troops of the 1st Canadian Army. It was the second straight day in which Canadian bombers had joined the aerial pounding of Le Havre, and all of them returned safely.

American losses were not immediately tabulated. A spokesman of the United States 8th Air Force said the 130 planes destroyed still was an incomplete count, but already a record bag for fighters. German planes destroyed by the bombers still were to be added.

800-Fighter Escort.

Approximately 800 fighters formed the escort. Between 200 and 300 fighters previously had been used in Rhineland attacks.

The United States heavy bombers attacked Merseburg, Lutzkendorf and Misburg a few hours after R.A.F. Mosquitos had created fresh havoc in Berlin.

A great fleet of R.A.F. heavy bombers pounded Le Havre, under attack by British forces of the 1st Canadian Army.

It appeared likely that more than 5,000 tons of bombs would be cast on the Germans during the day, as on Sunday.

Weather permitted visual bombing at the cities named. Other heavy bombers struck at unidentified objectives hidden by cloud banks.

In ideal weather, bombs and bullets were thrown at German land power wherever it could be found.

Mosquitos bombed Berlin before dawn.

Reports of short and long-range destruction of German installations came in almost faster than tabulations could be made.

British bombers rained tons of explosives on Le Havre, which was shelled yesterday by 300 rounds of 15-inch shells from the guns of the Royal Navy battleship Warspite and the monitor Erebus.

How Intricate Magic of Bombing Is Woven To Aid Infantry, Tanks

By DOUG HOW
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians on the Adriatic Front, Sept. 11 — (CP) — The Canadian infantry and the British tanks were plugging along over the hills that lie a few miles inland from the Adriatic. Overhead the planes kept droning and humming.

The soldiers were waging their war of basic, uncomplicated things like bayonets and slit trenches and enemy shells. The planes were working as part of the involved, intricate magic of the machine that backs them up. "Blasted Blue One" was in one of the planes and he was talking to "Rover David." It was 11:25. Their conversation went like this:

R. D.—"I have a target for you. In strip D. square C33. The square is on the extreme edge of the Pesaro map." B.B.—"Received." R.D.—"There is a house south of the road, at the northeast corner of the square where it crosses the northern edge. Bomb the house. It's a command post. B. B.—"Target at nine o'clock."

R.D.—"Have you got it? In between the fork of two roads. Go ahead and bomb. B.B.—"I'm going down." It was 11:29.

B.B.—"Is that right? R.D.—"Hang on. I can't see for the smoke." B.B.—"I've finished bombing. I'm going down for a recce . . . The house was damaged but not destroyed."

Another "cab rank" patrol over the Canadian and Polish sectors was over. Blasted Blue One and his flight of Mustang or Kittyhawk divebombers headed for home. In a few minutes another flight would group themselves above the battlefield and wait for Rover David to give them a target.

Penetration Made 14 Miles North Of Albert Canal

All-Out Assault Opened On Great Port of Le Havre

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Sept. 11 — (AP) — British armor burst into Holland today.

The penetration was made 14 miles north of the broken Albert Canal defence line in Belgium.

The United States 1st Army fought its way into the first barrage zones and minefield of the Siegfried Line within 10 miles of German soil east of Liege.

The American advance was in the tiny Duchy of Luxembourg.

American medium and dive bombers knocked out six big German gun emplacements blocking the path of the United States 3rd Army in the Moselle Basin. They bombed German headquarters at Metz.

Back along the channel coast, British troops of the 1st Canadian Army opened an all-out assault on the great port of Le Havre late yesterday, and by this morning had seized high ground northeast and north of the port in heavy fighting, a front dispatch said.

Run Into Minefields

The soldiers under Lt.-Gen. Crerar ran into heavy mine-fields and were under shellfire from coastal emplacements north of the port. The attack was preceded by a heavy bombardment by R. A. F. planes, which began at dusk.

The Americans, hurling shells into German soil for the first time, were reported bombarding Aachen, German border city guarded by Siegfried line forts.

Radio broadcasts from Brussels said the British 2nd Army had crossed the Netherlands frontier for the first time "although earlier reports put them there last week."

The crossing apparently was on the road to Eindhoven from one of the British bridgeheads 25 to 35 miles east of Antwerp.

An Associated Press dispatch said British troops had stormed across the Schelde-Meuse canal, last water barrier before the Netherlands frontier, after a large-scale three-day battle around Bourg-Leopold and Bechtel north of the Albert Canal in which 12,000 prisoners were taken and more Germans killed in one day than any time since the 200-mile march from Normandy.

Canadians Enter Zeebrugge

Luxembourg, a coal-iron centre of 58,000 fell to a U.S. 1st. Army column driving through the little country on a 10-mile assault front.

On the coast 1st. Canadian Army troops entered the Belgian port of Zeebrugge unopposed and were within six miles of The Netherlands frontier. Zeebrugge, fifteen miles northeast of already-captured Oostende (Ostende), has a good harbor.

In the campaign to liquidate German pockets in the French Channel ports of Calais and Boulogne, the Canadians drove to the coast at Wissant, between the two cities.

In Northern Belgium the British 2nd. Army gouged out gains across the Albert Canal at two bridgeheads yesterday. It was reported that German troops were brought in from Denmark to oppose the British drive, which is being aided by a Netherlands brigade.

The British finally won Gent, 30 miles southwest of Antwerp and 20 miles south of the mouth of the Schelde and the Poles drove close to the southern edge of Brugge to the west.

Reduce Pocket

The pocket south of the Schelde thus was cut down to a strip about 50 miles long and only fifteen to twenty miles wide, and into this sack and a few coastal ports was compressed all that remained of 120,000 Germans once estimated caught in the area.

The tenacity of German suicide garrisons in the shell and bomb-spattered dock towns of Dunkirk, Calais, Boulogne and Le Havre, however, still forced the Allies to feed their far-extended assault from supply ports and beaches far to the south and west.

Le Havre was brought under a combined land artillery, air bombing and naval bombardment when the British battleship Warspite and the monitor Erebus sent hundreds of big shells bursting in the town.

Bombers dumped 5,000 tons on the Nazi garrison.

North of the Duchy of Luxembourg the left wing of the U. S. 1st. Army fanned out in a great semicircle beyond the fallen Belgian fortress of Liege. It reached the Albert Canal north of Hasslet and its position there was bolstered by the British 2nd. Army's fight for Bourg-Leopold. The British have another Albert Canal bridgehead near Geel.

A front dispatch said the British had advanced nine miles from their Beeringen bridgehead. This would put them beyond Bourg-Leopold.

NAZIS ANNOUNCE WITHDRAWAL FROM TOWN OF KROSNO

South Poland Fortress is 83 Miles Southeast of Krakow

REDS FORCE PASS

London, Sept. 11 (CP) — The South Poland fortress town of Krosno, 17 miles from Czecho-Slovakia, has been evacuated by the Germans, the Berlin radio announced today.

Krosno lies in the Carpathian foothills 83 miles southeast of the great Polish city of Krakow, key to the war industries of German Silesia. Other troops across the Vistula were reported within 35 miles of Krakow last month and 75 from Silesia.

German broadcasts for several days have told of a massive new Russian offensive toward Krakow, but the Russians, as is their custom, have remained quiet during early stages of the drive.

The Moscow communique said Soviet columns hitting inside southeastern Transylvania and along the eastern side had captured nearly 60 towns and villages yesterday, and forced another Carpathian pass into Transylvania.

Meanwhile, Russian newspaper dispatches indicated that the protracted lull on the Polish and Baltic sectors of the eastern front is likely to break at any moment. Timing and direction of the next major thrusts of the Red Army remained secret.

It was believed, however, that the biggest drives will be launched from the upper Vistula bridgehead south of Warsaw toward 90-mile-distant German Silesia.

POSTAL DEADLINES FOR CHRISTMAS PARCELS

September 15th has been designated by postal authorities as the deadline for mailing of Christmas parcels to the Far East, including India, Burma, Ceylon and other points in that district, according to circulars now released.

For the United Kingdom and France, the mailing of Christmas parcels by October 25th is recommended.

With the volume of Christmas mails for overseas points expected this year to reach an all-time high, postal authorities appeal to the general public for strict observance of the above mailing dates, with early mailing recommended in each case.

Distribute Ration Books Oct. 17-19

Issuance of a new ration book, designated as "No. 5" has been scheduled for October 17, 18 and 19, for Belleville and district, Local Ration Board Secretary, Harold D. Bateman announced today.

The new book will cover a period of rationing of fifty weeks instead of thirty weeks as in the case of former books.

Local Ration Board officials emphasize the fact that hours for distribution on the dates mentioned will be from 2 to 6 p.m. The inside market space has been selected as the distribution centre.

The expansion of time from thirty to fifty weeks represents not only a tremendous convenience to the general public but a huge saving in time and effort on the part of local ration boards.

Industrial heads will be given the opportunity of having their employees get the new ration books at their places of employment on Monday, October 16. Books will also be distributed on this date at the County Home; City Home; Belleville General Hospital; the Ontario School for the Deaf; and Albert College.

Approximately thirty thousand books will be issued in the Belleville district which includes beside the city, the areas east to and including Deseronto and north as far as Foxboro.

Mrs. M. Upper will be in charge of city distribution assisted by Alderman H. J. Clarke, B.A., while Mr. C. B. Morgan will supervise out-of-town issuance of the books.

Belleville Exhibition Will Provide Feast of Entertainment for Three Days Beginning September 18th

Expressing in its many colorful phases the victory contribution of Hastings County and her sister communities to the Nation's war effort, the Belleville Exhibition will offer its 1944 edition at the Fair Grounds here on Sept. 18 - 19 and 20th.

Climaxing months of tireless effort on the part of President E. Sandercock, Secretary Erie Denyes and members of the directorate of the Belleville Agricultural Society, the Exhibition, which will be formally opened at 8:30 p. m. Monday, Sept. 18 by Progressive Conservative leader John Bracken, has emerged from the melting pot of entertainment, education and exhibition contribution, a whole that is easily comparable with any of its kind in Eastern Canada.

Big Agricultural Display Expected

First and foremost an agricultural show, this year's Exhibition will naturally feature the biggest and best, from both quality and quantity standpoints, that the representatives of one of Canada's largest industries in these parts, have to offer.

The tremendous demands on agricultural production of an embattled Empire, have not deteriorated the quality and other high standards of farm produce in this district. In fact, it can be safely stated, that if anything, producers of Hastings and her sister counties, have not only maintained the quality levels of pre-war exhibits, but actually increased them.

And also showing a marked increase, is the interest shown in Belleville Exhibition by not only veteran exhibitors but those who will display their wares here for the first time. This is evidenced in the larger number of entries received in almost all phases of the Exhibition this year.

From this hub of agriculture, then, has branched the many other spokes of exhibitional interest, other industries, sport, family effort, the home, women's interests and work, junior activities and entertainment. All of which have received the detailed interest of the directorate, with the result that each is an attractive whole within the general scheme of things.

Cream of Livestock.

Equine blue-bloods; the cream of bovine aristocracy, sheep, swine, poultry will be on exhibition parade in the livestock branch of the exhibition. Proud Holsteins, Durhams, Jerseys, Ayrshires, Polled Angus, herefords will vie for blue-ribbon honors. Percherons, Clydesdales, Belgians and other heavy-draft horses will be here. High-stepping Hackneys and other carriage types have been entered in larger numbers than usual.

Other large entry lists have been received in grain, roots, seeds, fruits, flowers, vegetables, dairy produce, implements, manufacturers' products, women's work, fine art and domestic science.

Of more than passing interest to the younger element of both city and rural centres will be the Junior Departments of the Exhibition. Canada's future farmers, both boys and girls, will be seen in judging demonstrations such as team work, calf club entries, homemaking clubs exhibits, inter-club exhibits and special war displays.

Sideline features of the show will include a special Baby Show, horseshoe pitching, public and separate schools pupils departments and others.

Some of the finest harness horses in Ontario will compete in trials of speed on the last two days of the fair and lovers of this sport will get their racing fill on a track that has been specially conditioned for the purpose.

Special Entertainment.

Nor has entertainment been forgotten. The famous Conklin Midway has been engaged for the fair, and past performances of this attraction augurs well for this department of exhibition amusement.

Another program of stage entertainment provided by the well-known Bill Garden Canadian Vaudeville Exchange has been secured for the grandstand. An exceptional array of talent that embraces all phases of stage presentations will be on hand.

Officers and directors of the exhibition for 1944 include, Elmer Sandercock, President; G. E. Thompson, 1st Vice-President; W. D. Reid, 2nd Vice-President; F. G. Chamberlain, Treasurer; Erie S. Denyes, Secretary.

Honorory presidents are: Geo. H. Stokes, M.P.; Geo. Tustin, M.P.; MacKenzie Robertson; R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P.; Col. Roscoe Vanderwater; Thos. E. Fleming, Warden, Hastings Co.; Earl Onderdonk, Warden, Prince Edward; Mayor H. Cory, Town of Trenton; J. J. Forestell, Reeve, Tyendinaga Twp.; Judge C. A. Cameron; Roscoe Robson, M.P.P.

While a number of applications have been received by Dr. A. E. Amoss, director of professional training, Department of Education, no Normal School scholarships have been awarded to the counties of Hastings and Lennox, South Hastings Public School Inspector R. H. Macklem, announced today.

The scholarships, however, are still available, and additional applications will be received until Thursday, September 14.

It is believed that a number of students, who are eligible for the scholarship, and who have not as yet applied will avail themselves of the opportunity to make formal application before the deadline date Sept. 14th.

Ald. C. R. Clapp Lands 35-Pounder At Moira Lake

To prove he is as proficient at the end of a fishing rod as he ever was winning a lawn bowling match, Ald. Clarence R. Clapp, of this city, is today the proud displayer of a 35-pound maskinonge, which he caught in the waters of Moira Lake over the weekend. The 35-pound "muskie" beauty measured nearly 51 inches in length. The large 'lunge was on display in Clarke and Miles butcher shop window on Monday.

Mr. Clapp was trolling in the upper portion of Moira Lake when the huge "muskie" struck, as only that species can. Mr. Clapp was accompanied by Mrs Clapp, Mrs. A. E. Berry, Foster Ave., and her son Bobby Berry.

Realizing they had hooked an unusually large fish, Bobby Berry assumed control of the outboard motor until finally the fish was safely landed. "When that big fellow struck and broke water it was a sight I'll never forget," Mr. Clapp told friends afterwards.

One Caught at Northport.

There are other proud anglers in Belleville as the result of their weekend fishing bag today. While trolling off Northport yesterday, Mrs. Glen Elliot, Foster Avenue, hooked a 15 1-2-pound muskie also. After playing the big fellow for well over a quarter of an hour the fish was finally landed into the boat by Clarence Bryant, who was in the party.

MEET

The ship was held up for a few days for Mr. Churchill. Soldiers returning from overseas count their allotted leaves from the date of their departure and normally would have had a few days less with their families.

But Mr. Churchill heard of this and cabled the President. Mr. Roosevelt replied that all men involved would get an appropriate extension of leave, subject of course to the necessities of the war effort.

On the trip from Halifax to Quebec crowds turned up at every station to see the Churchill train. Railway officials who were aboard said Mr. Churchill received a welcome everywhere and that his response delighted the Canadians who turned out to see and cheer him.

The trip on Canadian soil was made under ideal weather conditions.

Train Arrives Early

Mr. Roosevelt's train arrived unexpectedly early and it had been stopped for some time on a siding at Wolfe's Cove on the St. Lawrence River before the British Prime Minister arrived at 10.05 a.m. E.D.T.

Within five minutes of Mr. Churchill's arrival escort cars were beginning to line up for the drive to the Citadel, summer residence of the Governor-General, where the war leaders will stay while in Quebec.

Mrs. Churchill and Mrs. Roosevelt travelled with their husbands; and both the Prime Minister and the President brought official parties to assist them in their deliberations.

Mrs. Roosevelt received a welcome from Princess Alice and exchanged warm greetings with Mrs. Churchill. The three women entered a closed car and drove along to the Citadel in the procession which formed up quickly as the leading car carrying the President and the Governor-General moved off.

Virtual Capital

With the arrival of the Prime Minister and President, Quebec became for the second time in thirteen months a virtual capital of the United Nations.

To many associated with it, the Churchill-Roosevelt meeting, their eleventh since the war began, is a "Victory Conference." Awaiting them and filling the Chateau Frontenac were military, naval and air experts, ready to pool their brains and information in the fashioning of plans for total victory and the first stages of peace.

POLICE BLOTTER

Many Articles Reported Lost Over the Weekend

Whether it is a case of rank carelessness on the part of citizens, police officials are at a loss to determine. At any rate city police received several complaints from citizens regarding the loss of wallets and other articles of value.

For instance Barney Vesterfelt, 149½ West Bridge St., reported the loss of his wallet containing $90 in cash; H. Colden, 21 Reid St., lost his purse containing about $12 and Stanley Aiken, R. R. No. 1, Belleville, reported his wallet missing also.

Bernice Cournyea, No. 4 Dafoe St., removed her wrist watch while in the ladies rest room at the Snack Bar. When she returned for the timepiece, after forgetting it momentarily, it was gone.

Residents at 57 Ridley Ave. reported clothesline thieves had stripped the family line the other night. A pleated skirt, four slips and other smaller articles were taken, police were told.

Army Service Police reported Pte. E. E. Kenny, of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, had escaped a custody escort at the local C.N.R. station early Saturday evening while en route from Toronto to Kingston. Kenny's home is in Trenton, which took the Army S.P.'s to that town in hopes of locating the wayward soldier.

Following family altercations at his home north of Shannonville, Joseph McDermott, Tyendinaga, was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital suffering from a four-inch head laceration. Provincial Police investigated and found the matter was purely a domestic affair the result of family differences that terminated in a general fight. The matter is still in the hands of the police. After receiving medical attention and several stitches to close the head wound, Mr. McDermott returned home.

TRANSFER SEAT OF GOVT.

Cairo, Sept. 6 — (Delayed)—(AP)—The Greek government headed by Premier George Papandreou today transferred its temporary seat from Cairo to Naples in anticipation of its entry into Athens. Prince Paul, serving as Regent in the absence of King George II in London, accompanied the government.

Ottawa, Sept. 11. (CP)—Removal of restrictive and standardization orders imposed by the Prices Board on a wide range of metal articles and some other products was announced today by H. H. Foreman, co-ordinator of capital equipment and durable goods.

Mr. Foreman's announcement came simultaneously with a statement by Donald Gordon, Prices Board chairman, who said in a Toronto address that the Board proposed removing restrictions as rapidly as conditions allow.

Orders which prohibited or restricted manufacture and which have been lifted apply to: steel drums, silver plated holoware, steel shaft sports goods, humidifiers, small electrical appliances, identification tags, elevators, incandescent lighting fixtures, wheelbarrows, bathtubs, upholstered bedding, metal furniture, and eavestrough.

Orders which standardized and simplified manufacturing processes which are cancelled apply to: heating, plumbing and air conditioning supplies, cast iron soil pipe, range boilers, steel tanks, shovels, axes, baby carriages, bolts, screws, rivets, storage batteries, jewelry trade practices, flexible cord, stokers, cast iron ware, registers and grills, typewriter ribbon and carbon paper, writing ink, agricultural hand tools, pumps, jewelry designs, hair and bob pins, builders' hardware, barbed wire.

Furniture, caskets, asbestos products, electric tape, wooden venitian blinds, wooden penholders, and pencils and electric lamps.

The Board's announcement quoted Mr. Gordon's Toronto address in which he said removal of the restrictions did not carry with it any priority assistance for materials or labor.

Sgt. D. Lattimer In Great Raid Against Le Havre

London, Sept. 11 — (CP-Cable)—More than 200 R.C.A.F. bombers blasted Le Havre yesterday as a part of a force of nearly 1,000 bombers which unloaded some 5,000 tons of bombs on the besieged French port.

German troops and defence installations were targets for the two concentrated attacks delivered in the morning and afternoon. No opposition was encountered and all the Canadian aircraft returned.

Canadians on the raid included Sgt. Doug. Lattimer, Belleville, Ont.

"They Sailed the Seas For a Better Red!"
CHEMISTRY SERVES CANADA

DYESTUFFS have always been an important article of commerce. Long years ago, in the days of earliest navigation, ships sailed to distant points, braved the dangers of uncharted seas in their search for more brilliant reds and blues that would not fade. Tyre itself rose to fame largely on the quality of the dyes that it could offer to the early world.

To-day the important part that dyes play in industry is no secret. Busy shoppers look for smart materials, feel their fine texture and ask, "Is the colour fast?"

The answer to-day can be in the affirmative, for such is the progress in the manufacture of dyes that colours are available in Canada now that are equal to any the world has yet produced. Silks, cottons, rayons, woollens and other fabrics can take on the brilliance of the rainbow, resistant to sunlight, to perspiration, to salt air and water, to constant tubbing or dry cleaning according to the purpose for which they may be intended.

And thus through the magic of commercial chemistry, the test tube has replaced the sailing ship and man's search for brilliance need go no further than the confines of the laboratory.

To provide dyes equal to every need of the textile, paper and leather industries of Canada is one of the many functions of the Organic Chemicals Division of Canadian Industries Limited.

PRICE CONTROL WILL REMAIN SAYS CHAIRMAN

Donald Gordon Cautions That Basic Causes of Inflation Still Present

1941 PRICES PREVAIL

Toronto, Sept. 11. (CP)— Donald Gordon, Prices Board Chairman, in an address outlining the Board's policy for removal of restrictive orders, today announced a number of metal order cancellations but warned that many restrictions, including price control, must be retained.

"No one should jump to the conclusion that we are planning or think it possible suddenly to release all the wartime controls of the Board", he said in an address prepared for delivery to the Canadian Club.

In particular, Mr. Gordon cautioned that basic causes of inflation were still present.

"We may well be in for a trickle of production of many articles which have been scarce or off the market, with keen competition for early supply backed by accumulated purchasing power", he said.

"The danger of a general upsurge in prices may not last for long, but in my opinion it is a definite risk in the early stages of transition.

"In deciding its decontrol measu the Board must assume that expansion of civilian output will take place within the framework of a system which relies mainly upon private enterprise to provide production and employment. . . ."

While most of the orders involving important use of metals and components still required in the war program are being maintained 14 orders restricting or prohibiting the manufacture of a wide range of metal goods and 53 standardization orders are being immediately rescinded Mr. Gordon said.

(Announcement of the lifting of these restrictions was made simultaneously in Ottawa.)

Basic Prices to Prevail

The basic 1941 prices would have to be observed for goods returning to the market and new goods for which there was no basic period price would have to observe price levels, which would have been appropriate had they been sold in the fall of 1941.

Gradual easing of the controls was not to be interpreted as an indication the time had arrived for general relaxation of the war effort.

"At this stage war production and essential civilian needs must continue to get, and will get, prior claim on all necessary materials and labor," he said. "But we should be shortsighted if we did not look ahead or if we postponed for one moment longer than necessary the removal of regulations which might impede the transition from war to peace.

"If without hurting the war effort the supply of civilian goods can be increased then the pressure on prices can be relieved and if we can keep prices stable we can build a foundation for the healthy and orderly reconstruction and rehabilitation of our peacetime economy."

General Cancellation

With the defeat of Germany there would be general cancellation of practically all of the Board's remaining controls over production of end products made of metal, including those which require imported components, he said. In the meantime the Board would continue to collaborate with the munitions Department and Wartime Industries Control Board to revoke orders as quickly as the needs of war justified.

The chairman had a word on the suggestion that some restrictions should be retained to prevent what has been described as wasteful competitive practices.

"The Board takes the view that its activities in this field are dictated by the emergency conditions of a wartime economy and that it is not appropriate for the Board to continue any orders or regulations which have the effect of restricting competition when the emergency conditions have passed," he said.

"On the contrary the interests of the people of Canada will be seriously prejudiced unless the Board clears away as soon as justifiable all regulations which might prevent civilian production from taking up the slack when war production begins to decline."

Band Concert Much Enjoyed

Proving itself always to be an attraction in Belleville the Trenton R.C.A.F. band, under the direction of Bandmaster WO. Hancock, played before a near capacity audience in the Capitol Theatre Sunday evening as they presented a band concert in aid of the Quintena Rebekah Lodge. Following the concert, members of the band were served refreshments at the Oddfellows' Hall where Mrs. J. Redner, Noble Grand, and Mrs. Florence Pollitt, chairman of the War Workers' Unit, expressed their thanks to the band personnel and its director. Proceeds of a silver collection taken at the concert amounted to $71, which will be used to pack Christmas boxes for soldiers overseas.

DEPT. GIVEN RUNS TO TWO GRASS FIRES

With the hot sun and advance of the season gradually drying lawns and commons in and about the city, grass fires again are becoming prevalent and are responsible for fairly frequent runs by the local fire department. Twice over the weekend, the department was called out for this reason, once to Dundas Street West, and again on Sunday to Cemetery St. No damage was reported as result of either blaze.

Belleville Shrine Club Opens Drive For Special Fund

Turning their attention to the humanitarian work of assisting crippled children of the city and areas which their organization covers, members of the Belleville Shrine Club, have inaugurated a drive for funds with which to carry on this much-needed work.

Shriners from this district which encompasses the areas from Cobourg to Kingston, north and south, have wholeheartedly endorsed the plan arranged by club officials and at present are working hard in an effort to make it possible for underprivileged crippled kiddies to receive the proper medical care and orthopedic necessities in the case of those beyond complete cures.

A pretentious array of prizes ranging from the latest radio cabinet to a periodic supply of theatre tickets have been secured and are being offered as an inducement, if such is needed to the general public. Aggregate value of the prizes amounts to over $1,000.

Tickets are now in the hands of capable canvassers and are being offered for sale. The grand drawing of the prizes will take place at a specially arranged period during the Belleville Exhibition.

This is the first appeal made by Shriners to those who do not belong to the order for donations of funds to help deformed children in the way of bringing them relief and if possible curing them of their deformities thus giving them a new start in life and hopeful and enterprising inspiration.

Connected with the drive for funds is Shriners Club president D. L. Storey, treasurer Al. Reynolds, and Mr. J. B. Boyce. Headquarters of the club is situated at 25 Campbell Street.

The Blind Need Your Help

Anyone with good eyesight can probably think of no greater affliction than being blind but those who are born without sight or who lose it through accident or disease can be trained whereby they make themselves useful members of society and self supporting as well.

The Institute for the Blind at Brantford performs a comparative type of instruction as is done for the deaf children by the Ontario School for the Deaf which we are so familiar with here. It is supported by the government but the Institute is given over to the instruction of children only. For the adult blind there is the Canadian National Institute for the Blind which is supported by contributions from the public and each year a campaign is run to obtain funds for the Institute to carry on its great work. The campaign begins today in the city and district and runs for a two-week period.

The work of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind is two-fold in its scope. It consists not only of helping those who are already blind but of preventing loss of sight among those threatened with blindness. It is an important humanitarian undertaking, and one which deserves the support of all those who are able to see, and who are in a position to give.

Blindness is a serious handicap but it is one which can be overcome to a very great extent if the person suffering from it is given intelligent help and proper opportunities. The Institute supplies this help and these opportunities with the money supplied by the public. The scope of its work is determined by the extent of the support obtained. The public has made the Institute what it is through years of generous support, and the public can help the Institute to develop and expand by continuing that support.

Contributions to the Institute are used in many ways. They help to buy glasses for those who need them and cannot afford them. They help to send teachers into homes of the blind to give them instructions in Braille reading and in handicrafts. They help to provide emergency assistance for those in need and jobs for those who are able to work. In short they make it possible for the whole pattern of Institute work to be maintained.

There are now 100 blind people in Belleville, Trenton, and Hastings County who are eligible for any Institute service desired and many others require prevention of blindness treatment. The Institute has, also, been entrusted with the rehabilitation of blinded servicemen from this war.

In the past the citizens of Belleville have responded most generously to Institute appeals. This support has been very much appreciated, and has enabled the Institute to carry on its work successfully in this district. In launching its campaign for funds officials are confident that the citizens of the city and district will continue their support, that they will realize the need and will do their part to help those who must face life without eyesight. It is a great sum that is required but failure to supply it may mean a drastic change in the lives of many blind persons.

The Lights of London

Beacon Lamps of Freedom, the lights of London will glow once more on September 17 through the gradually lifting clouds of war and desolation that have enveloped the Heart of the Empire for five years. In common with the gallant people of Britain the entire free world will rejoice in this illuminating mark of triumph against the forces of darkness and terror.

London's people knew the horror of bombs dropping night after night, week after week. Of late they have known the whistling death of the robot bomb that unheralded hurled its victims into eternity as they walked the streets or chatted with friends.

They experienced the flaming terror of 1940 when Hitler sent his aerial legions over the city in an effort to crush the spirit of an unconquerable people. And London "took it." These stoical representatives of a "nation of shopkeepers" hurled defiance at the enemy, not through the flaming muzzles of the anti-aircraft batteries, or the spitting guns of the R.A.F., but through the fact that they showed Hitler they could conquer fear.

The light of their courage and determination to "stick it out" burned brightly through the dark years, a flame that nights of horror, death and destruction failed to dim. Its brilliancy was comparable to the hot glow of burning buildings, or flaming incendiaries loosed by the war-dogs of darkness.

Now, the blackness that has hidden the cheery glow of lighted windows will disappear, it is hoped, forever. The glow of lamps behind window blinds will once more be in evidence. There will be almost normal lights on vehicles and in the streets. Civilian defence is to be placed on a "stand-easy" basis, with its "full-time" workers released and part-time volunteers cut from forty-eight hours duty to twelve hours duty a month.

London's "new" lights will not shine on the city of old. They will glow over a city greater and braver for its desolation; over a people who have emerged from war's crucible with their honor unsullied and their courage steadfast. And they are the only people in the world who will really see and really understand. We, who rejoice with them, can only do so through the sympathy born of respect for those who have suffered and died that Freedom's Light may burn brightly now and forevermore.

Learning Languages

Though the difficulties of learning languages are real, they are also easy to exaggerate. Generally, the adult has more to show after a three months' course at a commercial institute than an adolescent after three years' study of a foreign language in a British secondary or American high school. One reason for this is that the adult pupil is clear about why he or she is taking the course. Another is that the teacher is usually clear about why he or she is giving it.

This is not the whole story. To sins of omission we have to add all the positive obstacles which early formal education places in the way of those who have no strong personal inclination for linguistic studies . . . We have not yet got away from education designed for the sons of gentlemen. Educational Platonism sacrifices realizable proficiency by encouraging the pursuit of unattainable perfection. The child of an immigrant learns a language by blundering his or her way into greater self-confidence. Adults accept the mistakes of children with tolerant good humor, and the genial flow of social intercourse is not interrupted by a barrage of pedantic protests. The common sense of ordinary parents or customs officials recognizes that commonplace communication unhampered by the sting of grammatical guilt must precede real progress in the arts of verbal precision. Most of us could learn languages more easily if we could learn to forgive our own linquistic trespasses.—(From "The Loom of Language," by Frederick Bodmen.

Long Ago and Far Away

In the middle 1800's there lived a man whom his contemporaries considered a radical, says The Montreal Gazette. He advocated a bill of rights, and gathered disciples around him to hear him expound on his strange principles of free speech, and government by the people.

His country proposed an act of aggression against a neighbor, and he resigned from its cabinet in protest.

With his friends he campaigned through public meetings and platform tours until he managed to get a liberal party in power, with promise of a constitution 10 years later.

When an assassin stabbed him, in an attempt on his life, he fell, saying: "I may perish, but liberty will survive!"

The ideas he had were good, but he was unable to plant them deep enough to take root and grow strong. His name was Count Itagaki, and he was a Japanese.

POSTPONED PROMISE

It's all proper, I suppose,
Never life serenely goes,
God and time, and seldom man,
Settle all that mortals plan.
Here's the circus come to town,
With the celebrated clown
And the acrobat in air
And the educated bear
And the trained sea and the band;
Here's the very day I'd planned
And has pledged my solemn word
To take little Edgar Third!

That was just five years ago,
Plus the few months till the snow,
And the morning of his birth.
On the day he came to earth
This I vowed: "When he is five,
If I still shall be alive,
He and I will surely go
To the Ringling Brothers show!"
But on this awaited day
With his daddy he's away
"For duration," as they say!
So the dream must be deferred—
I must wait for Edgar Third!

QUAKER GUNS

When Allied forces landed on the southern coast of France they found that some of the Nazi coastal batteries were composed of Quaker cannon.

The use of dummy cannon to deceive the enemy is an old stunt in warfare.

Dummy cannon placed in the portholes of ships or the embrasures of forts to deceive the enemy were first called Quaker guns in allusion to the doctrines of non-resistance taught by orthodox Quakers or members of the Society of Friends.

Washington Irving, the Father of American letters, writing in 1809, spoke of "a formidable battery of quaker guns."

Perhaps the most famous quaker guns in history were those used by the Confederate army at Centreville, Virginia, in the fall of 1861.

General Joseph E. Johnston described the incident in his "Narrative of Military Operations Directed During the Late War Between the States." The former Confederate commander wrote:

"As we had not artillery enough for their works and for the army fighting elsewhere at the same time, rough wooden imitations of guns were made, and kept near the embrasures, in readiness for exhibition in them. To conceal the absence of carriages, the embrasures were covered with sheds made of bushes. These were the quaker guns afterwards noticed in Northern papers."

John Beauchamp Jones, in "A Rebel War Clerk's Diary," also referred to these dummy guns: "They found they had been awed by a few quaker guns—logs of wood in position, and so painted as to resemble cannon."

Quaker guns are still widely used both to deceive the enemy and to train troops with when real weapons are not available.

Although genuine implements of war are regarded by military men as more desirable for training purposes, it is sometimes necessary to employ imitation weapons for tactiful training, such as broomsticks, sticks of wood, steel pipes, and similated wooden rifles, cardboard tanks, imitation machine guns and other dummy guns and improved weapons.

In 1941, when American recruits were being trained with dummy weapons because real ones were not available, it was said:

"Since tactical employment of a weapon rather than its technical manipulation is paramount, little training value is lost by the substitution of a stove pipe for a mortar or an oak bough for a machine gun."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Noisy Wedding Parties

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

A sincere "Amen" to your editorial in Friday's issue about the noise nuisance in Belleville. And apropos of your mention of train whistles, why not put a stop to the puerile, idiotic, unnecessary stampeding of screeching motor cars on the city streets every time two individuals become joined in holy wedlock (or deadlock, as the case may be)?

True, a wedding is usually a joyful affair and is the cause for some sort of celebration inside the immediate circle of the couple's relations and friends. But they have no right to extend their celebration into the city streets. No more than the person whose horse has come in first, whose wife has presented him with twins, or the man who has won a couple of hundred at poker.

Any way you look at it, a car tearing around the streets with blaring horn constitutes reckless driving and disturbing of the peace, whether it be a wedding, a man whose wife has gone to the country, or a drunk who thinks he's king for a day. A few pink and white ribbons and trailing tin cans shouldn't make any difference in the enforcing of the law. I'm sure that a person ill in bed, perhaps with a blinding, bursting headache, or writhing with nervous exhaustion, will no more appreciate a wedding party raring up and down the street half a dozen times than a couple of drunks in an altercation beneath his window. It's all disturbing the peace to him.

Lest anyone rise up with smug tolerance and accuse me of being a kill joy, let me relate two instances of wedding day tragedies owing to reckless racing of cars through city streets. In an Ontario city a few years ago a car containing the bride and groom was in collision with another car. The bride was instantly killed while the bridegroom lost a leg and suffered other severe injuries. In the second case a child was killed by a wedding juggernaut.

Let's put an end to this silly, juvenile custom.

Yours truly,
ARBITER ELEGANTIAE.

WHERE DIGESTION BEGINS

In a healthy person the saliva contains a digestive enzyme or "ferment" called ptyalin, which converts cooked starch into maltose (a type of sugar) which in turn is converted into dextrose after the food reaches the intestine, and that is the form in which all carbohydrate food (starches or sugars) is absorbed and utilized for heat and muscular energy.

How important this part of digestion is for good health and physical efficiency is hard to realize.

The chewing process in the mouth thoroughly mixes food and saliva—or should do so—but the bolus is swallowed too quickly for the ptyalin to complete its action on carbohydrate food (starches or sugastric juice is sufficiently acid to destroy the ptyalin or to arrest its action (ptyalin requires neutral or alkaline medium, as in the saliva). It was therefore supposed formerly that salivary digestion ceased when the food entered the stomach and hence is of little value in the digestive process.

We know better now. We know that a considerable part of an ordinary meal may remain in the cardiac or upper portion of the stomach for the first hour or more after the meal, completely shut off from the acid secretion in the lower or pyloric end of the stomach, so that salivary digestion continues for nearly an hour in the stomach.

There are other good reasons why it is essential to chew such foods as vegetables, greens, cereals and breads made from them, fruits and nuts well before gulping them down or washing them down with beverage, but we haven't room to enumerate them here.

It would not be so serious if the loss of a single tooth or maybe a couple teeth entailed merely a 3 per cent or 6 per cent deficiency in mastication. If the missing tooth or teeth are not promptly replaced with functionally efficient dentures the entire alignment, bite or occlusion of the teeth is bound to suffer change in the course of weeks or months, and the masticating function becomes thereby far more than 3 per cent or 6 per cent deficient.

It might not be so serious, for a year or so perhaps, if the deficient mastication and deficient salivary digestion entailed only the annoyance or discomfort of "dyspepsia", "acid indigestion," "gas", "nervous indigestion" and the like. But that's only the lighter side of it.

It is from the foods above mentioned that we get most of the vitamins and minerals required for good nutrition—if we get them at all. If mastication of such foods is deficient we just don't get the vitamins and minerals from the foods we eat —if the diet includes adequate proportions of such foods.

And so, loss of teeth spells nutritional deficiency, and nutritional deficiency in the great majority of cases, goes unrecognized or masquerades under some meaningless or misleading name which suffices to satisfy the curiosity of the victim regarding the nature of his trouble.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Washing Hair

Is it harmful to wash the hair twice a week because of excessive oiliness? Also is it dangerous to take a bath or wash the hair during menstrual period? (W. M.)

Answer—No. No. Better send stamped envelope bearing your address, ask for pamphlet Hygiene for Girls and Health for Women." If you would like also the pamphlet "Care of the Hair and Control of Dandruff" inclose ten cents for it. A clipping of this item is not a request.

Well, Whadaya Know?

Please send me a pamphlet on spasmodic croup. Daughter, age 6, 47 pounds, healthy, wakes at night occasionally and complains "Mother I can't breathe". She will just swallow and swallow. Had her examined several times, but nothing found to account for it. (Mrs. G. H.)

Answer—Shucks, for a moment it seemed that at last we had unearthed another case of croup. I expressed here a year ago the observation that spasmodic or catarrhal croup had become exceedingly uncommon in recent years. Three or four readers promptly assured me their children still have it. Still, it must be rare compared with its frequency when I was a young country doctor and available for emergency calls in the night. Your daughter, Mrs. G. H., evidently hasn't croup. However, it can do no harm to supplement her diet with calcium and vitamin D for a few months, as instructed in the pamphlet on Croup. I am glad to send on request if you inclose stamped envelope bearing your address.

REVERIE

Sitting beside the open fire
Where the logs burn fitfully—
Am I—or am I not alone?
Is it only a shadow I see?

Is it a creak in the old arm chair,
Have I unconsciously stirred?
Or was it your voice, your beautiful voice,
Low and distinctly I heard?

Was it your lips lightly touching my cheek,
Your hands caressingly near—
Am I—or am I not alone?
Ah, Beloved I know you are here.

WEDDINGS

COLDEN—CHISHOLM

On Saturday, Sept. 9th., at seven p.m., at Bridge Street United Church, was quietly solemnized the marriage of Doris Eileen Chisholm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Chisholm, of Cannifton Road, to Arthur Alfred Colden, son of Mr. Samuel Colden and the late Mrs. Colden of Station Street, Belleville. Rev. E. Farnsworth was the officiating minister and Mr. Alec Gordon ably presided at the organ. The ushers were Mr. Clifford Belch and Mr. Gordon Chisholm.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white chiffon, floor length with sweetheart neckline and a fingertip veil of silk net with Mary Stuart headdress and carried a nosegay of red roses. She was attended by her sister, Betty Jean Chisholm, who wore green figured chiffon in long princess lines and headdress of net and flowers. She carried a nosegay of pink roses.

The groom was assisted by his brother, John Edward Colden.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, the guests were received by the bride's mother, who wore navy blue crepe and corsage of red roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Colden left on a wedding trip to Toronto and points west. They will take up residence in Belleville.

Library Report For July, August

Miss Olive Delaney, librarian delivered to the Library Board, her report for the months of June, July and August at the monthly meeting held recently. The report follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The following report is for the months of June, July and August.

Total circulation for the three months was 22,000, an increase of 1,000 books read as compared to last year's figures. One hundred and thirty-three new adult members enrolled and 37 boys and girls.

Bank deposits totals $205.50: $142.10 collected in fines, $67.68 from the duplicate pay collection and $9.70 for non-resident fees.

One hundred and seventy-five books were discarded as unfit for further use and a box of discards was donated to the city jail. Seventy-five books were donated to the library of Mrs. A. E. MacColl. Many of the books will be useful on our shelves and those we do not need she has given permission to redistribute to any smaller library able to use them.

Mary Wright, part time assistant for the past three years left the library at the end of July as she was expecting a call to the navy. This necessitated obtaining a temporary part-time assistant until the matter could be brought before the Board. Elinor Newman was recommended to me by Miss Bunting of the Collegiate library, and so Elinor has been helping during the month of August. Another girl who would like to come as part time assistant is Maida Woodley. She too, has had experience in the Collegiate library and is interested in library work as a future career. I wish to submit these two names to the Board as suggestions for part time help.

Miss Moore conducted a summer reading club in the Boys' and Girls' library in the form of a Book Bank Contest. Seventy members enrolled and small prizes will be donated to the boy and girl having the highest bank total for the summer reading.

The first part of June we took stock in the Boys' and Girls' library and found that there were 98 books missing over a period of three years. We will continue to recheck these and there is a possibility some may still be found.

In an effort to straighten the library records by the end of the year, I wish to notify the public that any books overdue for some time will be accepted by the library without charge, if returned promptly. I would appreciate the co-operation of the library borrowers.

Yours truly,
Olive Delaney,
Librarian.

We Get What We Produce

by R. J. DEACHMAN

I told this story before—it must be told again. I wish it could be understood by every man in business, in politics, or in any other active field of effort.

It happened at a Y.M.C.A. Discussion Club. I asked the man sitting next to me what he expected to get out of life. He wanted a good job, a happy home, holidays with pay, a good car, a wife, two children, a girl and a boy, retirement at 60—a comfortable pension and a golf field not far from his place of abode.

Then up spoke a man in air force uniform. He spoke slowly as one whose thoughts moved through a medium not his own. "You expect" said he, "a great deal out of life, much more than the average man can obtain. Would you mind telling us how much more you expect to put in, for the average man can take out of life, just what the average man puts in—no more!"

The question was never answered. The young man to whom it was addressed had no clear conception of what he had to offer. He suffered from the delusion that it was the duty of the State to provide the good things of life but he did not know the nature of the entries to be made on the other side of the account.

The airman who asked the question was a Greek. He had been driven out of Greece by the Germans. He went to Egypt, then England then the United States, later to Canada. He hoped to get back to Greece. I hope he gets there. He was the type of man who deserves his freedom.

"He only earns his freedom and existence
Who daily conquers them anew."

Mopping Up Excess Gravy?

(An Editorial in New York Times)

Of gravy conservation very little has been written in the books on etiquette and very little has been said in the columns of advice to those who are searching for correct methods and technique. It would seem that the time has arrived for a constructive policy. To be sure, certain groups more interested in the fundamentals than the trimmings have never been puzzled. Those who admit no problems face no alternatives.

History records that a former President ate dinner at a bunkhouse on a Western ranch and used half of a baking soda biscuit to conserve the gravy on his plate. Farm hands and lumbermen have long known this efficient method. It has much to commend it. A brown-crusted half biscuit, piping hot and with a generous amount of butter dissolved in the soft, white interior, is an efficient, neat tool. A good-sized half will function for two or three moppings if one is careful to eat only the well-gravied part.

The urban family faces a more difficult problem. One doesn't have so many biscuits; johnnycake is apt to be too crumbly to be a satisfactory gravy absorber. Often there isn't enough mashed potato to utilize all the gravy. Therefore, in general it comes down to two choices. First, one can use a piece of bread. This may be used in the fingers or on a fork. Either way, one pushes the bread about, getting gravy on a part of it. This is efficient, and if the operation is performed slowly and with a graceful movement is entirely acceptable to most authorities.

The other method is to use a teaspoon and take the gravy straight. It has the advantage of permitting one to taste the full flavor, but if the gravy is on the thin side one may have to tip the plate. However, if one tips the plate away from him, as with soup, the amenities are observed. The point is, conservation is the order of the day, and gravy conservation would help redeem the daily food wastage on millions of generously laden plates.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Soldier's Chivalry—Seems Like Mistaken Kindness

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The girl I expected to marry was one in a million. Pretty, faithful, intelligent, and devoted to me. We decided it would be more patriotic not to be married 'til after the war. I was badly wounded in Italy. I've been sent home, and the question of whether I shall ever recover my sight is doubtful.

As long as this hung in the balance, I didn't write to my girl. But now that it seems pretty certain I shall not see again, I want to relieve her of the hideous responsibility of having a blind man on her hands. I wrote to her a lie, that I didn't care for her any more due to the fact that I'd learned to care for someone else. She doesn't know the name of the hospital where I am at present. Then I began to think in lying to her I was doing something foolish and dramatic. Should I write her what has really happened?

Just Another G. I. Joe.

Several letters along the same line as yours have come to this column, and it seems to me that those closely involved in these problems should be given the power of choice. Instead of telling your girl you're breaking up with her because you've grown fond of someone else, don't you think it would be more straightforward to tell her the truth?

Don't give up hope. A soldier who had been blind for nearly a year had his sight restored miraculously with the relieving of some spinal pressure. And don't forget that one of the greatest poems in the English language "Paradise Lost" was written by a blind man. Don't let yourself despair. Modern science does marvelous things.

Welcoming the Baby With a Shower

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My sister is expecting her second baby. As her first child is almost 8 years old, I think it would be nice to give her a baby shower. Should we make it a surprise or tell her about our plans?

Is it correct to give a shower for a second baby? Also, is it good form for a sister to give a shower, or should her girl friends give the shower?

C. R.

There should be no harm in giving a shower for a second baby, and I think it would be especially nice, since it is eight years ago that the first child was born.

Whichever you think best — surprise or not—would be correct. You know your sister's state of health better than I do and if you think it might shock her too much, then tell her about it.

It would be better taste to let your girl friends give the shower at their home, and you might share expenses with them.

Blames It All on Too Strict Parents

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had hoped to marry the soldier who is the father of my baby before he was ordered overseas. But there wasn't time for examinations and other formalities, and now I'm left to face this trouble alone.

I blame my broken life on my parents who were so strict they wouldn't let me go anywhere or invite people to the house to see me, and I never had any decent clothes. So after a while I ran away and I'm afraid I got in with the wrong crowd. Is there anything I can do about this soldier? I haven't told my parents about the trouble I'm in.

Miserable.

There were some things in your letter which I did not feel at liberty to print. But I think if I'd been in the place of your parents I would have been equally careful about your comings and goings. As an unwed mother, the only thing you can do about this soldier and getting him to accept responsibility for you and the baby is to write and ask him if he'll help. Also, if you have any letters from him, mentioning that you expected to marry, or that he is the father of your child, the government will take up your case.

If not, apply to the Florence Crittenton Home. There is one in an adjacent city to your town. The Red Cross will help you to locate their address.

I could have given you this help sooner if you had sent me a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your correct name. This reticence on the part of girls faced with such a problem as yours is most ill-advised. I've actually had letters from girls expecting babies in a week or so, who are too shy to give their names and addresses, and yet expect arrangements to be made at some lying-in home within the next few days. And while they have my deepest sympathy, it just can't be done.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

An Army Wife's Problems

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am an army wife, and I've been traveling around so much that only a few of my relatives and friends know my present address. Now in a few weeks I'm going to send out birth announcements. Should I write my present address on either the front or back of the envelopes, or would this suggest that I was asking, so to speak, for a gift?

2. I am ordering special engraved announcements that have a formal appearance. Would it be better to address these with a typewriter, or in handwriting?

M. D. Y.

1. By all means write your present address in either the upper left-hand corner of the front of the envelope, or on the back. Think of this not as a bid for gifts....for it isn't this, and won't be interpreted as this by your relatives and friends....but as a welcome piece of information for them. Naturally, they will be so happy about receiving your wonderful news that they will want to know where to address their letters of congratulations and good wishes to you. Don't deprive them of this joyous privilege.

2. You should address the envelopes in handwriting.

Some Answers for a 16-Year-Old

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a sixteen-year-old girl, and a constant reader of your column. Will you please answer a few questions that are bothersome to me?

1. When introducing two people, do you introduce the younger to the older, or vice versa? For example: "Jean (the older), I would like you to meet Mary Smith (the younger)" And then do you say, "Mary, this is Jean Brown?"

2. Also, who says "How do you do" first? And to the other person's "How do you do?" is it proper to answer, "Very well, thank you"?

3. Is it necessary for me, sixteen years old, to rise when being introduced to an older person?

Puzzled Sixteen.

1. You should introduce a younger person to an older person. That is, you mention first the name of the older person. For example, "Mrs. Brown, this is my cousin, Janet Smith." When you are introducing two girls of about your age, it isn't necessary for you to think of which one is one or two years older than the other, but just mention the names, "Sally Smith—Jean Brown." When you are introducing a boy to a girl, always speak the girl's name first: "Sally Smith — Tom Robinson." (It is easier and simpler to say the full names as you are speaking the introductions ....then you don't have to add an identifying sentence.)

2. The two people being introduced say "How do you do" practically simultaneously....neither waits for the other to say these words that acknowledge the introduction.

And that "How do you do" is just a form of introduction-acknowledgment....it really isn't a question, and at the moment of introduction, the other person isn't really inquiring about how you "do". So you should never answer, "Very well, thank you." Just reply with your "How do you do"....and think of some pleasant something to start the conversation!

3. Yes, you should always rise when you are introduced to an older woman.

SELF-CONSCIOUS?

By Mrs. Beeckman

If you keep busy—very, very busy, having and showing a vivid, a delighted and delightful, interest in people around you, you'll forget yourself, your self-consciousness. And you'll have more fun too!

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Slenderizing The Arms

Excess adipose tissue is bad enough, but not difficult to dispose of if it distributes itself evenly over the svelte anatomy. Diet and exercise, sometimes just diet, will thin out the ranks of the fat cells. But when cushions are localized, as often happens, the suppliant for the willowy shape is up against a tough proposition.

Many a plump torso is supported by pretty, slender legs and trim ankles. Many a slim body is propelled by pudgy feet, legs not unlike those of a billiard table. Why must the human race be subjected to disfigurements of contour? We know the answer: Because the human races does not give due regard to correct eating habits and the need for daily exercise.

Arms that measure more than they should are a source of grief and embarrassment to many women. The wise one never bares them, but curtains the upper portions with sleeves or cape-like decorations of some diaphanous fabric when the evening gown is worn. If you see them exposed, you may come to the conclusion that the lady loves her fat.

Mrs. Wise will knuckle down to such strenuous muscle work that human suet will be worn to a frazzle, will give up the ghost.

The quickest means of arm reducing is to get a pair of Indian clubs and learn how to use them. This is a perfect and delightful exercise, has a normalizing effect upon the upper portion of the body. As the arms lift high in the air, the breasts are raised; soft tissues are made firmer and muscles are tightened. The upswing pulls on the fibers from the lower part of the ribs to the waistline, doing away with the little roll of flesh that may be there if one is a heavyweight. Shoulders are made neater, the back comes in for a good steaming workout.

Club swinging is taught at all gymnasiums and at many reducing salons. Men find it an excellent form of exercise to keep away the middle-age facade. It is a crying shame that more women do not realize the need of muscle toning. Men are ashamed to confess that they never exercise.

A rowing machine is a good means of keeping in form, especially for reducing arms and waistline. Very cleverly constructed are these beauty aids; they fold up into a small package that can be put in a suit case.

Massage is a slow method of dissolving tissue on any part of the body. Swimming and tennis are ideal exercises for normalizing the feminine frame.

Fashion Flashes

THE GIRLS ARE ASKING for pretty date dresses. In this category is a slim dress of black faille with black lace accenting the sleeves and the long torso line which is finished with a shoe-string sash and long ends of black velvet.

A BIG APPEAL to budget-minded shoppers is made by silver-blue muskrat. We saw this fur made into a charming coat, a 36-inch, cuffed, loose model, the skins let out to loosen the weight of the coat and to bring out the dark stripes.

PRETTIEST SIGHT of the week is a pair of coats designed for four-year-old twins, brother and sister. The little boy has a high rever Chesterfield in pale blue wool with dark blue velvet collar and high-placed double breasted button fastening. Little sister's coat has a velvet Peter Pan collar with rows of stiching, tiny velvet bow knots and velvet buttons.

Kidney Stew

Savoury, appetizing and, of course, nutritionally tops

Eat liver, heart or kidneys once a week, say Canada's official food rules, and for a very good reason! These meats are particularly rich in iron as well as important vitamins.

Now, many people in the past have enjoyed lamb's kidneys but have never yet tried the equally nutritious and — properly cooked — equally delicious beef or pork kidneys.

EAT THESE FOODS!

MEAT—One serving a day of meat, fish, poultry, or alternates, liver, heart or kidney once a week. Eggs: at least three or four a week.

MILK—Adults ½ pint. More than a pint for children. Some cheese as available.

FRUITS—One serving of tomatoes or citrus fruit or their juices; plus one other fruit, fresh, canned or dried.

VEGETABLES—One serving of potatoes plus two servings of other vegetables, preferably leafy green or yellow. Frequently raw.

BREAD AND CEREALS—One serving of whole grain cereal. Four to six slices of Canada Approved bread, brown or white.

This week's recipe for a family of six is really something. Try it soon!

2 beef kidneys
Flour
4 tablespoons lard
1 onion, sliced
2 to 3 cups diced carrots
2 cups tomatoes
1 to 2 cups diced potatoes
1 teaspoon Worcester sauce

Soak kidneys in salted cold water ½ hour, then drain and pour boiling water over them. Cut in ½ inch slices crosswise, removing tubes and membranes. Dredge slices in seasoned flour. Melt lard in heavy pan and brown kidneys, sliced onion in it. Add tomatoes, carrots and seasoning. Simmer ½ hour. Add potatoes and continue cooking ½ hour. Taste and season as required.

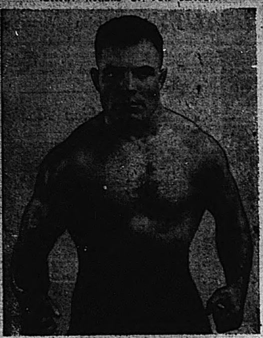
KATAN WARMS UP FOR SEXTON



"The meeting of two wrestlers like John Katan and Frank Sexton comes around all too seldom. This is what we refer to as the perfect bout. Katan claims he has never been beaten in a Belleville ring. It is no secret to say that Sexton boasts of an unblemished ring record for over two years, and that goes for any ring. So you see we have reasons to lay claim to a perfect bout at the Hume Arena Wednesday night when these two great wrestlers meet," explained Promoter Frank Tunney over the phone today. With an opponent the calibre of Sexton, Katan can't afford to rough matters for the simple reason Sexton is the type who retaliates in kind, so the fans are assured of a strong bout of scientific wrestling.

To assure added action Tunney signed Nanjo Singh the mad Hindu, to wrestle Pierre DeGlane, who was given the nod over the Allah-prayer last week. Singh demanded a return bout. Hostilities will open with Bunny Dunlop testing Abe Zonkin, the Hamilton Tiger football star, at the Hume Arena Wednesday evening.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Sept. 11 — (CP) — To all intents and purposes the much-mooted east-west high school football play-off is still up in the air. Montreal promoters won't touch the idea, the Toronto School Board is not in favor of the idea, and apparently the Winnipeg promoters have not sounded out other cities about the matter.

There's a possibility St. Michael's in Toronto may meet the westerners, about the middle of October, but even that isn't definite. Whoever plays, if at all, some other centres probably will be a trifle provoked about the thing being called an east-west championship.

The idea would be much better if arrangements were made to get several cities into a play-off and get a real Canadian champion when the thing is finished.

Baseball Boosters, Inc.

Enthusiasts of the great American pastime around Hamilton, Ont., have made arrangements for St. Louis Cardinals to operate a tryout camp in their city next training season. Besides boosting interest in the game, the move will give young players an unequalled chance to try out under the eagle eye of experienced ball men, and some may get a chance to enter the minor loops.

Incidentally!

Sportsmen all over Canada and the United States have been sending condolences to the family of the late Bill O'Brien, Montreal Canadiens' popular trainer. Bill for years had been one of the most popular figures around N.H.L. puck circles . . . even though Winnipeg won't have a civilian football team this fall, Regina Rough Riders are determined to carry on, playing with University of Saskatchewan Huskies to keep in shape for whatever is in store in Grey Cup circles this fall . . . Jimmy Burns, popular sports editor of the London (Ont.) Free Press, has left his desk because of ill health, and Harry Eisen has taken over the editorship . . . for the next three weeks sport snaps will do a little cross-country travelling. TWO BASEBALL GAMES PLAYED OVER WEEKEND

Latta Defeats Alemites 11-6 While C. N. Takes St. Mikes 9-2

LARGE CROWD

Latta and the C.N.R. "Railroaders" triumphed in an exhibition baseball doubleheader played at the Alemite Field yesterday afternoon, when a goodly crowd took advantage of ideal weather conditions to enjoy the dual program. The Latta nine beat Alemite 11 to 6 in the night-cap, while the "railroaders" trounced St. Mikes juniors 9 to 2. In both games the story was identical with the winning team enjoying one big inning to cinch the games.

"Doc" Empson's Latta nine finished their season by scoring five runs in the seventh inning of the night-cap to forge well ahead of Art Summers' Alemites as Joe Marsh on the winners' hilltop, struck out two in the last inning to halt an Alemite rally. The losers were trailing 5-4, when the seventh and final frame rolled around. Burns and Smith hit triples for Alemite, while Empson pumped out a three-base clout also. Collins, Marsh and Jarrell hit doubles for the winners.

Joe Marsh, former Tweed slabsman, was on the hilltop for Latta to strike out eight, while Ernie Smith was on the Alemite firing line and whiffed nine.

The line-ups — Latta: Jarrell 2b, Collins 1b, Marsh p, Empson ss, Lawrenson 3b, Gifford c, Bailey lf, McCreary cf and Gray rf. Alemite—Hammett ss, Smith p, Booth 1b, Burns lf, Dickey c, Tebworth rf, Philps 3b, Kellar 2b and Phillips cf.

Line score	runs
Latta	1.0.3.0.2.0.5.—11
Alemite	2.0.0.1.0.2.1.— 6

Umpires: Fitzpatrick and Meens.

Score Six in 9th

In the opener the C. N. R. "railroaders" possessed too much experience and power to help down the St. Mikes juniors 9 to2. However, it was fairly even until the last inning, when C.N.R. racked up six tallies. Dell scored in the second for the junior squad to take the lead, which didn't last long as Bunton, Stolker and Tapp all crossed the plate for the "Railroaders" to put them in the lead, that was never relinquished although Donovan did manage to score for St. Mikes in the bottom half of the third. The six runs scored by the "Railroaders" in the last inning cinched the decision for C.N.R. "Sticker" Stoliker pitched for C.N.R. and turned in a creditable mound effort while Al Kelleher went the route for the juniors.

It marked the last game for St. Mikes as in all future games the Foster Ward and St. Mikes players will affiliate to be known as the Belleville Juniors and this new team will play their first game as a unit on Tuesday evening versus the strong Mountain View "Bombers" at the Alemite Field. In the amalgamation of forces the Belleville Juniors will have a strong line-up with which to battle the Bombers here tomorrow.

The line-ups — C.N.R.: Doyle, Bush, Bunton, Strachan, Day, Galpin, Finnegan, Stoliker and Tapp. St. Mikes — Donovan, Culkin, A. Adams, Boyle, Cross, Dell, Moher, Fitzpatrick and Kelleher.

Nelson's Winnings In Golf During Summer, $39,334

By HAROLD V. RATCLIFF
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Dallas, Sept. 11 — (AP) — Men who made the weary trek along golf's summer trail were on their way home today — all except the gold-dust twins of the fairways, Byron Nelson and Harold (Jug) McSpaden, who have earnings of more than $60,000 in war bonds to show for participation in 29 tournaments.

Nelson ran his winnings to $39,334 — the all -time high for one year — by grabbing off first place here yesterday in the second annual Texas Victory Open. McSpaden was runner-up to make his total $25,200.

The next tournament for the professionals will be at Portland, Ore., Nov. 23-26.

Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager, said all tournaments this year had been for the benefit of wounded war veterans.

Nelson became the year's top tournament winner by taking the Victory Open with an eight-under-par 276 for 72 holes. Yesterday's triumph was his third straight tournament championship. He has seen 53 under par in the three. For the summer Nelson won seven titles, McSpaden six and they teamed to win another.

Yesterday Nelson went out for the final 18 holes with a four-stroke lead over McSpaden, both were two over for the first nine but while McSpaden got no better coming in, Nelson racked five birdies to finish the second nine in five-under-par 31. His four rounds were: 69-69-70-68 — 276.

McSpaden had 286, while tied for third were Ray Mangrum of Beverley Hills, Calif., and Ben Hogan of Fort Worth Army Air Field with 288's.

YANKEES, TIGERS TOP BROWNS BY THIN MARGINS

Detroit Half Game Away From Lead and St. Louis a Full Game

RED SOX FOURTH

Winning the close ones has enabled New York Yankees to take possession of the top rung in the hot American League scramble. Including yesterday's night-cap 4-3 victory over Boston Red Sox, the McCarthymen boast a record of 33 one-run decisions against 18 such defeats.

The Yanks temporarily lost their first-place hold to Detroit Tigers, when they dropped the opener to rookie Clem Dreisewerd and the Red Sox, 3-2. By winning the 2nd game, the Yankees regained the lead as both the Tigers and St. Louis Browns divided their twin-bills, leaving the Bengals still a half-game behind and the Browns in third place, one game away. The Red Sox are three lengths off the pace.

But for the poor showing in long games, the Browns would still be leading the league. Yesterday's 3-2, 11-inning defeat by the White Sox in the night-cap after having won the opener, 6-2, kept the Brownies from deadlocking the lead. It marked their 12th extra-inning loss this year compared to six won.

Dreisewerd gained his second victory of the year, both against the Yankees, holding the league leaders to seven hits. Clem won his own game by doubling in the seventh and scoring the deciding run.

Another rookie, Mel Queen of the Yanks, won his fifth of the season, limiting the Sox to seven blows in the nightcap, one of which was George Metkovich's single, that extended his batting streak through 25 games.

Hal Newhouser spun a four-hitter against Cleveland Indians for his 24th triumph, as Detroit won, 5-0, but the Tribe shelled Paul (Dizzy) Trout from the mound to win the aftermath, 7-4.

Nelson Potter became the first Brownie hurler to win 15 games when he held the White Sox to six hits in the opener, winning 6-2. In the nightcap, a single by Jimmy Webb and relief pitcher Orval Grove's triple won for Chicago 3-2.

In the other American League twin-bill Washington Senators twice defeated Philadelphia Athletics, 2-1 and 8-2. Emile Leonard outpitched Jess Flores in the opener and Alex Carrasquel hung up his seventh win in the afterpiece.

Mort Cooper became the first pitcher to win 21 games in the National League as he hurled St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-2 win after Chicago Cubs, behind Paul Erickson's three-hit pitching, shut out the Red Birds, 9-0.

Cincinnati ended its home season dividing a pair of games with Pittsburgh. The Pirates thwarted Bucky Walters' bid for his 21st victory by winning, 7-5. The Reds took the second, 2-0 behind Arnold Carter. Brooklyn and Philadelphia split, the Dodgers winning the opener, 8-4, and the Phils taking the second, 3-2. New York Giants defeated Boston Braves, 10-4, in the day's only single contest.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Clem Dreisenwerd, Red Sox and Oscar Grimes, Yankees—Dreisewerd held the Yankees to seven hits and scored winning run after doubling in seventh of opener; Grimes smashed double with bases full to clear bases and give Yankees 4-3 decision over Red Sox in finale.

Hal Newhouser, Tigers and Lou Boudreau, Indians—Newhouser won 24th game, pitching his second successive shut out as Tigers won opener; Boudreau drove in two runs with double and scored twice as Indians win nightcap 7-4.

Paul Erickson, Cubs and Morton Cooper, Cardinals—Erickson held National Champs to three hits and shut them out in opener 9-0; Cooper became first National League hurler to win 21 games as Cards won nightcap 4-2.

Don Boyle's Superb Pitching Helps Columbian Squires Defeat Toronto Carltons 5-3

Locals Score Three Runs in First Innings and Never Headed

PLAY HERE WEDNESDAY

Toronto, Sept. 11 — (CP) Sixteen-year-old Don Boyle's superb pitching, coupled with fine fielding and batting, guided the Belleville Columbian Squires to a five-three victory over Toronto Carltons Saturday, to win the first of a best-of-three semi-final series in the Ontario Amateur Softball Association playdowns. The return game will be played in Belleville on Wednesday evening.

The Belleville nine, who have a home-town return game next Wednesday, took an early lead, and despite the desperate efforts of Coach Johnny Frost's Carltons, it managed to maintain it throughout the game.

Don Fitzpatrick, catcher for the Squires, batted a long fly deep into the left field for a three-base hit in the first inning and brought in Adams and Wardaugh. He stole the remaining base before the inning's end to gain three runs for the Belleville team. Toronto was held to one run in the first round.

In a surging comeback in the fourth round, Carleton's threatened to take the lead with a batting spree, but the Squires held them to two runs. What proved to be the last run of the game was made by Don Boyle in the fourth, bringing the score to five-three.

Carltons swung a double play in the first half of the eighth when lanky Joe Chinkaluck, pitcher for the Toronto nine, caught a pop fly off Belleville's Don Boyle and winged the ball to second to catch Bob Bunton off base.

Final inning of the game was hitless and scoreless.

The Belleville team gained their semi-final position by winning a best-of-three series from the Hastings, Ont., team.

Carlton's berth was won, along with the Toronto and district championship, with a four-straight victory series against New Toronto.

Winners of this current series will play off with the victors of a similar best-of-three series between two teams from Hamilton and Windsor, Ont., for the junior championship of the association.

Line-ups:

Toronto Carltons — J. Chinkaluck, p; K. Cruikshank, c; W. Yorkiewitch, 1st; J. Walker, 2nd; D. McBride, 3rd; V. Pogoeselski, ss; W. Chomyshyn, lf; G. Tenesi, cf; J. Strombe, rf.

Belleville Squires — D. Boyle, p; D. Fitzpatrick, c; R. Bunton, 1st; D. Adams, 2nd; H. Wardaugh, 3rd; J. Moher, ss; G. Donovan, lf; G. Culkin, cf; A. Adams, rf.

Accident Insurance.

Ted Owen, Oklahoma U. Athletic trainer, says every high school football coach should have a First Aid kit, ankle wraps for every player and a whirlpool bath. He also advises getting a sports-minded doctor to sit on the bench at games. . . . . Just in case some coaches didn't know that much, this corner adds its opinion that no football game, scrimmage or contact drill should be held when there isn't a doctor handy.

BALTIMORE WINS FIRST PENNANT IN 19 YEARS

Finishes One Percentage Point Ahead of Newark Bears in Last Game

TORONTO THIRD

(By The Associated Press)

The closest pennant race in the International League's 61-year history ended yesterday with Baltimore Orioles emerging as champions by .0007 of a percentage point over Newark. The Orioles won 84 and lost 68 or .5526 and Newark's record was 85 and 69 for .5519.

An even break with Jersey City Giants, coupled with Newark's double loss to Syracuse Chiefs gave the Orioles their first pennant in 19 years.

Only one before —in 1918—was the International, race so close. Then Rochester nosed out Buffalo .5487 to .5476, a margin of .0011. Baltimore's league-leading percentage is the lowest ever to top the circuit in a 154-game schedule. The lowest all-time mark is Rochester's 1928 figure, when 168 games were played.

Red Embree, Baltimore's ace right-hander and league-leading strike-out pitcher, pitched his winning game for the Orioles, holding the Giants to three hits in the 5-0 opener for his 19th vicory, tops in the league. The Giants won the second 6-2.

The tail-end Chiefs, behind ancient Hod Lisenbee, won the opener from Newark, 4-1, routing Dutch Hiller in the eighth. The Bears started Lefty Page in the nightcap, but the Chiefs fell on him for four runs in the first frame and the Bears never caught up.

Leafs Split.

Toronto split with Montreal winning the opener 12-8, but losing the nightcap 7-6. The first game win clinched third place for the Leafs as Buffalo lost twice to Rochester, 3-2 and 4-3, to finish fourth.

The Leafs opened each game with five-run sprees in the opening innings. The first game lead held up, but Montreal countered in the first frame of the nightcap with five tallies of their own and went on to win on Ed Stevens' 14th homer of the season.

Veteran Bill Trotter won his 14th game for the Wings in the opener and young Bill Emmerich gained his 13th in the nightcap as Rochester took those two one-run games from the Bisons.

Governor's Cup play-off schedule:

Baltimore vs Buffalo (four out of seven first game at Baltimore Tuesday (night).

Newark vs Toronto (four out of of seven) first game at Baltimore day (night).

Casual Comment

by K.J.C.

A club of eccentric young men had for one of their rules that on Tuesday evening any man who asked in the clubroom a question which he was unable to answer himself should pay a fine of ten shillings. One evening Tomkinson asked: "Why doesn't a ground squirrel leave any dirt around the top of his hole when he digs it?"

After some deliberation he was called upon to answer his own question.

"That's easy," he said. "The squirrel starts at the bottom and digs up."

"All very nice," suggested a member, "but how does it get to the bottom?"

"That's your question," answered Tomkinson.

Garrison Finish.

Whenever the home team break through to win in the ninth inning the fans go home quite satisfied it was a great game. Well, the Belleville patrons of softball must have enjoyed that privilege Saturday when the SACO. "Marines" beat the Oshawa Generals 5-4, the winning run coming in the ninth after Gene LaBonne's two-run-producing eighth inning tally had locked the score up at four-all.

It was great to win, but a tough game to lose. Jim Hunter, who hurled great ball for the Marines his best of the season in fact, helped his own cause by getting a single in the ninth. Jimmie Barriage, the next batter, sacrificed, but when Simmons, the Motor City catcher, retrieved the ball to attempt throwing Barriage out, Simmons' throw hit the fleet-foot Barriage on the shoulder and the ball rolled deep into right field as Hunter moved into high gear and raced all of the way home with the winning run. Despite Oshawa protests the ball was always in fair territory. Incidentally Roy Covert didn't help the Motor City cause any too much by his continued umpire-baiting and was rewarded to be called out on strikes in the seventh while walking out of the batter's box.

Elongated Jim Hunter was in rare form Saturday, striking out 11 Oshawa batters, while Hillier whiffed but six locals. Possessing fine control Hunter walked but two to his opponent's four. Phil Loft's running catch of Trott's hard drive in the 7th was the picture play of the game. Twice the Marines had to come from behind before they finally won in the ninth. After the game Mr. Gus Freeman, general manager of the Stephens-Adamson Company sponsors of the Marines, invited the personnel of both teams to dinner as his guest, which was greatly appreciated by the Motor City boys.

Today Harry Rollins, O.A.S.A. convener for this area announced the next Intermediate O.A.S.A. draw which takes the Marines to Toronto next Saturday with the return game to be played here on Sept. 23rd.

Squires Beat Toronto.

When Jack Doran's Belleville Squires stepped out before 1,500 fans at Perth Square to meet the Toronto St. Peters kids, a group of Ukranian lads junior O.A.S.A. winners in the Queen City, the players and fans alike gave the local Squires the bird repeatedly referring to the Belleville kids as "hay seeds". The remainder is history now, but the laugh was on the other side when the ninth inning was over Belleville was leading 5 to 3 and won going away. Incidentally it marked the first time this year the St. Peters kids had been defeated, which adds more credit to the Squires' accomplishment. Doran's dandies went out and racked up three runs in the first inning and then proceeded to give Don Boyle, their ace pitcher, some swell support to leave the Toronto Ukranian lads well in the rear. The return game in Belleville will be played on Wednesday evening at six, convener Harry Rollins announced today. The Belleville-Toronto winner then advance to the Junior O.A.S.A. finals versus the Hamilton-Windsor winners. The Squire kids have been playing strong softball and deserve the attendance of the fans when the strong St. Peters team come here for the return game.

Play Tonight.

In order to keep softball before the public in Belleville, President Joe Samain announced this morning that the fifth and final game in the Belleville City Softball League between Point Anne and the SACO. "Marines" would be played at the Fair Grounds this evening. Each team has won two games and it will be Stan Luffman hurling for the Cementmen with either Bill Anderson or Jim Hunter on the Marines' hilltop.

Goodly Crowd There.

A large gallery saw yesterday's twin bill of baseball at the Alemite Field when the C.N.R. beat the St. Mike's kids in the opener while Doc Empson's boys put the timber to a few of Ernie Smith's slants to have Latta beat Alemite in the nightcap. Joe Marsh hurled for Latta, who also had "Sailor" Russ Collins up to his old tricks around the initial sack. "Sticker" Stoliker blew hot for C.N.R. allowing the juniors only two runs, while the "railroaders" racked nine runs off Al Kelleher. For the remainder of the baseball season the juniors will be known as Belleville and the new team will push off with a game versus the strong Mountain View "Bombers" at the Alemite Field on Tuesday, evening.

Remember When.

Harry Wills, giant New York negro heavyweight boxer, gained a unanimous 12-round decision over Luis Angel Firpo, Argentine scrapper, at Jersey City 20 years ago tonight. It did him little good, as he never did get around to a chance at Jack Dempsey's crown. Wills' closest admirers often referred to him as the uncrowned champ., but even that didn't consolate.

Balanced Card.

It looks as though Promoter Frank Tunney balanced his next rasslin' card in an effort to please all patrons. Let's look 'em over. On one side he has Katan, Nanjo Singh and Al Dunlop, three as rough a hombres as one could ask for. They meet Frank Sexton; Pierre DeGlane and Abe Zonkin respectively, three as strong and as scientific grapplers as come down the line. No wonder Tunney breaks into print to claim he has the perfect card. Naturally the fans are interested in the Sexton-Katan bout, as both claim never to have been beaten in Belleville.

Crucial Series.

The time has at last arrived for the championship series in the Belleville Ladies' Softball League that opens at the Armouries Lawn between Reliance and SWACO this evening. These two teams finished one, two respectively and battled it out all season in a nip and tuck affair that saw Reliance finish in the No. 1 slot. Coach Tommy Colden has two hurlers to throw at Reliance, Lois Calcutt and Ev Reid, while Skipper Billie Blaind will pin his hopes on Millie Foster's good right arm in hopes of winning a second league pennant, Reliance being 1943 league champions.

Sport Writers Meet at Oshawa To Play Golf

Oshawa, Sept. 11 — (CP)—Ivan Miller of the Hamilton Spectator yesterday won the Toronto St. Andrew's Golf and Country Club trophy with the low gross score at the ninth annual golf tournament of the Ontario Sports Writers Association. Miller had a gross of 87 on the Oshawa Golf Club 18-hole course.

Fred Thompson of the Kitchener Record won the Canadian Pacific Railway officials prize for low net score with 74. Bob Garden of the Toronto Star won the Hamilton Spectator Trophy with the second gross score of 92 and the Hamilton Spectator reserve trophy was won by Tommy Moore of the Spectator with the second net score. Moore's 74 put him in a tie with Thompson on the score but the latter was awarded the prize because of a one-stroke advantage on the last hole.

Major C. McQueen, on leave of absence from the Toronto Globe and Mail, won the prize for low net on the first nine holes with 35 and Vic McKenty, formerly of the Kitchener Record, won the prize for the net on the second nine holes with 40.

Following the golf tournament, the sports writers were guests of R. S. McLaughlin for dinner.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 477

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

I'd rather play bridge with Elva Tyme than anyone else you mention. Whenever I pull an awkward crime, she pays not the least attention.

A criticizing player, no matter how brilliant in other ways, is the dumbest thing in bridge. He warps his partner's initiative. He discourages partner from meeting emergencies.

East had been picking on west all during their partnership. It got so that west didn't know whether he was afoot or horse-back when this deal came up:

NORTH
♠Q 7 3 2
♥J 7 2
♦J 4 3 2
♣10 5

WEST	EAST
♠9 6	♠J 10 8 5
♥A 9 6	♥10 8 5
♦10 7 5	♦9 8 6
♣A J 8 4 2	♣Q 9 3

SOUTH
♠A K 4
♥K Q 4 3
♦A K Q
♣K 7 6

South opened the bidding with two no-trump, showing a hand that contained eight high cards. Such an opening is a signal that asks partner to bid three no-trump with one high card.

North had one high card; the queen. And so, north responded with three no-trump. The bidding ended there and west led the club four on which east played the queen.

With that lead, declarer could see eight tricks in a hurry. He needed one more before opponents took five. And he hit upon a plan that might get it for him before the clubs wrecked him.

His plan was based on the phychology of the situation. If west had the heart ace, he might be lured into playing second hand low. West might be afraid of being criticized in case he did otherwise.

So, unhesitatingly taking the first trick with the south king of clubs, declarer nonchalantly led a small heart toward dummy jack. Sure enough west played low, fearing east might have the queen.

The dummy jack of hearts stood up for that trick. Having slipped over that one, declarer lost no time in romping home with seven more tricks. That put his contract on ice.

By taking the heart ace at once, west felt he could run all his clubs to kill the contract. But on an earlier occasion, such a play kept east from taking an extra trick.

Instead of sympathizing with partner at the time, east criticized. Now, east was reaping some of the bitter fruits of his dumb gripes.

"Jamboree"

(First Belleville Showing)

When a fast-thinking, resourceful agent for a band wants his clients to get a coveted spot on a new airshow, and the show's sponsor has other ideas of his own, the agent's campaign is apt to be a bit spectacular. In Republic's gay new musical comedy, "Jamboree" which opened Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre, a series of hilarious episodes is skillfully interwoven with music by famous air and recording artists, furnishing an evening of riotous entertainment.

The picture brings a variety of music, western swing and mountain melody, sure to please an audience of varied tastes. There are Freddie Fisher and his famous Schnickelfritz band, with their own brand of mirthful melody making, Ernest Tubb and his Texas Troubadors, and the easy-to-look-at Music Maids who swing out with the fast tunes or drop into the sweet numbers with the same excellent harmony. Adding to the star-studded cast are Isabel Randolph (Mrs. Uppington), Shirley Mitchell, Don Wilson, Rufe Davis, George C. Shug Fisher. Pretty Ruth Terry, who is one of Hollywood's most talented and lovely young starlets, sings and carries the leading feminine role of the picture. Playing opposite her is George Byron, handsome young romantic lead.

"The Uninvited"

So much happens in Paramount's "The Uninvited" which arrived Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre that the audience is left gasping for breath. The picture has every requisite necessary to keep movie fans in a dither.

With Ray Milland, Ruth Hussey and Donald Crisp heading an exceptional cast which includes Cornelia Otis Skinner and Alan Napier, the picture presents, for the first time in a featured role, lovely Gail Russell. The story is one which combines both comedy and mystery, for the theme is based on weird happenings in an English country home, called Windward House.

So expert is the production that while the series of strange incidents defies all earthly conventions, the film has a peculiarly realistic value throughout. The tangled set of circumstances and the deep, dark mystery is finally cleared up but not before everyone in the audience has experienced that spine-tingling sensation which causes the blood to race a little faster.

"The North Star"

One of the very finest films of recent months is "The North Star," Samuel Goldwyn's newest appealing romantic drama, now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Three stories in one are deftly woven together to make up this realistic offering; a charming romance between two youngsters of a Russian village near the Bessarabian border, the story of that village and its inhabitants as the Nazi blitz attack changes it from a happy and peaceful community to a smoking ruin, and the stirring efforts of an elderly farmer and four young people to bring weapons through the German lines and arm the able-bodied men hiding in the woods awaiting the moment to avenge the town's destruction.

Told with deep sympathy and feeling, and skilfully building up to the powerful climax with a series of colorful and revealing scenes of Russian peasant life, "The North Star" is indeed a great picture and one that every filmgoer should see.

A new romantic twosome of Anne Baxter and newcomer Farley Granger does brilliantly in carrying the film's love interest and much of its breathless suspense in the arms-smuggling sequences. Dana Andrews is splendid as a young bombardier, and outstanding performances are given by Walter Huston as the village doctor, Ann Harding as a peasant woman, Walter Brennan as a farmer, Jane Withers as a fidgety schoolgirl, Dean Jagger as the Soviet leader and Erich von Stroheim as a German army doctor.

Authentic settings and thrilling spectacles, along with magnificent photography, keep the film's interest at high pitch; and Lewis Milestone's telling direction of Lillian Hellman's forceful story and screen play puts the finishing touch to this notable piece of film fare. See it by all means.

"Commando Dick" is the title of a funny Donald Duck cartoon to be presented on the same program with the Belle News of the Day.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Sensations of 1945"

A brand new idea of showmanship has been launched in Andrew Stone's "Sensations of 1945," new musical which opened on Saturday at the McCarthy Theatre through United Artist release. A comedy which merges the colorful entertainment of the circus and vaudeville stage with the humor of smart musical comedy. "Sensations of 1945" brings to the screen some of the greatest acts in the whole realm of entertainment.

With tap-dancing Eleanor Powell starring as a quick-thinking press agent, the cast of "Sensations" includes such favorites as Dennis O'Keefe, W. C. Fields, C. Aubrey Smith, Sophie Tucker, Eugene Pallette, Mimi Forsythe and David Lichine in important supporting roles. Music is provided by the hot bands of Woody Herman and Cab Calloway.

The better-than-usual plot involves the stunts and hot copy ideas of Eleanor Powell as a publicist with an agency to put back on its feet. She takes over the management of an office run by Eugene Pallette and proceeds to run it according to the dictates of her own conscience—over the objections of "Junior" (Dennis O'Keefe.)

Eleanor gets ample opportunity to show her mastery of the art of tap dancing. Besides a special jitterbug number with David Lichine, one of America's foremost dancers, Eleanor does a newly-created "pin ball machine" number in which she dances over a giant pin ball machine.

"She's a Soldier Too"

Headed by Beulah Bondi, Nina Foch, Percy Kilbride, Jess Barker and Lloyd Bridges "She's a Soldier Too" opened on Saturday as the second feature attraction at the McCarthy Theatre with a supplementary cast of young players who are said to give brightness and realism to this story of home front, girl war workers.

The story revolves around the reformation and humanizing of two icy old maids who live apart from the war activities and like it until, to pay off a mortgage, they are forced to rent their rooms to a bundy group of "swing shift Susies." Complications both humorous and tender are said to be brought to a point when a baby is born under the old maids' roof.

It is through this child and the youthful girls about them that the spinsters are brought to a realization of their selfishness. They change their ways of thinking and go all-out for the war and new life with all the vim and vigor of your own grandmother.

Sports Roundup

(Associated Press Sport Writer).

New York, Sept. 11. (AP)—Strategy Dept: in a recent ball game between the Parris Island Marines and the Daniel Field fliers, it was Gene Desautels' turn to bat for the Marines against his ex-major league teammate, Chubby Dean. . . . The Marines had the tying run on second and two were out in the ninth. . . Capt. Roy Randall of the Marines decided to do a little master-minding and sent in utility man like McNamara as pinch hitter, explaining: "Dean knows Desautels, but he doesn't know a thing about you. Go up there and win the game". . . . McNamara whiffed on three pitches and as he strolled back to the bench, Mike commented "Dean may not have known anything about me, but it didn't take him long to learn".

Saco Marines Continue on Way In O.A.S.A. Playdowns Beating Oshawa Entry in Two Straight

Stage Merriwell Finish Here on Saturday to Win 5 to 4

LaBONNE HITS HOMER

Coming through in a typical Merriwell ninth inning finish, Max People's SACO Marines broke a four-all deadlock to score one run and shade the General Motors Intermediates in the second game of their playdown series at the local exhibition park Saturday evening. Winning the series in two straight games the locals will now meet a Toronto team.

In contrast to the first game of the series played in Oshawa on Thursday, Saturday evening's tussle at the local park was just about as sweet a ball game as could be desired. For the most part the teams played heads up ball and it was a fight right down to the wire, the decision coming with a bit of tough luck on the visitor's part.

Allows Nine Hits.

After scattering nine Oshawa bingles, Jim Hunter strode to the plate in the ninth and laced out a single to gain a life. Jimmy Barriage in following Hunter at the plate dumped a bunt in front of the plate and the Oshawa catcher in throwing to first hit the runner and Hunter raced all the way home with the winning run.

It was Gene LaBonne's smashing home run in the eighth that really paved the way for the locals' win however. Trailing two runs in the eighth, Murney Green waited out a walk and LaBonne picked the open space in the Oshawa outfield for his timely four-bagger.

The teams battled neck and neck with neither gaining an edge up to the four as Hunter and Hillier, the Oshawa hurler, hooked up in a neat pitcher's duel. The locals went one ahead in the fourth as LaBonne conked out a line single and went on to third, when Roy Covert let it go between his legs. He scored a moment later as Brudek bobbled Loft's hit to short. Oshawa came right back with singletons in the fifth and sixth, while Belleville tied it up in the sixth.

Starting the eighth Oshawa went two up as McGarry got aboard, when LaBonne dropped Carson's low throw to first. After two were gone Way singled and Simmons duplicated. Loft, fielding Simmons' hit, threw high to the plate and two runners counted. Fielding features were supplied by Loft as he robbed Trott of a sure hit with an over-the-shoulder catch in right. Oshawa came through with two double plays to keep the locals off the score sheet during the early innings.

MEET

Their conference now, Prime Minister Mackenzie King, arrived from Ottawa by train last night.

Mr. King said he plans to play the same part in this year's conference as in the last one — "I shall be in the background." But he was obviously pleased that Canada was chosen again as conference locale and told reporters at the station that he took it as a sign of Canada's growing importance among the nations.

"When you think," he said, "that this is the second time in two years that these two world leaders meet here, and that next week in Montreal we will have the representatives of 44 nations meeting (the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration), it shows that we have come a long way."

In August, 1943, Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt met in Quebec supported by similar parties of experts and advisers. The new meeting like the last, is essentially a military conference and the decisions taken will be matters of high secrecy.

Relate to Victory

That they relate to victory is certain. The two leaders are expected to settle many military questions arising from the changed war situation, for instance, there is the question of "unconditional surrender," the formula adopted at the Casablanca conference early in 1943. Now that the end of the war approaches it may be necessary to review that, not with a view to making things easier for a beaten enemy but to define its meaning in more detail so hostilities can be ended with the least sacrifice of life.

There is the question of the armistice period in Europe and the military disposition to be made while it lasts, armies of occupation, destruction of the enemy's war potential, the policing of Europe.

Churchill-Roosevelt conferences deal with things far in advance. The last meeting at Quebec dealt mainly with the Pacific war since the plans for 1944 operations in Europe were previously agreed upon.

Not Moving Fast

In the Pacific area things have not moved as fast as in Europe. The accomplishment of Japan's defeat will be a major theme of the present conference but the plans for it will be made in the light of the prospect that the European war can be ended soon.

The two leaders with their advisers are expected to appraise the problem of the Japanese war from the point of view of deciding what forces are required to end it and from what nations they should be drawn. The redisposition of vast air and naval strength will be studied and at least a partial demobilization of armies since it will not be possible to move millions of soldiers into positions of battle against the Japanese.

To Meet in Citadel

As host to the conference Canada provides the meeting place and the incidental services. Besides Mr. King, the Earl of Athlone and his wife, Princess Alice, waited in their summer quarters at the Citadel to greet the President and Mr. Churchill.

There, in the seclusion of the old fortress high above the St. Lawrence the two leaders will live and work while hundreds of military and civilian officials meet in the hotel.

The tricolor flag of France fluttered from Quebec rooftops with the Union Jack, the Canadian Ensign and the Stars and Stripes.

Crowds watched the approaches to the hotel, speculating on the identity of high-ranking officers. Restaurants and hotels did a roaring business catering to the needs of the official delegations and more than 100 newspapermen, radio commentators and photographers.

Little News Expected

Warned in advance that there probably would be little news, the reporters prepared to make the best of whatever information came out.

Senior members of the British staffs in Washington were the first high-ranking working members of the conference to arrive. Yesterday Field Marshal Sir John Dill, Admiral Sir Percy Noble, Lt.-Gen. Gordon N. Macready and Air Marshal Sir William Welsh flew in from Washington. With their opposite numbers in the United States Services expected to arrive very soon, they constitute a permanent liaison between the war organizations of the two leading western United Nations. As they are believed to have done much of the preliminary work for the conference they will be key men in the work here.

A soccer team of the R.A.F. Navigation School at Hamilton, Ont., went down to a 3-1 defeat yesterday at New York before the American-Brookhattan combined eleven. On Saturday at Philadelphia the Flyers were defeated 6-5 by the Philadelphia Nationals.

One-time pitcher for Detroit Tigers, Toronto Leafs and Montreal Royals, Orlin E. Collier, 37, died at a Memphis, Tenn., hospital Saturday from a heart attack while on a visit there from his home in Arkansas.

Andy Seminick of the Buffalo Bisons in the International League is one of 11 players in minor loops recalled by the Philadelphia Nationals. They will report after participating in post-season playoffs.

A fire which destroyed 13 race horses and a stable at Belmont Park track, Long Island, Saturday night, was estimated to have caused a loss of $230,000. Among the horses which perished was Arnold Hanger's Dit, seven-year-old gelding which had won $87,956 since 1939.

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER 16

Clem paused for a few seconds; then went on rapidly: "But I'm not to sure about that daughter of Pamela Keith. Sneaky, high-hat, elusive little bimbo! Said she was at he club all evening, but nobody remembered seeing her from about nine until midnight. Said she was on the golf course, alone. Mighty fishy. Besides, Charlotte Cunningham, that pretty blonde domestic dish, heard Sandra quarreling with her mother early in the afternoon, before the debut. Her mother said something like this—I don't remember the words exactly...I can make it so Victor Corliss wouldn't marry you if you were the last girl in the world. Don't you think I can't and won't. You just wait and see. And Sandra screamed back: You do anything to break up Vic and me and I'll—I'll kill myself. So maybe Sandra decided it would be more fun to kill her mother instead. Wouldn' it be funny if Pamela Keith wasn't Sandra's mother? They don't resemble each other much those two. For that matter, Sandra never looked like that Keith guy, either. I've seen pictures of him. He was almost as dark as Hitler's heart."

"But don't forget I pointed out, "Sandra may have taken her coloring from some remote ancestor. I took mine from my great-great-grandmother Greene. Resemblances don't mean so much." Then I asked: "What about Charlotte Cunningham? The police detained her for a time. Why?"

"I don't know exactly," conceded Clem. "But Hornblower's got a tail on her. That means something all right. Ralph Blades is doing the shadow job. I know Ralph, and I'm going to corner him tomorrow and find out what's up. Wouldn't have to do that if our 'Beerful' Mr. Bascom had been on the job."

I know Tony Bascom. He's a nice guy, a swell reporter, but he does like to bathe in beer.

"You had Bascom watching Charlotte Cunningham?"

"Yeah, and he lost the trail behind a barrel of beer!"

"Before the keg got in the way what did he learn?"

"Nothing much. Tailed her to a dump over north-east where a bunch of girls live together. Two of 'em work for the government. Defense jobs. One of 'em is a stenog at the Charlton-Arms and another is the filly who flopped off the Charlton-Arms roof last Monday night."

I caught my breath.

"No wonder the poor kid jumped! Some guy gave her the works. We published that she had a fatal malady which covered up her real condition. Well, she can't put a finger on the guy who was to blame."

I nearly fell off the sofa then, my brain whirling. I'd felt from the very beginning that Marcella Kingsley hadn't committed suicide. Now I wondered which man in the case had been involved with Marcella. I began to click off the masculine names in the case....

Somehow I couldn't really concentrate on anyone except Reginald. Still, could it have been Marvin Eustace? Had Pamela in some way, perhaps through a domestic grapevine, learned about Marvin and the girl and was threatening to tell Elsie Eustace? Had Elsie clutching her precarious social position, learned about Marvin and the girl? Had Elsie known that Marvin, meant to meet Marcella on the roof? Was Marcella threatening ugly publicity if Marvin didn't cough up plenty dough? Had Elsie, instead of her husband met the girl and pushed her to her death?

Once more I found myself trying to remember something which had come close to the surface of my mind tonight. I had almost caught it when Clem had said—but now his words shattered my thoughts.

"Letty, my dear, if I were the marrying kind, I'd propose right now but—how about a date for tomorrow night instead?"

I said, "Why, certainly, Clem!" and the next second, he grabbed my hands and kissed them with fish-house punch technique. Then he eloquently expanded on what a life we could have together, both of us writers, producing the great American novel, etc., etc. "I guess I'm the marrying kind after all, Letty," he announced abruptly.

I protested with, "Look out sweet—no bruises!" For his big arms were surrounding me.

"THAT'LL BE ENOUGH OF THAT!"

Clem jerked away from me glaring in the direction of the voice. I sat, mouth open, eyes dilated—looking straight up into Peter Gibson's face. If I'd ever thought he couldn't murder anyone I amended my belief in that moment.

"What's the idea?" rasped Clem.

I sat back with a slight smile, panis quelled in anticipation of the exciting little drama that was unfolding before my eyes. The girl doesn't live who fails to enjoy seeing two men all bristling with the urge-primitive because of her. But I was due for a shock, for there was no duel at all.

Following one long searching look at Clem, Peter grinned down me affectionately protectively the way a man grins at a child or a lost puppy. It drained every speck of the siren right out of me. I felt as if I had on a pinafore and socks, my hair in braids and any minute now, I'd be late for kindergarten.

"Your mother said you were here," asserted Peter. "I hate to intrude, but I want to talk with you. Come on, Letty."

Clem Barkley objected. "What do you mean? Who are you anyway? Leave my girl alone!"

"Your girl?" replied Peter. "Why I think she's mine."

I turned away from Peter's solemn stare, and found Clem glaring at me. Bewilderment was struggling with a number of things. After a long moment, Clem remarked "Boy, am I a sucker! Letty, you just hauled me out tonight to pump me about that murder, didn't you?"

I nodded, not speaking.

Clem said, "Your pumping technique is good my dear. But now that I've seen it work, let me warn you that you can't use it again — on me. Out of the way, please, Big Boy! I've got a job to do!"

I saw Peter step toward me, protectively.

Clem laughed and announced: "That job's to be done on me by me. I want to get out of here and kick myself around the block!"

And with that, he left us—laughing.

Peter bent down swiftly and kissed me on the cheek. Then he caught my hand, steered me through the dining room and out into the hall. After retrieving my cape and telling Ginny Both I'd had a marvelous time, Peter swept me out into the night and into his jallopy. We drove in silence for a long time through a night that was deep in stars....

Peter finally made a revelation: "Letty, I think I know why Pamela Keith was murdered. I've been doing some investigating on my own. And I've come to the conclusion that Richard Keith's will is behind it all."

"Richard Keith's will!" I gasped. "But, Peter, Richard Keith died years ago!"

"Just the same, I think his will is the key to the mystery."

"Have you told anyone else about this?" I asked.

"No one but you, so far... and a lawyer."

"Then for heaven's sake don't let anyone else find out!"

Peter grinned. "I believe you would care if I met with an—accident."

"Care? I'd care, all right," I whispered.

Peter drew the car to a stop at the curb, turned off the ignition, and began to tell me a story so fantastic that it strained even my imagination.

Peter spoke rapidly as though reading from a court record: "Letty, on December 22, 1920, Pamela married Wayne Courtney. They eloped to Rockville, Maryland, went on a week's honeymoon somewhere in Pennsylvania, and returned to Washington December 30. On January 2, Courtney resumed his college classes, the Christmas holidays being over, and Pamela went back to her boarding school. At that time, Pam wasn't quite nineteen and Wayne wasn't quite twenty. Shortly after that elopement, Pamela's parents learned of her secret marriage. Annulment proceedings were started and on January 15, 1921, Pam sailed from New York for a visit with an aunt, her mother's sister, in Rio.

"Just when Pamela met Richard Keith, I don't exactly know. But it was in May of 1921 that he arrived in Reno and began divorce proceedings against his wife, the former Gladys Newcomb. He returned to Rio, a so-called free man, in November of that year, and of course Pam had long since been free. Keith and Pam were married, November 26, 1921. Sandra Keith was born of this union on August 24, 1922. They came to the States within a year."

Peter paused while he lit his pipe; then went on "Keith was killed in an automobile accident. October 25, 1922. Sandra returned to the South little Sandra, returned to South America to clear up Keith's affairs there. She and her daughter, returned to Washington, September 6, 1924."

"For heaven's sake, how do you know all this—those details, dates?" I asked.

"Because I made it my business to find out. I'm Richard Keith's nephew!"

I caught my breath.

"My father was killed in the war," Peter went on slowly. "My mother and her brother—Richard Keith—hadn't spoken since Mother's marriage to my dad. Don't think my father was a failure or anything like that. He was a poet, and Richard Keith couldn't understand his sensitive nature. When Dad married Mother, Richard Keith was convinced it was for his money, so he promptly cut Mother out of his life. Of course, he was wrong about Dad, who didn't give a rap about Keith's money; he worshipped my mother and she worshipped him.

"One of my clearest memories is of my mother's big white satin memory box. It contained, and it still does, all the letters Dad had written Mother from France, snapshots of him, a Distinguished Service Cross, his officer's record book and other military papers.. Captain John Gibson was killed in action April 15, 1918, which was my fourth birthday."

After a rather long silence, Peter continued: "I'm a newspaper man, Letty. I went to Rio last year to write about the Fifth Column in South America. I sent back a lot of stuff which you probably read without noticing my pen name. I sought suspects, among them a certain German who was definitely a local fuhrer. His wife was Spanish, about forty-five or so. I took a room at her house and during that week she and I got quite chummy. She liked Americans, and I made her like me."

"You'd be good at that sort of thing," I remarked, and Peter grinned. Then he went on with his story.

"One night in her parlor I was looking through one of those old-fashioned plush-covered family albums, when I came across a newspaper picture of Pamela Keith!

"I couldn't understand what it was doing there, why this interest in Pamela. Then I remembered it was Rio where Pamela had met my uncle, Richard Keith. It seems that this Spanish woman was formerly the nurse for Pam's daughter from....now listen carefully, Letty ....September 1921 to November 1922! During that time she had the whole care of the little girl, because the little girl's parents were on a world cruise! Very rich American man, the woman told me! From September 1921 to November, 1922, Letty!"

"Why—why, that first date, September, 1921, was before Pamela married Richard Keith," I gasped. "She didn't marry Keith until November 1921!"

"Exactly."

"Then—then Pamela must have had a daughter by—by —Wayne Courtney?" I said and the thing I'd tried to remember so long was startling clear: Sandra Keith bore a marked resemblance to Dr. Courtney.

"That's my guess."

"And that—that daughter is the Sandra we know!" I said definitely.

"Yes, the Sandra we know. Her name, legally, is Chiquita Courtney Cummings. Cummings was Pamela's maiden name. I saw the record of Chiquita's birth, and I saw the record of Sandra Keith's death. The real Sandra died on November 30, 1922, which was the day Pamela reached Rio. When she returned to the United States with her daughter by Courtney, whom she called Sandra Keith and passed off as Richard Keith's daughter, no one discovered the difference. There was just a year's difference between the two little girls. Chiquita probably was as small and dainty then as she is now."

"And—the will?" I asked.

"Yes, the will. Well, Richard Keith was very wealthy, as you know. He made his will shortly after his daughter was born, Naturally he idolized the baby girl. He had given Pamela a million dollars as a prenuptial settlement so she took nothing under the will. The estate was left to Sandra, in trust, until she would be twenty-one.

"Richard named three trustees: Pamela, Marvin Eustace, his best friend; and Panella Castigena. It was an unusual trust. It provided that Pamela should be the first trustee and that the estate would allow to the trustee $50,00 a year to pay for Sandra's upbringing. If Pamela died before Sandra was twenty-one, Marvin Eustace and Panella were to succeed her and to act jointly, unless one had died meanwhile: in that case, the survivor was to become sole trustee.

"Evidently Richard Keith selected Eustace because he knew their life-long friendship would make Marvin a second father to the child, the Countess to further Sandra's social advancement. Panella must have been a very different sort of person twenty years ago."

"Now with Pamela dead, Marvin and Panella are trustees?"

"Yes, Letty. Temporarily, anyway."

"Temporarily?"

"Yes, until one of them dies. $50,000 a year could insure a nice life for the surviving trustee."

"Yes, even $25,000 per year represents a nice life for both."

"Richard Keith," Peter went on, "seemed to have had only one objective: Sandra's happiness. He provided that if she fell in love during the trusteeship and married a young man who had no money, the estate should pay the groom, commencing on the wedding day, the income from $100,000 of the trust. This income was to continue during the marriage and was intended to remove any friction that might arise if he were dependent upon Sandra's dole. But there was a flaw in that: The trustee had to approve of the young man. If Sandra married without such approval, the trusteeship continued until Sandra was thirty-one and the income from the $100,000 for the bridegroom was cancelled."

"And Pamela hated Victor Corliss!" I emphasized.

"Yes, Pamela hated Victor," Peter agreed. "And he might have figured that with Pam out of the way, he'd be approved by Eustace and Panella who were both fond of him."

"That's so," I said.

"And there was another provision in Keith's will," said Peter, relighting his pipe. "It was a codicil providing that, if Pamela died before Sandra reached twenty-one, the estate should pay $50,000 to Gladys Newcomb. Some sort of balm for Gladys because of old humiliation, I guess. Evidently Keith never intended Pamela to know about the codicil for fear she would object. His lawyers had it that if Pam had lived through Sandra's twenty-first birthday, the bequest to Gladys would have become void and the codicil would never have been brought to light. Whether Gladys knew of its existence is anybody's guess."

Peter paused again; then said. "The last provision was that if Sandra died before Pamela, and before Sandra was twenty-one, the estate was to be divided among Richard Keith's next of kin. That meant my mother and me."

I took a long breath.

Peter than went into other ramifications of the Keith mystery especially from its money angles.

"So you see, Letty, there are a lot of motives piled up. Especially when you know that Gladys Newcomb lost her fortune in the crash and has been living on a small income (and mostly front) ever since. She's up to her ears in debt. Also, Marvin Eustace's estate is mortgaged to the hilt. He and Elsie have rented it to a rich congressman; besides that, Marvin has plenty of other financial headaches. He could use that trusteeship, all right.

"And now the Countess. Panella's room-rent at The Carlton-Arms is five months in arrears, she's been asked to move, and has kept stalling them along with the fiction that soon she'd be sitting pretty financially. That biography of hers wasn't a best-seller anywhere but here in Washington where she and the people she wrote about are known. Actually, she made about $4,000 out of it, that's all—and that was five years ago!

$1,300,000,000 New High Target 7th Victory Loan

Ottawa, Sept. 11 (CP).—Finance Minister Ilsley Sunday night gave Canadians a new high target of $1,300,000,000 for the seventh Victory Loan campaign which, he announced, will open Oct. 23.

The $1,300,000,000 figure, which he described as "the minimum objective," is $100 million above the objective of the sixth Victory Loan campaign which last May yielded $1,407,547,650.

In his announcement Mr. Ilsley said the borrowing requirements for the current fiscal year still stood at the $3,200,000,000 figure estimated in his Budget speech June 26. Provision had been made in the Budget for uncertainties, and it appeared likely that an increase of $500 million might have to be made in estimates of war expenditures.

Individual subscriptions have an objective of $600 million in the October campaign, a $75 million increase over objective in the sixth loan.

In his Budget speech Mr. Ilsley placed the cash requirements of the Dominion at $6 billion for 1944-45, an increase of $200 million compared with the previous year. In his announcement last night he recalled that he had said expenditures for Canadian forces in Europe could not be accurately estimated.

"I went on to say that I considered it not only probable but certain that swiftly moving events of the year would require greatly increased expenditures—expenditures which no one for a moment would hesitate to make," he said.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 11 (CP) — Golds were weak this afternoon on Toronto exchange. Western oils were soft and small gains were netted by industrials and base metals. Volume was fair at 350,000 shares.

The reduction of the Dome quarterly dividend by 10 cents to 30c weakened the stock about a point to 26½. O'Brien declined 25c to 2.85.

Falconbridge, Smelters and Aldermac were stronger base metals.

Industrials showed little change in quiet trading. The Abitibi issues ruled higher and Brazilian gained ⅜ to 21½. Canada Malting and Goodyear Tire declined a point.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—Sufficient investment funds trickled into the stock market today to lift favorites fractions to 2 points or more although many leaders still suffered from neglect. While dealings were relatives slack throughout, advances were in the majority near the fourth hour.

In the Canadian list, Hiram Walker gained 38 and Lake Shore moved up 18.

Rallying tendencies were displayed by American Telephone, US. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Montgomery Ward, Goodrich, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse and Air Reduction.

Leaders To Hold Military Parley

Quebec, Sept. 11 —(CP)— The 11th war conference between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt opened here today, will be "almost exclusively a military conference," a presidential spokesman announced soon after the principals arrived.

The spokesman was Stephen Early, press secretary to Mr. Roosevelt. He said also that the recent visit by the President to the Hawaiian Islands and the Aleutians was "but a necessary preliminary to the conference beginning here today."

This part of Mr. Early's statement to the press was taken by some as an answer to Republican charges that Mr. Roosevelt's Pacific tour was a political jaunt—an answer that could not be made until security permitted discussion of the conference here.

Mr. Early came to the Chateau Frontenac press headquarters immediately after ceremonies at Citadel Hill, where Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt were received by a guard of honor.

HITLER PUPPET IN CROATIA SWEPT OUT OF OFFICE

Algiers Radio Says Quisling Dictator, Ante Pavelic, Arrested

REGIME ONE OF TERROR

London, Sept. 11 (CP)—The anti-German tide in the Balkans has swept another puppet out of office, it was reported today, making more precarious the predicament of an estimated 260,000 Nazi troops in once German-dominated territory in southeastern Europe.

The United Nations radio at Algiers said Ante Pavelic, quisling dictator of Croatia, had been arrested and delivered to Marshal Tito's Partisans. There was no confirmation.

Tito's troops captured Wjikar, only five miles from the Bulgarian frontier, in their drive to join with the Russians sweeping through Romania and Bulgaria, a Free Yugoslav radio broadcast said. Other Partisans were reported fighting only 50 miles south of Zagreb, seat of Pavelic's rule.

Pavelic was an exile in Italy, under death sentence for the assassination in 1934 of King Alexander of Yugoslavia at Marseille, when Hitler and Mussolini in 1941 made him dictator of Croatia. His regime was one of terror, Partisan reports said.

Step up Efforts.

The Russians, cleaning up scattered German remnants in Bulgaria and ferreting pocketed enemy troops in Greece and Yugoslavia, stepped up efforts to get Hungary out of the war.

The Moscow radio again called on the Hungarians to overthrow their Nazi-dominated government. Red Army forces are driving into Transylvania toward Hungary.

In a broadcast last night, Marshal Tito's headquarters declared no Allied troops were operating on Yugoslav territory.

"The struggle is being conducted only by the National Liberation army of Yugoslavia with the co-operation of the Allied air forces," said the statement.

Allied headquarters in Rome announced Thursday a general offensive had started in Yugoslavia with "land forces of the Adriatic" participating.

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Sept. 11 (CP)—His tour of operations completed, Flt. Lt. D. E. (Danny) Noonan, Kingston, Ont., (146 Willingdon Ave.) has been posted to non-operational duties. Noonan has been with the R.C.A.F. City of Oshawa Spitfire squadron for 14 months, during which time he became a flight commander and destroyed five enemy aircraft. Prior to his operational flying he had instructed for 16 months at Brandon, Man.

Canadian Bomber Group Story: Rear-gunner Sgt. F. J. Clay of Red Deer, Alta., sat in his turret and hoped the skipper could take them through. the Halifax, making its run to the target, the railway yards at Varies, France, was caught in searchlights and enemy ack-ack fire. FO. R. G. Holden of New York City was going to bomb the objective. Gunfire tore the top off Sgt. Clay's turret. Hits were made along the fuselage, in the tail-plane and the nose. The automatic pilot was blasted away and the hydraulic system was put out of commission. A piece of shrapnel zipped through the left leg of Sgt. Clay's trousers but didn't touch him.

PO. Lloyd Mann of Portage la Prairie, Man. (103 Broadway South.) brought his mangled Halifax back to base from a collision with another bomber over the target and two trips later nursed an aircraft home after an encounter with crippling flak over France. The performance, in the first five trips of his tour, won him an immediate award of the D.F.C.

Member of a R.C.A.F. repair and salvage unit crew were targets of strafing F-W 190's recently when, with Sgt. W. J. Wilkinson of Toronto (28 Virtue St.) in charge, they went within 2 1-2 miles of the German lines to salvage a damaged Spitfire.

Up front they visited a Canadian regiment and Cpl. W. C. Tojes of Quill Lake, Sask., was watching the artillery blast away at the German lines when 12 Focke-Wulfs dived. The Canadian Air Force men took cover.

Both ablaze, a Lancaster of R. A. F. Bomber Command and an enemy fighter continued to fire at one another until at last the fighter fell. As the fighter came in for a second attack, the mid-upper gunner, Sgt. R. H. Smith of Toronto replied, and fire broke out in the fighter. After three more attacks, it spun down, burning fiercely.

Although the hydraulic system was not working and bombs kept falling out, the pilot, Flt. Lt. W. F. Foote, of (Rosebank Ave.) Halifax, decided to fly on with the single 4,000 pounder still on board, which was duly dropped on Stuttgart.

A two-pound chunk of flak which landed in his lap after rendering his turret useless, was a souvenir brought back by Sgt. C. E. Murphy of Toronto (266 Indian Road), flying in the Moose Squadron after a daylight bombing attack on a large flying-bomb dump in France.

London Looks for Boom in Theatre Entertainment When Blackout Ends

By ALLAN NICKELSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 11 (CP Cable) — The footlights soon will go on again all over London's theatre land after victory over the robot bombs ended the greatest theatrical slump in history.

Londoners look to new shows and reopening of old ones to bring renewal of the boom that preceded the 80-day flying bomb attacks that forced all but 11 west-end playhouses to close.

With the British public clamoring for entertainment, at least 22 west-end theatres will be open within a couple of weeks. Relaxation of the blackout is expected to increase the number and boom conditions probably will return before the end of October.

In the provinces, however, the London slump meant more first-class shows. Some London productions simply closed but others went on tour and the provinces probably saw more shows with original London casts than ever before in so short a period.

First of the productions to be seen by Londoners will be the operetta, "The Lilac Domino," which returns Sept. 14 to His Majesty's. It played to packed houses until the robots came and then toured army camps in late June and early July.

The operetta will be presented by Jack Hylton, once an orchestra leader, now one of Britain's outstanding theatrical producers, and will be followed in five days by another Hylton musical, "The Merry Widow," which opens in the Coliseum after an armed forces tour that included Cairo and Naples.

"The Merry Widow" had been booked to open in London last June but went on tour when the robot attacks started. It features Madge Elliott and Cyril Ritchard, an Australian husband and wife combination long favored in Britain.

Also returning shortly are "Something in the Air" with the husband-wife comedy pair Cicely Courtneidge and Jack Hulbert, and "Panama Hattie," with Bebe Daniels, former Hollywood movie star.

The famed Rarrick theatre already is open, featuring "Uncle Harry," the Edwardian thriller which was a sell-out until the robots came. The stars are Beatrice Lehman and Michael Redgrave.

Mona Inglesby and her international ballet opened at the Adelphia at the end of August. Revival of the 50-year-old George Bernard Shaw play, "Arms and The Man," playing at the Strand, was the most popular of those remaining on the boards while the buzz bombs fell. It features Dame Lilian Braithwaite, and is in its second year at that theatre.

Canadian Institute For the Blind Appeals for Funds

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind opens today its annual appeal for funds in Belleville. The drive will be under the direction of The Institute's Hastings County Advisory Board of which Dr. W. A. Paul of Tweed is chairman, A. D. Archibald of Belleville, first-vice chairman, George Wishart, secretary-treasurer and C. L. Jewell, campaign treasurer. The campaign will be brought to a close on Saturday, Sept. 23rd with a tag day which will be convened by Mrs. Harry Rollins who will be assisted by other members of the local board.

From Sept. 11th to Sept. 23rd the citizens of Belleville will be asked to share their sunshine with those who live in the shadows. They will be asked to express their gratitude for good sight by helping those who must go through life without it. Only one appeal is made each year. All campaign workers are voluntary. Donations to the Institute are exempt from income tax and official receipts will be issued promptly by C. L. Jewell, campaign treasurer. Give generously.

about the things you buy in wartime

When you go to a store to buy and can't get the things you want, remember that war upsets the whole machinery of production and supply. This is true not only in Canada but throughout the whole world.

As Canada is devoting over half her production making things for war it is inevitable that civilian supply must be reduced.

We just can't produce all the things required to fill the greatly increased civilian demands, but production efforts are being directed to see that the best use is made of materials and labour that are available for the production of civilian goods.

Remember these facts when you have difficulties in your shopping.

Chairman
Wartime Prices & Trade Board

THE STORY OF CHILDREN'S UNDERWEAR

OBVIOUSLY, babies and children must have underwear! So—the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has given special attention to the production of these garments.

The problem has not been so much one of a lack of raw materials, but of getting the raw materials (wool, cotton, rayon), spun into yarns—and then knit into garments. Canada has never produced all the wool, cotton and rayon yarn she requres. We have always had to get a substantial part of our requirements from other countries, even in peacetime. But since the war, there has been an acute shortage of underwear yarns everywhere.

There has been a greatly increased demand in addition to production difficulties. The efforts of the Board to meet the problem are given below.

THE INCREASED DEMAND RESULTED FROM:

More babies . . . It's apparently always the way in wartime.

Reduced use of second-hand or "hand-me-down" garments.

Extra buying . . . Perhaps too many people wanted to be "on the safe side."

Increased consumer buying . . . More people with more money.

Less home sewing . . . Mothers have been working outside the home.

Huge demand for underwear by Armed Forces.

MORE UNDERWEAR: but still not enough!

The reason is that it just has not been possible to produce with the skilled workers and machines available to the United Nations enough yarn and garments to meet the increased demands all over the world.

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE ABOUT IT

✓First of all the Board found out the kind and quantity of garments Canadian children must have.

✓This showed that the public is asking for more than is actually needed.

✓So plans were made to see, by directing production all down the line, if we could meet the swollen demand as nearly as possible.

✓Each manufacturer was told to produce an increased number of garments.

✓A constant check is kept on mills to see that they are producing the required number.

✓Manufacturers not previously making children's underwear were induced to go into its production. An additional 600,000 garments will be provided this year from these sources.

✓Negotiations were conducted with production authorities in other countries for supplies of yarn to Canadian knitters for use in children's underwear.

✓Primary cotton mills were required to divert spinning facilities from fabric manufacture to the spinning of underwear yarns.

✓Arrangements were made through National Selective Service to direct more labour to the underwear mills.

✓A special campaign was launched to enlist part time workers.

✓Distribution to retail stores was organized to ensure equitable supply to all areas.

The greatly increased supply of children's underwear resulting from these efforts is shown by the relative sizes of the figures below.

LE HAVRE CAPTURED BY 1ST CANADIAN ARMY

BRITISH IN HOLLAND HEAD FOR SIEGFRIED LINE

Falls 36 Hours After Beginning Of Fierce Assault

American Forces Fight 5 Miles Inside Germany

By JAMES M. LONG
(A. P. Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 12 (AP) — British forces of the 1st. Canadian Army captured the great French Channel port of Le Havre—needed to supply the massive assault on Germany—early today, while 290 miles to the east American tanks and troops fought into the Siegfried Line five miles inside Germany.

A battlefront dispatch from Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, said the fiercely-resisting Germans at Le Havre, France's second port, surrendered at 11.30 a.m., 36 hours after the crushing British assault under Lt.-Gen. Crerar began and after a thunderous air and sea bombardment by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F.

The war swept into Germany with a United States 1st. Army plunge over the frontier. Farther south, the United States 3rd. Army cracked through the old Maginot Line to Thuionville, on the Moselle, north of French bridgeheads already forged across that river.

Solid Front

A solid front from the North Sea to the Mediterranean was formed by a junction of the 3rd. Army and the 7th. Army. The British 2nd. Army was over The Netherlands border, pounding toward a less formidable section of the line guarding Germany.

First Army forces, driving forty miles in 48 hours, thrust into Germany northwest of Trier, and apparently were within five to ten miles of that city, the biggest Siegfried fort centre on the Lower Moselle.

Hard on their right flank, the 3rd. Army slashed through the Maginot fort town of Metz so fast its big guns were found intact, and carried the battle on to Thionville. This brought the struggle to or beyond the Moselle along a 45-mile front from above Metz to below Nancy.

Junction of the 3rd Army and the 7th Army which had driven from its Mediterranean beachheads in 28 days to link with the Allied forces which landed in Normandy June 6 came yesterday.

At the same time on the eastern front Russian patrols crossed from Lithuania into East Prussia and remained on German soil for a time as they carried out a reconnaissance mission.

Le Havre Commander Wounded.

One report of the surrender of Le Havre said the German commander had been badly wounded and his deputy had ordered the garrison of 5,000 to lay down its arms. Surrender came 36 hours after Tommies had launched an all-out assault on the port.

British 2nd Army troops widened their breach in the Albert Canal line in Belgium. The break-through there enabled the British to cross the Dutch border and head for the less formidable portion of the German defensive system protecting the shortest route to Berlin.

The British made their push into the Netherlands—aimed toward the communications centre of Eindhoven—1½ miles north of the tiny village of Degroote, which was reached after a German stand with self-propelled 88-mm. guns and a few tanks was beaten down at Machtel, a cross-roads northeast of Bourg-Leopold.

30,000 Germans in Pocket.

The Channel coast now was clear but for about 30,000 Germans putting up a last stand at Boulogne, Calais, Dunkerque and in the tightly drawn pocket south of the Schelde mouth.

Wissant and Sangatte, midway between Calais and Cap Gris Nez, were captured. Cap Gris Nez is one area from which long-barreled German batteries fire into southeast England, 23 miles away.

Canadian troops driving north of Ostend on the Belgian coast hurled the Nazis back to Blankenberge. The net around the Germans tightened there as Polish contingents pushed close to Brugge and the British liberated Lokeren (pop. 25,000) and St. Niklaas (pop. 42,000) midway between Gent and Antwerp and six miles south of the Dutch border.

Allied air forces were battering one more German embarkation, this time the hasty German withdrawal from the thinning strip north of the Schelde mouth to the Dutch islands to the north. British Mosquitos alone last night were reported to have destroyed 50 evacuation barges in that area.

U. S. columns had previously threatened the German border east of the fallen Belgian fortress of Liege and at Metz, in France. The thrust which carried over the German border came midway between these two points and its speed apparently caught the Germans off balance again.

The area of the invasion into Germany is not one of the stronger sections of the Siegfried line. In pre-war days when the west wall was constructed the Germans counted for protection there on the Duchy of Luxembourg's neutrality—which the Nazis themselves violated in 1940—and the natural defences of the region including the Ardennes Forest and the razor-back hills of Schwarzwalder and Hockwald and the river barriers of the Moselle and the Rhine.

Motor-borne infantry of the 1st U.S. army hit the outer line of the Siegfried system in a 25-mile sweep to the northeast which liberated the city of Luxembourg, capital of the Duchy. The great German industrial city of Koblenz and the Rhine were from 55 to 60 miles ahead of the Americans down the valley of the lower Moselle.

The American invasion yesterday marked the first time since Napoleon's day that an invading force from the west had entered the Reich in more than patrol strength. The Americans advanced behind an artillery barrage.

American troops also pushed deeper into the Ardennes Forest to near Bastogne, 18 miles from Germany.

The junction of the 3rd and 7th armies wrote the doom of remaining units of the German 19th army sealed in central and southwestern France.

WEST AND SOUTH GERMANY HIT BY 2,500 PLANES

Moscow Reports Scores Of U.S. Bombers Land At Red Bases After Bombing Chemnigz

FIRES IN DARMSTADT

By HOWARD COWAN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 12 (AP) — American planes numbering probably upward of 2,500 struck at Germany from the west and south today, accelerating the march of Allied armies toward the Rhineland.

Moscow reported scores of U.S. 8th. Air Force bombers landed on Russian bases yesterday after bombing Chemnigz, 50 miles south of Leipzig.

The German radio filled European air waves with warnings of bombers and fighters approaching from Britain, France and Italy, declaring in one announcement that 1,300 Allied bombers were nearing western Germany. It was the fifth straight day of heavy air attacks.

Before dawn, R.A.F. Mosquitos plunged many two-ton bombs into Berlin and R.A.F. Lancasters pounded Darmstadt in the upper Rhineland in force. The nocturnal blows came after perhaps the most active air battle in Germany in which 175 "last ditch" German planes were destroyed by U.S. pilots and gunners.

Forty-eight American heavy bombers and 29 fighters failed to return yesterday.

The R.A.F. lighted great fires in Darmstadt, a chemical industry centre of 100,000 population. Darmstadt is about 15 miles south of Frankfort, and 85 miles east of Trier, near which, it was disclosed yesterday, American troops now are battling the Nazis on German soil. An important railway feeding German forces along the Rhine passes through the city.

German night fighters put up strong opposition to the Darmstadt attack, said the Air Ministry, in acknowledging the loss of 15 aircraft in all night operations—which also included extensive minelaying in enemy waters. Seven German fighters were shot down.

Supplementing the two night penetrations by the R.A.F. Mosquitos of the British 2nd. Tactical Air Force attacked 100 trucks, 50 barges and seven trains in Holland.

Attacks Ships Evacuating Huns

Spitfires from the 2nd. Tactical Air Force attacked five enemy ships evacuating troops across the Schelde to the Dutch Islands. Another coastal vessel was beached and a small destroyer and four minesweepers were damaged.

The Air Ministry disclosed nine heavy bombers were lost on the R.A.F.'s daylight attack yesterday on oil plants in the Ruhr a few hours after more than 1,000 U.S. heavy bombers attacked three other refineries.

R.A.F. Beaufighters swept four large German minesweepers off the Norwegian coast with rockets, cannon fire and torpedoes yesterday afternoon. All were set afire and three were left burning fiercely. No planes were lost.

Von Trott, One of Seven Condemned Germans, Told of Anti-Nazi Plot

Stockholm, Sept. 12 — (AP) — Adam Von Trott Zu Stolz, one of seven Germans who, Berlin announced yesterday, have been condemned to death for complicity in the July 20 plot to kill Adolf Hitler, was reported today to have visited Stockholm in June to inform the Allies about the anti-Nazi underground movement in Germany and obtain their reaction.

An informant who can be regarded as trustworthy said he saw Von Trott here twice, talking with him once for two hours and on another occasion for six hours concerning conditions in Germany.

Von Trott saw a number of Allied representatives, but made no contact with the Russians, the informant declared.

The Berlin radio asserted yesterday that Von Trott, a former secretary in the German foreign office, had used business trips to Stockholm to "contact enemy powers."

The informant said he thought perhaps the impressions which Von Trott obtained here might have resulted in an "over-hasty move" on the part of the anti-Hitler plotters.

He added that organized opposition to the Nazis had been hard hit by the purge which followed, but said there "still are centres of opposition which may be important when collapse and occupation comes."

While here, Von Trott was said to have expressed the view that the opposition movement in Germany should have some assurances that the Germans would be granted "minimum possibilities of living after the war."

"The formula of unconditional surrender," Von Trott said, "is sterile and in its effect harmful on the opposition movement."

89 JAP SHIPS SUNK, DAMAGED AT MINDANAO

Allied Sea-Borne Blow Lays Waste Five Large Airfields

68 PLANES WIPED OUT

Pearl Harbor, Sept. 12 (AP)—In the first Allied sea-born blow against the Philippines, a United States carrier force struck Mindanao Friday, destroying or damaging 89 Japanese ships, wiped out 68 planes and laid waste to five airfields and other installations vital to Japan's defence of the conquered island.

The attack—announced late yesterday from fleet headquarters here—blanketed important known enemy bases on the island from Sarangani Bay on the south to Surigao at the extreme north. It was about 500 miles westward of any previous carrier strike in the southwest Pacific.

The action was notable not only for destruction inflicted but for the absence of real surface or aerial opposition.

Most spectacular of the action was the complete destruction of a 52-ship convoy discovered off Hinatuan Bay on the eastern side of Mindanao, most southerly of the Philippines. In the convoy were 32 loaded coastal cargo ships and 20 Sampans. Cruisers, destroyers and carrier aircraft destroyed every ship.

Attacking Foce Secret.

The size of the attacking air fleet was secret but a Berlin broadcast earlier said 300 fighters and bombers swarmed over Mindanao.

"The airfields at Del Monte, Valencia, Cagayan, Buayan and Davao were bombed and strafed," Admiral Nimitz' communique said. Eight enemy planes rose to contest these attacks and all were shot down.

Approximately 60 aircraft caught on the ground were destroyed.

Aside from obliterating the convoy, the task force—part of the 3rd fleet—pounced on enemy shipping in Sarangani Bay, Davao Gulf and near Cagayan and Surigao. Their blows resulted in "the sinking or probable sinking of 16 small cargo ships, one medium cargo ship, one patrol craft and many sampans, and setting fire to two small cargo ships and at least 17 sampans."

U.S. plane losses "were very light" and there was no damage to American surface ships, the navy said.

8TH AND 5TH ARMIES JAMMED AGAINST MAIN GOTHIC LINE

Forces Make Two-to-Three Mile Advances Along the Entire Front

COULD TRAP NAZIS

Rome, Sept. 12 (AP) — The British and Allied 5th. Armies jammed against the main Gothic Line positions across Italy today "in many places along the entire front" after two-to-three mile advances through high mountain positions in the sector north of Florence, headquarters announced.

Heavy fighting continued on the Adriatic where Poles, British and Canadians have been slugging within sight of coastal Rimini for a week or more.

The Gothic Line, the strongest and last German position south of the Po Valley, stretches 125 miles across the peninsula and is based on towering Apennine Mountains which rise to 6,000 feet and canalize north-south traffic through narrow, easily-defended passes.

Near the Adriatic in the Rimini sector, however, the mountains thin out and the terrain is simpler. A break-through here would put the Allies onto the level Emelian and Lombard Plains to the Po, affording opportunities to cut German communications and entrap German troops in the main Gothic Line positions.

Air Forces Grounded

As Gen. Alexander's troops moved forward, medium and light bombers attacked rail and road bridges, gun positions and other battle objectives in Northern Italy. Supply dumps and command posts were struck. Foul weather grounded heavy bombers.

The headquarters communique said the chief advances were "into the high ground north of the Upper Siege," north of Florence.

One 5th. Army spearhead was within 35 miles of Bologna in the Po Valley. Other troops cleared out the provincial capital of Pistola and Prato and advanced on northeast.

The Germans said the "detaching movements to the Apennine (Gothic) Line were concluded according to plan," indicating a decisive battle for North Italy was at hand. At nearest point, the Canadians and British were four miles from Rimini, heavily-fortified eastern anchor of German defences.

WAR IN PACIFIC IS MAIN CONCERN OF CONFERENCE

Canada's Part in War Against Japan Greater If Russia Remains Aloof in Pacific

CANADA'S STRENGTH

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Sept. 12 —(CP)— A sizeable Canadian interest in the Quebec war conference of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt was indicated today as the two leaders entered their first full day of joint work.

As intimated yesterday by Stephen Early, presidential press secretary, the conference is largely concerned with the Pacific war which, unlike the war in Europe, has not yet reached the stage where victory is in sight.

Russia yesterday was ruled out of the conference picture and, by inference, out of any immediate participation in the war against Japan in a message from Marshal Stalin declining an invitation to come here—on the ground, he cannot leave his duties at home at present.

Canada's Part in Pacific War.

As the third air power among the United Nations leaving Russia out of account and as a sizeable naval power, Canada's role in the Pacific war must be greater if Russia remains aloof than if the Soviet Union makes bases and forces available for the last stages of the Pacific fighting.

The usual order of work in any military planning is: 1. Appraisal of the enemy's strength; 2. Decision on the forces required to reduce that strength and the method of bringing those forces to bear; and 3. Mobilization of the forces.

No one outside the highest military circles knows how far the Pacific plan was carried at last year's conference here, but it is known that in the interval events and circumstances have arisen which necessarily call for review of existing plans, if not the making of new ones to carry farther into the future.

Rapid Progress of War in Europe.

One of these events is the rapid progress of the war in Europe. A consequence of that is that it may soon be possible to shift both air and naval strength from the Atlantic and European theatres to the Pacific and Asiatic theatres. Canada has both, particularly air strength, and after the United States is the strongest air power bordering the Pacific.

Indication the Canadian government is ready to furnish the conference with the fullest information on air matters and with a prompt answer to any requests has become apparent. Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, Air Officer Commander-in-Chief of the R.C.A.F. overseas returned from London to be available to the conference.

The Ottawa chiefs of staff of the three Canadian armed services are in attendance, too, and will be here on and off throughout, if not continuously. The air force, however, is the only service to recall its overseas chief.

Survivors of Corvette Regina Relate Story of Ship's Sinking

By FRED BACKHOUSE
(C.P. Staff Writer)

New York, Sept. 12 (CP)—Three officers and approximately 50 ratings of H.M.C.S. Regina landed here late last night, in the first contingent of survivors of the Canadian corvette which sunk off the southwest coast of England more than a month ago with the loss of 30 men.

They came here in the famous liner which carried Prime Minister Churchill to Canada and then sailed on to the United States with several hundred American soldiers who formed the major part of its load.

Two other officers—the commanding officer of the Regina, Lt. Jack W. Radford, of Sydney, N.S., and the ship's doctor, Surg. Lieut. Grant Gould of Toronto—were allowed to land at Halifax to report to naval authorities. The remainder of this contingent is due to reach Canada early Wednesday.

Lieut. Roddick Barclay Thomas, of Longueil, Que., and Lieut. Herman Maier of Calgary, said the Regina sank off the southwest coast of Ireland at 10.30 p.m. August 8, exactly 28 seconds after she struck a mine and blew up.

Maier, 27-year-old signals officer, said the Regina was escort ship for a convoy ferrying men and supplies from England to Normandy. Both officers agreed that earlier published reports of the sinking were erroneous. The convoy, they said, was at some distance off the coast of England when an American merchant ship struck a mine and began to sink.

Three Canadian Air Squadrons Use Bases in Belgium

Are Taking Heavy Toll Of Shipping on Rhine

With the R.C.A.F. in Belgium, Sept. 12 — (CP Cable) — At least three Canadian fighter squadrons—the Wildcat, Nomad and City of Ottawa — now are flying from mobile bases in Belgium and taking a heavy toll of enemy Rhine shipping and road traffic, it was permitted to disclose today.

They are under command of Group Capt. G. R. McGregor, D.F.C., of Montreal, a veteran of the Battle of Britain.

The Canadians are flying rocket-firing Typhoons and won the honor of being the first to plaster German territory with their rockets when engaged in shooting up German shipping on the Rhine while flying from Belgian bases.

A few days ago the base where the Canadians are stationed was the landing point for members of the Belgian air force based in Britain, who were permitted to fly to their homeland and visit their families for the first time in four years.

Grateful to Canadians

The people in the neighborhood can't do enough for the Canadians, many of whom, since being based here, have tasted for the first time in four years ice cream and raisin pie.

The Nomads, commanded by Sqdn. Ldr. Jack Berines of Tothill, Alta., reported after their first attack on German targets last Thursday streams of refugees marching toward the Netherlands border from Germany.

The first Canadian Typhoon flight against Germany was led by FO. Royce Johns of Saskatoon. The operation left two tugs smoking on the Rhine, when they were hit by cannon-fire.

"Everything looked peaceful until we opened up," said Johns. "We had to fly through a curtain of flak, and then we left in a hurry."

"There were a lot of refugees trudging along the road towards Holland with some horse-drawn vehicles," FO. John Roberts reports. "There was light but concentrated flak."

Attack Transportation

At the same time two other RCAF dive-bomber squadrons attacked enemy transportation near the German border of The Netherlands. One of the squadrons was the City of Ottawa, led by Sqdn. Ldr. Wm. Pentland, of Calgary. The Ottawas damaged two trains.

So keen is the watch kept on enemy roads that when the Wildcats arrived in the Thiel area in Beligum to attack a column of horse-drawn vehicles, they found all the horses dead and no signs of vehicular movement. Squadrons of R.A.F. Typhoons had done the job, arriving from a neighboring field ten minutes earlier.

The Canadians instead attacked two petrol-carrying barges. Later the Nomads knocked out six locomotives.

Among the fliers based in Belgium are FO. John Stitt, White River, Ont.; FO. Ian Stitt, Calgary; FO. Pierre Bernhart, Vancouver.

BRITISH SCATTER JAPANESE BURMA-BOUND CONVOY

Rocket-Firing Beaufighters Engage in 23-Hour Fight

NO PLANES LOST

Kandy, Ceylon, Sept. 12 —(CP)— Pouncing on a convoy of escorted Japanese merchant ships apparently Burma-bound across the Andaman Sea, rocket-firing British Beaufighters scattered the ships over hundreds of square miles of ocean in a 23-hour fight, Allied Headquarters announced today.

The Beaufighters made 21 separate attacks after first sighting the convoy on Sept. 9, the announcement said, and achieved "the greatest single air and sea victory in this theatre."

"The total force of the enemy was believed to have been at least 15 strong, thus representing the strongest enemy sea force yet subjected to air attack in this area," it added.

None of the Beaufighters was lost in the attack, which raged off the Tenasserim coast far south of Rangoon and at extreme range for the attacking planes.

Prime Minister King's Place In Allied Conference

Quebec, Sept. 12 — (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King, officially host at the Second Quebec Conference, again will be a good deal more than that to his friends Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

It is an open secret that the British and American statesmen respect the counsel of the Prime Minister of the senior Dominion, who has been in constant touch with international developments in the many years he has held the portfolio of Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Both Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt have referred to Mr. King as their good friend. The informality of their visits has given evidence of the esteem in which the three hold each other.

While the conference is primarily a British-American meeting, Canada as the fourth power among the Allies has an important voice in any discussions among the United Nations and will assist in implementing decisions made here for speeding the victory.

BOYS START FIRES IN HOLLOW TREES

Touching matches to hollow trees seems to be a hobby for some mischievous lads in the city who apparently delight in seeing the fire reels operate. Several times within the past month hollow trees in various parts of the city have been reported burning, this again occurring Monday night on Catharine Street when the hollow stump of a tree sawed down some time ago became ablaze. Firemen extinguished the blaze before any damage resulted.

A second run at eleven o'clock Monday evening was necessary as the result of a grass fire on Wellington Street.

Child Burned By Cigarette

While playing with other children near his home at 64 Catherine St., eight-year-old Danny Peoples, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Peoples, sustained a nasty cigarette burn beneath the left eye. Police were called and upon investigation found the Peoples lad was playing with his usual playmate, when a strange boy walked up and removing a lighted cigarette from his mouth, jabbed it into the little Peoples boy's face inflicting a nasty burn.

Selective Service Manager Addresses Rotary Club on 'Job' Problem After the War Ends

Level-Headed Buying and Proper Administration of Personal Funds Will Help

TRIBUTE PAID

The post-war potential purchasing power of Canadians if administered by level-headed buying and administration of personal funds, will go a long way toward solving the "job" problem for years to come. Mr. H. H. Reed, National Selective Service manager told Belleville Rotarians at their weekly luncheon on Monday.

"If we don't knot our purse-strings and padlock our cash boxes, but buy sensibly what we need, then we will all have jobs," he said. In the social scheme of things Canadians are interdependent one on another. The farmer, the industrialist, the worker, by judicious application of working together and buying from one another can assist in maintaining a decent standard of living that will eliminate a repetition of the horrible depression of 1930.

Only Want a Job.

Declaring that the boys and girls now overseas only want a job with a decent living wage assuring them freedom from want and fear, Mr. Reed added that "by the grace of God and the application of the Golden Rule in daily business lives, we can take them in as partners and see that they get that job with good wages and its consequent freedoms."

Mr. Reed paid tribute to employers of the district inasmuch as they "dug in and did a real job of work" after the functions of the National Selective Service officers was understood by them. "You thought" he smiled, 'that we were a bunch of fellows who knew nothing of your problems when we sent you men and women who would not fit into your scheme of things." "Skilled labor," he explained, "was needed in high priority jobs and we sent you the next best, with reasons that you later understood."

Upwards of 400,000 people left agriculture for factories to do war work, but Canada, despite this fact, has increased her agricultural production each year. Over 765,000 were absorbed by the armed services but Canada took off its collective coat and produced the ships that her fighting navy needed. Ships numbering 340 were built in Canadian shipyards.

Nearly 10 billion dollars worth of contracts have been awarded by the Department of Munitions and Supply since war began. Canada gave Britain a billion dollars in goods. She has 45,000 men in her merchant navy. The army doesn't know the word "quit."

Nearly one million persons are directly or indirectly engaged in war employment—800,000 of these actually engaged in manufacturing war equipent.

Staff Reduction.

Selective Service has arrangements set up to take care of transfers of help from one plant to another if and when reducing on production of certain types of war material takes place. On reductions in male staff of over 10 persons, a Selective Service officer visits the plant concerned and a case history of each individual is made up and transfer arranged as the officer knows where men with certain skills are needed. If there are none on military postponement in the department affected then a switching of staff is arranged so that at least 20 per cent of the amount of the lay-off will be men on postponement from military training in that particular plant.

"Should the Department of Munitions and Supply cancel several war contracts," Mr. Reed stated, "provision is made where persons affected can be transferred to other towns where their services are needed in the war effort. Provisions have been made for certain payments to offset a loss of wages through transfer. However, in any reduction in staff, men on postponement from military training will not be transferred but must report for training."

"If a man has skill that is vitally needed, the cost of moving him his family and household effects can be assumed by the public treasury.

Very Large Fund.

Referring to Unemployment Insurance, the speaker asserted that it now has a fund on hand amounting to $96,988,313 for the payment of benefits to take care of the period of change-over from war production to peacetime pursuits. Benefits range from $4.08 for a single person in the low wage group to $14.40 a week for a claimant with dependents.

"A man or woman in the armed services," Mr. Reed said, "who has served one, two or three years, gets full credit for the service period on completion of 15 weeks in insurable employment aftre demobilization."

Canadian agriculture, industry and lumbering will play a big part in the rebuilding of post-war Europe, he said. There will be plenty of markets for Canada's products. This is where many peace time jobs will have their source. Government assistance in financing will have to be resorted to—and why not. The machinery is being set up for it.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Jack Deacon with the thanks of the club expressed by Rotraian Howard Clarke. Guests included several from Picton, and officers and directors of the Belleville Air Cadet Squadron. President Orland Pinkston was in the chair.

Kinsmen Club Thanked for Fags Sent Overseas

"This war isn't over yet, worse luck. We are fighting a tough bunch of hombres, especially these young fanatical Nazis. However, whenever we receive shipments of Canadian cigarettes it cheers us up to know the people at home haven't forgotten us," wrote G. H. Gibson in reply to the Kinsmen Club for his recent shipment of 300 cigarettes received while battling the Nazi across Europe.

"Sometimes we Belleville boys here in Italy wonder just what we would have done for a smoke had it not have been for the cigarettes we received from the Kinsmen and other such grand clubs in Belleville. The fact that the smokes arrive regularly is what we appreciate most," added Tpr. Broad, while Cpl. Tobe added similar remarks, as did Bob Holland even while on Atlantic convoy.

"It's great to know you have a Canadian cigarette to help pull you through when the going gets tough against Jerry," added Gnr. P. R. Thorn, as scores of similar replies are received from overseas as Belleville boys tender their thanks for cigarettes already received, Chairman Buster LaBarr stated today.

The following Belleville boys were sent individual shipments of 300 cigarettes through the Kinsmen Fag Fund this week.

Rules Disorderly Conduct Cannot be Committed In Police Station

New York, Sept. 12 — (AP) — It's legally impossible to commit disorderly conduct in a police station, Magistrate Charles Solomon ruled in Coney Island court. Patrolman Henry R. Griffith accused Marjorie Passeau, 35, of Brooklyn, of entering the Fort Hamilton police station in a boisterous manner, refusing to leave, and trying to heave a bucket of sand at him. Solomon said no breach of public peace was involved since the only persons affected were police officers whose duty it was to preserve peace.

Druggists Hope For Record Sale Of War Savings Stamps

Plans to further the War Savings Stamp drive which will be climaxed with a draw for a $500 Victory Bond featured a special meeting of the Druggists' Association of Belleville last night. The draw will be made on Oct. 4th at the Drug Trading semi-annual meeting to be held in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto.

Ranking high in former drives along similar lines, druggists of this city are going all out in their efforts to better former efforts. Another incentive is the fact that a $50 Victory Bond will go to the store that sells the ballot that wins the major prize.

Free chances at the Bond will be given purchasers of war stamps. One stamp equals one chance but four stamps are good for five chances at the big bond.

The drive is well under way at the present time and response has been good, but the local druggists are hoping for a record-breaking amount in their efforts to assist the nation in the final drive for victory.

POLICE COURT

Motorists, who continue to violate city traffic regulations, continue to appear in police court to answer to their misdemeanors and the usual pleas accepted by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd is that of guilty. Today was no exception as numerous motor vehicle drivers paid the conventional dollar and costs after pleading guilty to charges of violating the parking by-law.

Otherwise in the traffic section of the court, Harvey Murray, Frankford, admitted to a careless driving charge count with the result he paid $12.50 including costs. Speeding over city streets cost Oron Oliver, Napanee, $8 in all while John Rosebush, Stirling, paid the minimum fine on a minor L.C.A. count.

Joseph Turcotte, Kingston, appeared on a charge of vagrancy. "I received complaints to the effect this man was panhandling and at any rate he couldn't give a good account of his actions," stated P. C. Evans. Turcotte said he was en route to Kingston to visit his sick sister, but when Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson introduced the accused man's list of previous convictions, His Worship found him guilty and sentenced Turcotte to 12 days, which allowed him his liberty today as he had been on remand after being arrested on Sept. 1st.

Other cases listed for trial were adjourned for a week at the request of E. E. Follwell and R. D. Arnott, K.C., respective solicitors in three other cases.

Four Veterans of Italian Campaign Home on Furlough

Seeing friends and relatives in the Belleville district for the first time in almost five years, veterans of the Italian campaign arrived back in Canada over the weekend. Included were Cpl. J. Garrison, Gordon Street, Pte. C. E. Smith, Front Street, and L.-Cpl. Boyd Findlay of this city and Pte. E. Carson Moon of Tweed.

Enlisting in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment early in the war, L.-Cpl. Findlay proceeded overseas in December, 1939, and after rigorous training in Scotland proceeded to the Mediterranean war theatre as member of the Canadian Provost Corps. Missing the Sicilian campaign he was delayed in his entry into the battle zone on the Italian mainland when his ship was struck by enemy fire and was forced to return to the African mainland.

In his multifarious duties as member of the Provost Corps Findlay has seen action on both the Adriatic and western coasts of Italy. First going up the Adriatic coast he was in the thick of the fight in the Ortona district, his unit later being pulled out for a rest only to return in time for the victorious Allied drive from Anzio beachhead on to Rome. According to Findlay the Allies advanced approximately 180 kilometres in something like 17 days.

Although not actually firing the guns Provost Corps members are well to the front in the battle zone. They act as traffic policemen making certain that roads are kept clear for the bringing up of supplies; it is their duty to deal with possible enemy collaborators in the occupied zones; they assist in burying the dead and in the return of prisoners to points behind the lines.

Declaring himself to be "one of the fortunates" Findlay went through the Italian campaign without getting a scratch. He is now back in Canada on a 30-day furlough, but expects to return overseas "possibly to France, possibly to Italy." He is of Scotch parentage and had been in Canada ten years prior to his enlistment.

Another Belleville district boy returning with much to tell of the beauty of the Italian countryside is Pte. Carson Moon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Moon of Tweed. He too has been overseas since December, 1939, and during the thick of the fighting around Ortona was a jeep driver with the H. and P. E. Regiment with which he went overseas.

Assisting in picking up wounded for return to first-aid dressing station Pte. Moon had the happy privilege of possibly saving the life of a fellow Tweed soldier. Coming on the Canadian soldier lying face down and badly hurt with shrapnel wounds, Pte Moon turned him over and recognized him as Pte. Rashotte of Tweed. He immediately rushed him to first aid centre for treatment.

Pte. Moon too is back in Canada on 30-day furlough and expects to be returned overseas at the termination of his leave. Over the weekend he visited with his aunt, Mrs. J. Morrison, Pinnacle Street.

SURVIVORS

(An Ottawa announcement of Aug. 17 said the Regina went to the assistance of a merchant ship in difficulties, herself became damaged, and then headed for shallow water in an attempt at beaching but the "abandon-ship" order had to be given before she made shore.)

The Regina immediately ordered an L.C.T. to carry out rescue operations and then proceeded to the spot to supervise.

"It was a clear moonlight night," said Thomas, 24-year-old anti-submarine officer. "Most of our crew were on deck to watch what was going on as the L.C.T. took off men from the merchant ship—that's why our casualty list is much lighter than it would have been."

"Suddenly there was a violent explosion and every man on deck was hurled into the sea. Those who died were either trapped below decks or killed by the force of the explosion. The sea was covered with the bobbing heads of men clinging to Carley rafts, chunks of wood or just floating around in their life-jackets. Everyone seemed calm, because we knew that it was just a matter of time before the L. C. T. could pick us up."

Thomas said he clung to a spar and Maier shared a Carley with some other men. In about half an hour the L.C.T. had picked up all the survivors.

The survivors were landed at an English port, where the more seriously wounded were immediately rushed to hospital.

Maier and Thomas said that if there were any heroes at all of the sinking they were the ship's doctor, Lieut. Gould, and his assistant, Sick Berth Attendant William Oneschuck, of Windsor, Ont., both of whom were wounded in the explosion.

"They worked like slaves with the injured men on board the L.C.T.," said Maier. "There were men in need of help everywhere. Some of them were seriously injured, and Grant Gould and Oneschuck went from one to the other until the sweat poured from them."

Second Quebec Conference

History will not forget the momentous conferences which have been held and will be held in connection with the prosecution of the war against Nazi Germany and Japan and for several years against Italy until her surrender and entry into the war on the side of the Allies. It seems a long time since first Mr. Churchill and Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt met off the east coast of Canada in the first meeting in the days before the United States was in the war. That was at a time when Britain stood virtually alone, but supported by American aid in war materials and production. Since that day through many conferences the strategy of the United Nations have been carried on step by step to the approaching culmination of Allied victory.

Now the great leaders of the English-speaking peoples are again at Quebec and Marshal Stalin has sent his regrets that military matters prevent his presence. Canada welcomes the Prime Minister of Britain and the President of the United States to her soil for a second conference.

Steady progress has marked the course of the United Nations against the dire menace of Hun militarism and Japanese aggression. The Allied decisions have been preeminently successful. They have marked the progressive development of Allied power. They have had the benefit of a wide range of sage counsel and advice—no doubt the greatest series of conferences of nations ever held in the history of the world. Compared with these the meetings of Hitler and Mussolini ever and anon in the early days of the war were puny and insignificant. Theirs were meetings to plot against mankind, but the Allied meetings have been for the benefit of the future of all humanity for even the despicable enemies will in the end benefit by the meetings of the Allied leaders and the victories of Allied arms for even they will be living in a world of security.

Great decisions will be made, these likely will be associated with the victory which draws near and likewise will relate to the war against Japan after Germany is removed from the sphere of conflict.

This conference can look back upon the conferences of the past and the step-by-step progress of the Allied cause in its growth of power and achievement of victories with intense satisfaction as their hopes have been so markedly realized.

Forthcoming 7th Victory Loan

In a year of epoch-making events, the people of Canada will contribute to the Seventh Victory Loan, the minimum objective of which is placed at $1,300,000,000 or one hundred millions above the Sixth Victory Loan goal and over one hundred millions below the total subscription to the last loan. The new loan will be launched on October 23rd.

Minister of Finance Ilsley has always had a profound faith in the readiness of Canadians to invest in the loans so necessary to the conduct of the war. He has never been disappointed by the people and he will not be disappointed in the forthcoming campaign. That the loan will reach and pass the minimum goal is certain, that it may reach the largest total ever subscribed to a Canadian loan is more than a possibility, it may prove a fact.

The word and the thought "Victory" are on every tongue and in every mind. "Victory" is the stamp on everything today. It has been set there by the courage and devotion of the men in arms, by the comprehensive and perfect strategy of the Allied military commands, the broad vision and statecraft of the governments of the people of the Allied lands and by the ceaseless and tireless endeavor of the home front. The legions of the United Nations are before the walls of Hitler's "fortress" to which his armies have retreated and which has had no roof protection against the mighty fleets of the air forces of the Allies. The last blows will be struck on German soil, the home of tyranny and militarism.

The forthcoming loan will be in very fact a "Victory" loan and it bears the symbolic number "seven."

Everyone who knows the Canadian people realizes that this loan will be a success. Mr. Ilsley has pointed out the great needs especially at the time when the full measure of the Allied strength is being thrown into the struggle to bring Germany to her knees in the shortest possible time. Then too it is not forgotten that after Germany is thoroughly thrashed the war against Japan will be pushed on to its finale with the towering strength of the United Powers.

Victory has been the immediate objective for more than five years and it is within sight with the assurance that it will be made into lasting peace and security. In this knowledge the Canadian people will proudly and readily back the loan to the utmost of their ability.

Preserving Season

The year has reached the season of preserving and canning on a large scale. Fruits and vegetables keep crowding upon one another as they move on to maturity and the crowning of the year in the garnered harvests and stored-away crops. In thousands upon thousands of homes in Canada there is accordingly the scent and savor of the preparation of the fruits and vegetables for keeping to use in the months ahead when the fields will yield no growth and man must depend upon what has been put up in canned produce, pickles, preserves, jams, in a myriad of forms and in countless combinations. Spring has its delicate scents and summer too enjoys the fragrance of the blooms of flowers and of the clover of the fields and late summer and early autumn have the rich odors of the kitchen where the magic of the art of preserving, handed down from generation to generation, is applied to transform the fresh fruits and vegetables into food for later use.

Today the kitchen is the scene of this thriving business with the housewife in city and on farm serving in that peculiarly apt manner of hers at the rites of planning for the meals of the autumn, winter and spring seasons. The task is an added task but is cheerfully accepted, the produce is prepared by deft hands, the kettles simmer and boil and the glass and earthenware jars become the receptacles of the precious conserves in endless variety to please every taste.

These magical operations over which the housewife presides transforms the kitchen into a gastronomic paradise, for let no one deny it, every man, woman, boy and girl has a very appreciative longing for such delicious-tasting foods which a bountiful nature and woman's knowledge of the art of preserving and of the culinary art have prepared for the time ahead. The savors of the preparing foods are suggestive of the finished product and seem like an incense with which the human race acknowledges its never-ending debt to Mother Nature and her fields and plants.

Happy the homes which can count by dozens the jars of preserves, canned fruit and vegetables and honey for the days when the trees are bare and the snow flies. These are a treasury to which the housewife can turn to draw upon at will.

Sinks in Lake Slime

(Leeds Yorkshire Post)

Search has been going on for 10 days for a bomb which fell off an aircraft into a small lake at Morton, Gainsborough. The lake, around which George Eliot wrote "The Mill on the Floss," is in the grounds of Mr. W. Forrest, solicitor, and is about 50 yards from the River Trent. The lake has been drained by the N.F.C., but it is stated that the bomb is going farther and farther into the earth and they fear they will not be able to catch up with it. They have taken large quantities of slime from the lake's bed, and still the hole round the bomb fills up.

SIMPLICITY

All seemed so simple to him! Priest nor sage
Nor visionary dreamer could confuse him.
He faced serenely each succeeding age
Glad that life still could use him.

That mystery is here he didn't doubt,
But good and ill are through a lifetime blended
And what the wisest cannot know about
He took on faith and on God's will depended.

He knew with food man's hunger could be stayed;
That friendship could exist and be unlettered;
Through much of genius, art and skill are made,
By little deeds of kindness life is bettered.

He spurned the pomp of pride and outer show;
Did unto others as he would be treated;
Lived to the best he was allowed to know
And never by despair was once defeated.

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

India has the largest volunteer army in the history of the world. Without conscription or even the threat of it India has raised an army of more than 2,000,000.

Last year a civilian pilot instructor at the University of Oklahoma named Lea Craum tried to drive across the Canadian River. His car stalled and later completely sank in quicksand and disappeared from sight. Lorenz Chock, physics instructor at the university, located the exact position of the car with a dip needle, called "doodlebug."

There is an old belief that quicksilver placed in a pool or pond of water will cause it to disappear and "sink" it. The weight of the liquid metal, according to the notion, will cause it to find a passage through the bottom to subterranean cavities and carry the water away in its wake. Such a thing, of course, would be possible only under very exceptional conditions.

Another odd old belief is that a loaf of bread containing quicksilver will gravitate toward and locate the body of a drowned person in the water. Although this method of locating drowned persons is occasionally reported as successful, it is probably only a myth.

All the merchant vessels registered, enrolled or licenced under the laws and flag of a country, whether privately or publicly owned, constitute the merchant marine or the merchant fleet of that country. The term is general and embraces all ships engaged in trade by the government or private citizens, to distinguish them from naval and military craft.

The U. S. merchant marine comprises the total number of public and private vessels sailing under the U. S. flag. Sometimes the merchant flag of a country is identical with the national ensign and sometimes it is a distinctive flag flown for that purpose. Ships owned by foreigners but sailing under the U. S. flag would be regarded as part of the U. S. merchant marine. "Merchant marine" is also applied to the personnel of the merchant marine service as a whole. An individual member of the merchant marine is called a merchant sailor.

"Able seaman" is a shortened form of "able-bodied seaman," abbreviated "A.B." The underlying thought is that a merchant sailor is an able-bodied seaman only after he has had the required training and experience.

Hepburn Says C.C.F. Policies Not Workable

Oshawa, Sept. 12 (CP) Mitchell F. Hepburn, Independent Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for Elgin and former Ontario premier, urged legislation which will assist Canadian manufacturers to compete in world markets after the war.

Addressing a joint service club (Rotary, Kiwanis and Kinsmen) meeting, Mr. Hepburn said C.C.F. proposals for expropriation or confiscation of industry are not workable.

"After the war there will be no sentiment in world markets," he said. "We must sell quality goods and produce them in a manner which will not bring an added tax burden to the primary and secondary producers.

"There is no reason why we can't solve our problems without political or economic upheaval. It is a problem personal to every one of us that we should find ways and means of preventing another depression. If we jump production costs our relief lists will increase. Canada must export at a competitive price so the burden on industry must be lessened not increased. We must figure out a system of taxation that will not place an added burden on basic producers."

General Council Asks $15,000 Be Set Aside For Radio Broadcasting

London, Ont., Sept. 12 —(CP)— The 11th General Council of the United Church of Canada in session here voted to ask the Finance Board to appropriate $15,000 for radio broadcasting. The resolution said that it is hoped that $100,000 will eventually be used for radio as an instrument of Christian education and evangelism.

Rev. J. B. Thomson, former general manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, presented the report of a commission on "The Church and Radio", and paid tribute to the value of small private radio stations.

Conferences, presbyteries and local congregations were urged to make increased use of local broadcasting stations as a medium of advancing Christianity.

The commission report recommended that $100,000 eventually be spent annually for radio broadcasting and that radio pastors be provided in specified areas in Canada. A supply of transcriptions for local broadcasting and setting up of a central office for supervision and direction of an aggressive program of evangelism and education through broadcasting were also recommended.

The report also suggested a religious forum be inaugurated similar to the Farm Forum and Citizens' Forum.

A Women's Missionary Society report presented by Mrs. A. R. Self of Toronto, showed W.M.S. work being carried out in 3,000 of 7,000 congregations in Canada.

Tells of Welcome To Canadians By French People

Winnipeg, Sept. 12 (CP)—Louis Hunter, war correspondent of The Canadian Press, who recently returned to Canada, told Canadians Sunday night of the welcome their soldiers received as they captured and moved into many ruined towns and village in Normandy.

In a CBC Trans-Canada broadcast, Hunter recalled how hundreds of men, women and children found refuge in the cathedral of St. Etienne in Caen during the Allied attack on the city and of how thankful they were to get rid of the Germans.

"One old man came up to me and got down on his knees and said 'thank God the Canadians have come'," said Hunter.

"Another woman hailed the Canadians as the saviors of France. She said it was good to see khaki again after four years of the green grey color of the German uniform."

The Canadian Press war correspondent described the tragedy and hardship found in France and told how the Allies built new roads to move supplies into the country.

"Our debt to the boys at the front is one that can never fully be repaid," Mr. Hunter said. "Fighting with the finest equipment any army has ever had, they have made it possible for their people at home to enjoy freedom and comfort that no one in Europe knows."

SOME PRACTICAL USES FOR LIME

When using lime to disinfect it is necessary to use it liberally. Ordinary lime, unslaked lime, livelime, quicklime is cheap enough so that there is no reason for sparing use on the ground of expense.

For disinfecting excreta an amount of freshly prepared milk of lime about equal to the bulk of matter to be disinfected should be mixed with the matter. In using lime to disinfect matter containing typhoid bacilli, the material thus treated should be allowed to stand two hours.

Milk of lime is made by putting 1 part of quicklime in 4 parts of water—about two pounds in the gallon. It should have the consistency of thick cream. Use an amount of this about equal to the amount of matter to be disinfected, and let the mixture stand at least two hours before final disposal.

This is the most practical agent for disinfecting privies, latrines, or trenches in camp. Only enough milk of lime should be prepared to last for three or four days at most, for on standing it changes into inert carbonate of lime, which has no disinfectant value; neither has air-slaked lime any value as a disinfectant.

We are talking about ordinary lime, such as is used for whitewashing. It is not to be confused with the very pungent "chloride of lime", chlorinated lime, hypochlorite of lime, calcium hypochlorite, that comes in sealed tins and gives off the characteristic odor of chlorine.

Frequent application of whitewash—a mixture of a few pounds of quicklime with a bucket of water—to the walls of cellars, barns, animal pens and the like keeps such places clean, disinfects, prevents dampness and mould.

Dry lime is of little value for these purposes.

Prepared chalk is the purified calcium carbonate used as an antacid in various kinds of hyperacidity or sour stomach and often as a mild astringent for relief of acute diarrhea. In the booklet "So You Have Indigestion?" (copy for ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope) I recommend the use of five grains to ten grains of calcium carbonate as preferable to either sodium bicarbonate (saleratus, baking soda) or magnesia (milk of magnesia) to neutralize excessive stomach acidity and relieve such symptoms as heartburn, waterbrash and "gas". One such dose gives relief for hours, and unlike soda this antacid does not itself generate much gas (carbon dioxide) on reacting with acid in the stomach, nor does it form purgative salts.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Tonsils

Since my son was eight (he is 13 now) the school nurses have insisted that we should have his tonsils removed. But our doctor says the boy's tonsils are swollen, not diseased. The boy has repeated attacks of tonsillitis during the winter. (A. F. R.)

Answer—Disregard gratuitous advice and follow only your doctor's advice. Repeated attacks of sore throat may warrant simple tonsillotomy (not radical tonsillectomy or an attempt to remove every bit of tonsil tissue from the throat). But in general, if there is any doubt as to the treatment, I'd say let the tonsils alone. Send a stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for pamphlet "Tonsils and Adenoids."

Chronic Appendicitis?

Doctor told my son (28) he has chronic inflammation of appendix. Is there any other treatment than operation for this? (C. W.)

Answer—A diagnosis of Chronic appendicitis or chronic inflammation of the appendix is a blind guess, in my opinion. I don't mind an ordinary appendicitis operation or anything of the sort, but I'd hate to be opened for inspection on any such tentative ground as that.

Poor Kid

Two years ago our boy had acute nephritis. He made a fine recovery, but the doctor said he must never catch cold or get his feet wet. (S. F. P.)

Answer—If he were my boy he could get his feet wet and go swimming and go as nearly naked as he liked whenever he liked.

Two-Year Term for Aldermen Proposed in Notice of Motion Presented to City Council

Harbor Situation Discussed and Plans Proposed for Betterment

LENGTHY SESSION

After a summer recess of two months, the City Council resumed deliberations for the fall term in a regular session on Monday evening, it being one of the longest sessions of the year to date. The council did not adjourn until the midnight hour and most of the time was taken up by new business and enquiries from several of the members seeking information from the various chairmen of the council. Ald. Lorne McDougall gave Notice of Motion, "that he would move at the next council meeting, that a by-law be prepared to be voted on at the next municipal election, that Aldermen be elected for a term of two years and starting with next year the seven Aldermen receiving the highest number of votes be elected for two years."

Wants Harbor Plan.

Under general business Ald. Frank Follwell suggested, that the council prepare and carry through some plan for the purification of the inner harbor, which the Alderman stated was in a bad condition. "We profess to be a progressive city yet we have a condition that is not very good, and I think something should be done and done quickly to relieve the situation", said Ald. Follwell. He stated that he had made a survey of the harbor with Ald. Chamberlain and believed that if the harbor was dredged it would help, and he urged the council to consult with the Provincial and Dominion governments before the estimates were struck so that this work could be done. He suggested that the fill-in at the Bay Bridge road be opened to let a current through and that the inner harbor be dredged. Ald. Chamberlain fully concurred with the speaker.

Taken Up in Committee.

Ald. McDougall explained that this matter had been taken up in a regional planning meeting and that with the Harbor Commission plans were going forward to alleviate the condition existing in the harbor. "All realize that the harbor is an excellent asset and all will be done to fix it up," said the Alderman. Ald. Follwell thought that a sewage disposal plant was needed but was insistent, that the harbor should be fixed up as it could be used for many things. He stated that a marine warehouse had been erected on the bay and could bring plenty of business to Belleville. Mayor Rollins stated it was a matter for the department of Pensions and Health of the Federal government and that engineers had visited the city to look over the situation but that a report had not been received. Ald. Allin, chairman of that committee, stated he was sure the report would soon be in the hands of the council. Ald. Clapp suggested dams and flood gates to relieve the situation.

Noise Nuisance Discussed.

The noise nuisance, particularly the blowing of train whistles in the city was the subject of discussion and the council was in favor of drafting another anti-noise by-law. One was drafted some time ago but was only given its second reading, when the council, was informed the statutes of the Railway Transport Commission were superior to any by-law passed by a municipality. It was decided, that the Clerk should write Guelph, London, Kingston and Port Hope and secure from these municipalities the by-laws enacted, and from these draft a by-law that would be active and could be enforced.

Considerable time was expended in enquiries and the whole range of civic business was covered in this item of business. Ald. Butler set the ball rolling when he enquired as to what had been done about bus terminals in the city, stating he understood one bus line has purchased a terminal in Port Hope at a cost of $7,000. Ald. McDougall stated a meeting with the bus owners would be held in the near future and a report submitted.

May Open Avenue.

The same Alderman wanted to know if anything was being done to open Dufferin Ave., from Victoria Avenue to Queen Street. Mayor Rollins stated this could be discussed at a further meeting. Ald. Clapp asked the Chairman of Public Works if the oil distributor had been used out of town and Ald. Armstrong stated that was correct. The chairman stated Mr. McFarland had the promise of a distributor but it did not arrive and having an urgent contract at the C.O.T.C., Brockville, asked to rent the city distributor. "As the city had used the McFarland stone spreader I thought it only fair the city should reciprocate" said Ald. Armstrong. "The city secured a good rental, more than depreciation and the men from this city operating the distributer were also paid by Mr. McFarland. Ald. Clapp asked if it was used at Brighton also and Ald. Armstrong said that was correct.

Statement Denied

Ald. Clapp suggested the distributor was used out of town when city streets were in need of treatment but Ald. Armstrong stated that was not true. "All our work was done when the distributor went out of the city" he said. Ald. Harvey asked if the homes vacated by the O.S.D. could not be repaired and used to house some of the citizens badly in need of homes. It was explained, that the Federal government had rented the homes for the duration of the war and six months afterwards in lieu of the provincial government allowing the Dominion government the use of the original O.S.D. property and that nothing could be done about it at the present time or until the Federal government gave up their leases.

May Purchase Equipment

Ald. Follwell enquired as to what was being done about the A.R.P. equipment now in the city. "I understand this equipment can be bought at a nominal figure, much less than the original cost and I think it would be good business to keep this equipment in the city," he said.

Mayor Rollins stated a meeting of the A.R.P. committee is being called, and this matter will be fully discussed. Ald. Chamberlain asked if a new 'no-parking' sign would be replaced on Coleman Street south of West Bridge St. and Ald. Armstrong stated this was being attended to. Ald. Allin enquired if anything was being done to curb the driving of city bus men by the Police Commission and Mayor Rollins said the Commission had not met since the summer holidays but the matter would be brought to the attention of the Commission.

Clerk to Write Company

Ald. Allin also asked if the Ruddy Sign Company was not violating their agreement with the city by placing ads other than for War Savings Stamps and Victory Loan on the billboards erected on the lot south of the Post Office. "I think we gave that permission with the understanding only those ads were to be used" said the Alderman. The Clerk will inform the sign company of the complaint. Ald. Armstrong asked the chairman of Regional Planning if the by-law respecting Riverside Drive was ready for submission to the people at the municipal election and received a negative reply from Alderman Clapp. "I can't get the work done." It was decided to ask the City Engineer and Solicitor at the next committee meeting of the council to explain the hold-up in this connection.

Recommendation Carried

Respecting the pension system for civic employees, Ald. McDougall was not in favor of the recommendation accepted by the council which would start the employees from the present time and not include past services. Ald. Hyde was definitely against any pension plan but the council accepted the recommendation as presented.

The Swift Canadian Company was sold a lot at College & Coleman Sts. where brooder houses will be built, for $200 and this sale of property was opposed by Ald. Allin. "There have been no plans submitted and there is no guarantee that a nuisance will not be created in the erection of buildings on this property," said the Alderman.

Ald. Pringle stated, "We can't get a guarantee there will be no nuisance, because there will be no nuisance and there will be no odor or any of the horrible things that Ald. Allin imagines."

Ald. Butler asked if this was the only available industrial site in the city and Ald. Pringle said it was not but it was the only one for this type of business. Ald. Harvey asked if the industry would add any more help and Ald. Pringle explained that it would add a few but that all the employees in the main plant would have work the year round without seasonal layoffs. "There will be an assessment of approximately $17,000 on the new property" said Ald. Pringle.

Mayor Rollins agreed that the buildings would not be offensive and residents near the main plant had never complained and it was an ideal site because there was no sewer or siding required.

Will Not Have to Open Street

Ald. Allin asked if the city would be called upon to open Coleman Street and Ald. Pringle said "No." The recommendation to sell the property was then carried with Ald. Allin opposing.

William O. Steer, Wayne Wilbur, Clifford Fox, C. J. Riddell and Harvey Stewart were all sold lots on which to erect homes in the city with the stipulation that the houses be erected within a period of 2 years. A nominal sum was charged for the city lots. The pin and slot machine licences in the city were reduced to $50 per year.

Tenders Refused.

The tenders received for the purchase of the McCarthy property on William Street were refused by the council and new tenders will be called. A letter was received from the administrator of the School Board stating that the estimated grant from the Ritchie Fund of 1944 for $1,200 had not been received by the Board of Education, and if it was not forthcoming the Board would be forced to requisition for this amount from the city council. Mayor Rollins and the Chairman of Finance were appointed to interview the City Solicitor in an effort to get some action from the trustees of the fund.

A short discussion followed a recommendation that the city should join the Aeronautical Society of Canada with Ald. McDougall advocating its adoption. Ald. Clapp opposed the payment of $31 stating the city had derived no benefit from the membership. Ald. Butler thought Belleville should do its own spade work but that a membership in the society would help. Ald. Follwell said the society was not out to give the city an airport but the city should be progressive and the society could help.

Ald. Woodley wanted to know why market boards were allowed to be piled up against the police station. "It is an unsightly thing," said the Alderman. Ald. Butler promised action. Ald. Woodley also wanted the bush cut off lots on Green Street so they would become more saleable. The Alderman also asked the clerk to notify the St. John Ambulance Brigade the reason why their grant was not entertained. Fireman Roy Wardle was granted leave of absence to join the armed forces.

There were a number of by-laws passed, one regulating dance halls in the city. A licence fee of $10 will be charged. Other by-laws dealt with the transference of property. Ald. Follwell wanted to know why the excavation on Front Street had been kept open so long and Ald. Armstrong explained rock was encountered sooner than expected and logs were not available for blasting.

Recommendations.

Aldermen Chamberlain and Clapp and Mayor Rollins were appointed as a committee to ascertain the facts re the alleged purchase of certain land by the Toronto Star off Panter Park and report to council. The City Engineer was authorized to issue the Weston Bread Company Ltd., a building permit on the premises purchased from the city on Wellington Street and that the by-law restricting the area be amended. The Mayor was authorized to make necessary expenditures for Victory Day celebrations, the amount not to exceed $500.

The Belleville Salvage Committee was authorized to do their own advertising and set a time for the collection of waste paper and do their own collection. A notice is to be sent to each member of the committee. It was recommended than an optional pension scheme for present employees with compulsory registration for future employees be set up to apply to all employees at age of 65 to provide for future service contributions but to provide nothing for past services.

Woman's Body Found in Cottage

Port Franks, Ont., Sept. 12—(CP) —The possibility that Mrs. Austin Smith, 45-year-old Detroit resident, may have been shot with a high-powered rifle by a prowler was advanced today as police continued their investigation of the case.

Mrs. Smith's body was found yesterday on the floor of the bedroom of her summer cottage at this Lake Huron resort 35 miles northwest of London by her husband, a Detroit service station operator. There were two bullet wounds in her back.

Police said that a ring possibly had been taken from Mrs. Smith's finger and that her purse and automobile were missing. Police throughout Western Ontario are watching for the car, a green Buick coupe bearing Michigan licence number HL7973. Her husband said the purse may have contained $40 to $45.

There was no sign of a struggle in the cottage and the official theory was that Mrs. Smith was shot as she got out of bed. Time of death was placed at about one p.m. Sunday. She was apparently killed instantly.

Mrs. Smith was born at Byron, Ont., near London and her husband is a native of Komoka, also in the London district.

What Does Inflation Mean to You and Me?

"PLENTY BROTHER!"

Why, we couldn't buy enough food to keep our families healthy under inflation. For wages and salaries never catch up to prices when they start to soar!

How would we like to pay $1.10 a dozen for eggs? You say it can't happen? Don't forget it's already happened right here in this Dominion, during the last war. And it will happen again . . . unless we're on our toes to keep the cost of living down. Every Canadian must face this challenge! It's our responsibility.

But be of good heart. Living costs have risen LESS in Canada than anywhere else. Canada leads the world in the fight against inflation.

HERE'S HOW IT'S DONE—

In 1941, Canada determined to control the cost of living. Price ceilings were established on wages, rentals and commodities; subsidies were paid on essential foods; goods in short supply were rationed . . . so that everyone could get their fare share at a price they could afford to pay!

But control of prices is a two-way responsibility. It needs your support if it is to continue working effectively.

So make this Pledge Today!

I PROMISE to give my support to keeping the cost of living down. I will buy only what I need—I will observe the ceiling whether buying or selling goods or services. I'll pay off old debts, save for the future, invest in Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates—and will support taxes which help lower the cost of living.

Keep Your Dollar Value High!

Published by THE BREWING INDUSTRY (ONTARIO) to reveal the dangers which inflation can mean to all the people of Canada.

Many Benefits Gained From Brisk Walking

B. J. Graham Enjoys a Brisk Walk Every Day.

By HELEN FOLLETT

REMEMBER the old days when you used to loll in the family bus, drive miles and miles, traveling the long white roads? You would never think of walking, even if your destination was only three blocks away. You didn't know it, but you were in danger of taking on the limousine spread, which means that the girlish waistline would expand, hips would spread, thighs would thicken.

A brisk walk will straighten out curled up nerves, take fretful slivers from the mind, do more for the complexion than all the commercial blushes compounded by the world's cosmetic chemists. The woman who feels that she has gone stale, carrying the hod up and down the domestic ladder, cooking, taking care of children, should clip off two miles a day, rain or shine. The desk worker should get out whenever the opportunity offers itself.

Plump lassies should go at a fairly brisk canter, strolling is no good whatsoever as a scatterer of fat cells.

Activity is a law of life. Without it mental, physical and spiritual health will not be normal. Keep going. Keep on your toes. The stay-at-home is likely to think too much about herself and the slaps given her by the hand of fate.

Rhythmic Movements

When walking, the body must be carried splendidly, back bone extended, abdominal muscles held in, chest lifted. Movements should be rhythmic, somewhat like the movements of a soldier marching to the music of a band. It is a good opportunity to air-wash the lungs by breathing deeply and fully.

Walking augments the waste and repair processes of the human mechanism. It has a stimulating effect upon the blood streams and the digestive motors. Respiratory action is doublede, which means that the complexion takes on good coloring.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Eye-Opener on Neck Care

Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

When applying the fragrant cream to your complexion, do not forget that necks are up to their necks in trouble most of the time. In the summer season they burn and take on freckles, the sunburn leaving a horrid V on the chest. This lasts for months before it does a fade-away. In the winter they are frictioned by scarves and fur collars that don't go often enough to the dry cleaner; the flesh becomes rough and discolored. Old Pappy Time claws them into fiddle strings. He etches necklace lines around them.

Because a neck can fail one utterly, almost over night, and behave in a manner that is maddening, we must urge the members of this beauty class to be neckwise as well as complexion-wise. Care in the twenties and thirties will prevent ugly lines in the forties. Of course, the sad truth is that necks are beggers at the cosmetic feast, don't get a single crumb of comfort.

How carefully and diligently is the feminine face creamed and fussed with every night before the sand man comes! Add three small minutes for the preservation of the pillar that supports your noble head. You will be rewarded.

If you feel that your favorite cream is too sacred and expensive for neck care—and one should conserve cosmetics these days—try toilet lanoline as a means of keeping your neck in perfect condition. There is everything in its favor. It disappears quickly; it has a tonic effect on tissues; it makes the skin smooth. You can leave it on over night without fear of soiling the bed linens. Your druggist will supply you with it.

Spread it on with your fingertips. working upward from the collar bones to the chin, from collar bones to ear lobes. Work it into the tissues just in front of the ears; it is there, quite often, that the first of Time's cruel markings appear. Don't overlook the back of the neck, which seldom carries as fair a color as the throat.

If you suspect that fiddle strings are on the way, place a cold, moist compress on the throat, covering it with a dry towel. The purpose of the compress is to stir up circulation, make the flesh firmer. In the morning, dash cold water on face and neck; we take it for granted you have had your soapy face washing the night before.

When buying scarves, get those of satin finish. Coarse silk ones will cause roughness of the flesh. Also, unless they are cleaned frequently, they will produce blackheads along the nape line. From little blackheads, great big nasty pimples grow. That ought to scare you.

The Marry-Go-Round

"Don't you think that women were more attractive when they were more clinging and appealing and less efficient" asked an observant woman, as we watched two upstanding young war-workers striding down the street in slacks.

"No," I answered without hesitation, "The modern girl must be a great relief to the male sex after the super-emotionalism of her mother. In the old days a woman was always doing something to startle a man, just in order to attract his attention and keep his love from going into a state of coma.

Today's super-girl may not be so "appealing" but she is very much more interesting, more reasonable and sometimes easier to look at and live with. She has discovered that emotions in a woman are always either a nuisance or a bore to a man—and that is the hardest lesson that women ever had to learn.

The modern girl may not have the soft clinging, coquettish ways that caught a man's heart and wound themselves around it, but neither has she the stranglehold around his neck that sometimes croked heart out of him. She may not flatter his masculine masterfulness or appeal to his protective instinct by shedding tears on his coat-lapel, but neither does she steep him in brine nor send his love to a watery grave.

These days a girl seldom sobs, blushes or swoons unless she is a Sinatra fan. She is usually as cool and sweet as ice-cream. Her temperamentalism has been extracted with her tonsils and her sensitiveness and emotionalism have been banted off with her hips.

The men who spent their days coddling and petting and waiting on the old-fashioned girl— and their nights wondering why God made her so inconsistent—must find the new style girl refreshing.

If the old-fashioned girl was sentimental and sensitive, it bored them to tears. If she was jealous, it drove them into some other woman's arms; if she was depressed and down-hearted, it drove them to drink. If she was excited and jubilant, they call it "hysteria" and if she was aggrieved or indignant or impatient, they called it "nagging".

But men have none of these things on today's girl. She just hides her emotions and laughs them off. Yet, inside, she is just as "soft-boiled" as ever. Emotions and sentiment are as much a part of any woman as are hips, vanity and intuition.

The difference is just that the girl of today faces life bravely and knows how to take it on the chin. Otherwise how could she go on working so courageously when her thoughts and her heart are always with the Boy in Normandie or Italy or the Pacific?

Lough; Selections from Peer Gynt Suite No. 1 by Grieg.

This program was arranged by Miss Margaret Houston who gave an interesting commentary on the various numbers. Following the program refreshments were served and requested selections were played.

Saturday the big weekly dance was held at the Armouries, with a large number attending. Miss Ethel Smith added to the enjoyment of those present by singing several numbers.

Sunday afternoon approximately 54 picnic enthusiasts travelled to Consecon. Sing-songs, volleyball, baseball, horse-shoes and swimming gave all a hearty appetite for the picnic lunches provided by the hostesses. Various games including bridge and chess were played when the group returned to the Y.

Mr. McKeig wishes to thank the following hostesses who extended hospitality to servicemen this week-end:

INFLATION IS POISON

Canada has held off inflation so far and other countries admire us for it. But if you and I and our friends stop giving the Prices Board our support, the whole ceiling may still crack and then we'll all learn what hardship and deprivation really is!

Field Marshal Model Transferred To Western Front

By JON KIMCHE
(Reuter Military Commentator)

London, Sept. 11 —(CP Reuter) —The reported transfer of Field Marshal Model from the Russian front to the west wall armies means there will be no radical change from the strategy of defence, as practised by Field Marshal von Kluge. The appointment has also considerable political interest.

Kluge was safe as a political general. He was deeply compromised by Nazi terror in Russia; he was unlikely to play an independent role in the west and surrender precipitately. Model had taken the place of Von Mannstein as premier general in the east.

Yet at this critical moment on that front he has to make way for a comparative newcomer, Gen. Schoerner, and take over an army in retreat, a plan in dissolution and a Reich frontier faced with imminent invasion.

The German High Command must have been driven by a compelling pressure to take so drastic a step out of accord with its customary conservative treatment of army commands. It would seem Model's political loyalty to the Fuehrer was a deciding factor.

Plan Still Holds Sway.

From this change-over additional considerations emerge. The Rundstedt-Rommel-Kluge plan which has been so consistantly fatal to the Germans in Normandy still holds sway under Model. The same considerations which compelled Rundstedt and later Kluge to mass their available strength far forward with no reserves behind also are directly Model's preparations for defence of the Reich.

Because the Germans feared the political consequences of a break into the heart of France—and they were right about it—they had to set aside all their best theoretical advice and rather than risk political pitfalls of an Allied penetration towards Paris they tried to avert this by faulty strategy.

The German answer to menace of resurgent Europe has been the same since D-Day. They mass forward. They try to hold Allied attacks in their early, partly-equipped, unfolding stage.

This did not come off on the beaches. It failed in Caen and later in Normandy and on the Riviera. Now German commanders are trying once more. They have formed one concentration area between Belfort and Strasbourg with Metz and Nancy as outposts.
